In pursuance of this highly original idea, he went to an uncle who was engaged in the profitable if somewhat plebeian plumbing business, and asked for a job. Secretly he hoped for a nice, clean corner in the office, where he might spend a few pleasant hours during the heat of the summer days, perfecting himself in higher mathematics by making out plumber's bills, without danger of soiling his cuffs or endangering his social standing; but in the heroism of his new resolve to labor for his living, he boldly asked for any old job.

"Sorry," said the uncle, "but I haven't anything for you"—then, dubiously, "unless you care to go out on odd jobs as helper. You don't mind a little work, I suppose."

"N-n-no," answered the youth, doubtfully, being rather uncertain about the duties and social rank of a plumber's helper. Still he decided to chance it.

"Well, come around to-morrow and we'll see about it," said the uncle, with a smile that carried a sinister suggestion.

The next morning the youth slipped quietly into the shop and hovered timidly about in the background, wondering what he might be called upon to do, yet dreading to hear his doom. Presently a large, unshaven man, with nothing between his undershirt and jumper but a pair of suspenders, started out, telling the youth to come along. The man had a fire pot in one hand, and a whole kit of tools variously disposed about his person. While doubtless very worthy, he was not the sort of person the youth would have chosen for his companion on a stroll through the business part of the city. So the youth craftily waited and gave the man time to go half-way down the block, intending to follow at a distance. But the man was in no hurry and was found lighting his pipe just outside. The youth wanted to walk ahead, or on the opposite side of the street; he even thought of sending the man on ahead in a cab, but not seeing his way clearly, he continued the promenade with his persistent companion, meanwhile keeping an eye on each side of the street, ready to bolt at the first sign of a request to carry the fire pot or the sight of a familiar face.

A few blocks further on the man hailed a car and climbed into the rear seat with all his accouterments. The youth hastened to get as far forward as possible. The man was disposed to be sociable, and immediately took exception to this arrangement. So he hissed persuasively at the back of the youth's neck across a bed of flowered hats.

Arrived at the house where a clogged kitchen sink had summoned them, the man suddenly discovered that he needed a paper of chewing tobacco and departed, leaving the youth to light the fire pot and clean out the trap. The youth took off his cuffs daintily and considered the problem, knowing nothing of the nature of a trap. Investigation disclosed a small cap at the head of a pipe that looked feasible, and he proceeded to work.

Notwithstanding its size, the cap proved wonderfully tenacious against all attempts to remove it, and the youth battered it with a monkey wrench until the adjoining two feet of lead pipe looked like a souvenir from the wrecked battleship Maine. Moreover, the racket he made brought all the feminine members of the family, including two very pretty girls, down to the kitchen to see what the trouble was. In his right mind and attired in proper raiment the youth would have been very happy to make their acquaintance, but by this time he was grimy up to the eyebrows, and their remark: "Oh, it's only the plumber," did not contribute to his peace of mind.

At this point the man reappeared and explained, from across the kitchen, that it was only necessary to twist the cap with the fingers in order to remove it, whereat the youth eyed his battered knuckles and said "Oh." This gentler treatment proved much more efficacious. The cap dropped off, immediately followed by a most appalling hiss, and a disagreeable compound of kitchen refuse in solution spilled down the youth's sleeve, but did not cool him off.

About this time the man discovered that he had not purchased the right brand of tobacco and went out again to repair his mistake, leaving the youth to clean the trap. The youth didn't chew, but he knew that tobacco didn't leave white froth on a man's mustache. The man, however, was in no hurry, and while his soldering iron was heating he made a third trip for tobacco. Whereupon the youth asked him if he imbibed tobacco from a mug, but the sarcasm didn't seem to reach him. Plainly the fellow had no sense of humor, unless it was a very subtle one, which enabled him to charge three hours' time for a 15-minute job, with a helper.

When they returned to the shop late in the afternoon, after having sparingly partaken of a free lunch to which the man insisted upon inviting him, the youth's uncle gave him a heavy sledge and set him to breaking up some old castings on the sidewalk. The sun was blazing hot and the position very much exposed to public gaze, but the youth was too far gone to protest. He toiled away fiercely, hoping to finish the job before the noise attracted a crowd, but his uncle stood in the shade of an awning and offered suggestions. In two minutes the youth's high collar had melted and slipped down the back of his neck. The sweat was running off his nose 40 drops to the minute. But try as he would his blows had no effect on the castings. He lifted the sledge high above his head for a final, superhuman effort.

"Now," said the uncle, encouragingly, "a good one."

The youth looked up to crush him with a glance, the sledge still poised in midair, and faced the swellest girl he knew at close range. He dropped the sledge and stood staring vacantly at her retreating back

"Be careful, be careful," said the uncle, "you might have hit that girl."

"I thought of that," answered the youth, hazily, "but she had already seen me."

The uncle thought the sun had affected the youth's head and sent him inside. The youth quit work that same night and spent the rest of his vacation reading novels in a window seat, propped up with pink and blue soft cushions three deep. Which o'er true tale may or may not have a moral, and is respectfully referred to the Society for the Succor of Unsuccessful College Graduates if there is such an organization, and there certainly ought to be.—N. THE GOLD STANDARD.

Bryan Declares That He Is Unalterably Opposed to It.

"IF THERE IS ANY ONE WHO BELIEVES THE GOLD STANDARD IS A GOOD THING OR THAT IT MUST BE MAINTAINED, I WARN HIM NOT TO CAST HIS VOTE FOR ME, BECAUSE I PROMISE HIM IT WILL NOT BE MAINTAINED IN THIS COUNTRY LONGER THAN I AM ABLE TO GET RID OF IT."—WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, KNOXVILLE, TENN., SEPT. 16, 1896.

"THE PARTY STANDS WHERE IT DID IN 1896 ON THE MONEY QUESTION."—WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, ZANESVILLE, OHIO, SEPT. 4, 1900.

CAMPAIGN ARGUMENTS

Which Show the Fallacy of Bryan's Free Silver Propaganda.

Dr. Everett "Why, sir, we have had in the last few days a very elaborate document by a very distinguished statesman, in which he, having been a Democrat all his life, never having thought of being anything else, takes infinite pains to prove to his countrymen that be cannot vote the Republican ticket. Did anybody ever suppose he would vote the Republican ticket? Did anybody ever imagine that Mr. Olney would vote for Mr. McKinley? No, sir. And the fact that he takes such pains to prove that he must vote the Democratic ticket shows that he feels the weakness of his own cause, because, if the Democratic ticket were fit for a Democrat to vote, Mr. Olney never would have taken such pains to prove that the Republican ticket is unfit to vote." (Applause.)

B. A. Jamison of Searsmont, Md.: "I was a regular rock-ribbed Democrat, and nothing could have induced me to leave my party except loss of confidence in its sincerity. I was a free silver Democrat in 1896, and during my canvass preached that doctrine wherever I went. I had unlimited confidence in Bryan and accepted his statements on the money question as gospel. And I continued in the faith until I read Mr. Bryan's speech of acceptance. That came as a revelation to me. His evasion of the money question was convincing to me that either he had ceased to believe in 16 to 1 or else was afraid to preach that doctrine because of the belief that it would hurt his chances of election. My confidence in him as a leader and as a sincere man was gone. I know that the same effect which was produced on me was produced on hundreds of other Democrats in Maryland. I can best convey an idea of the effect of Bryan's speech of acceptance on Maryland Democrats by likening it to the effect produced by Burchard's 'Rum, Romanism and Rebellion' utterance. Having lost all faith in Bryan and his doctrines I shall speak, work and vote for McKinley."

General Woodford: "Every prophecy of the Democrats made in 1896 has been proved false. Prices have not gone down. Labor has not been idle. It is a remarkable fact in the history of this country that whenever the Democratic party has been in power times have been bad."

Ex-Congressman Wise: "I define Bryan as a camel because he can go on forever. He doesn't need either water or food. All he wants is to talk, talk, talk, about nothing at all. In 1896 he was a dromedary with only one hump, the 16 to 1 theory; now he's a full-fledged bactrian camel with two humps—the old hump and a new anti-imperialist hump. If you don't like either of these there is about three inches of Democratic backbone between them. He says that the country was going to be crucified on a cross of gold. All I can say is that it was a delightful crucifixion."

"Four years ago a revolutionary party secured control of what was the Democratic party," he said. "Up to that time nobody had ever heard of Bryan. He sprang like a rocket from its socket, and he sprang from the free silver issue, which he sprung himself. Bryan is free silver and free silver is Bryan, and separated they are nothing. We associate Henry Clay and Daniel Webster with the country's history; we associate Billy Patterson with the man who hit him and McGinty with the bottom of the sea; and so we associate Bryan with free silver."—Ex-Congressman Wise of Virginia.

"We are confronted in this campaign with two issues, of which our opponents say one is paramount and the other is immediate. The paramount issue is militarism and imperialism and the immediate issue is free silver. They have insisted as little as possible upon the latter, and not enough to frighten the gold men away. During the past four years the Republican party has confined itself to the common sense action of putting men within reach of the dollar and making the dollar worth 100 cents in gold when they got within reach of it."—Roosevelt.

Mr. Olney does not offer any clearer or more assuring policy for the Philippines than Mr. Bryan. He neglects to support Mr. Bryan's policy, possibly for the very good reason that as compared with the declared policy of Mr McKinley it does not commend itself to the preference of the American people. He does not always agree with Mr. Bryan, as a matter of fact, for Mr. Bryan would withdraw from the Philippines and allow 'eight or ten millions of savages,' as Mr. Olney calls them, to attempt self-government under our protection, while the president is convinced that the United States government has assumed an obligation to see that stable government is established before abandoning Mr. Olney's 'savages' to the perils of internecine and ferocious war.—New York Times.

"IMPERIALISM."

We Are In the Philippine Islands Both Morally and Legally.

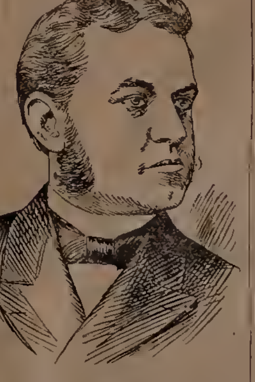
"If it is militarism to be in the Philippines, then it is militarism to be in Hawaii and Alaska. If it is militarism to put down the Tagal banditti, then it is militarism to put down an Apache outbreak. Anti-imperialism is the name by which they seek to disguise their policy of contraction. For, mind you, we have already expanded, and we are in the Philippines by the same moral and legal right that we are in New Mexico and Idaho."—Governor Roosevelt.

"The Democrats are making a great issue about imperialism and militarism. I saw in the streets today a banner with the pictures of the Democratic candidates for president and vice president, and the statement that they were for a 'free republic,' and over that admirable statement was written the word 'Tammany.'"—Senator Lodge.

"It has occurred to me that nature designed the leaders of the Democratic party for actors. In 1896 they put a play upon the boards which might well have been called 'A Comedy of Errors.' The first error was to suppose that the American people could forget the vicissitudes through which they had passed during the preceding three years, and that they did not know the cause of these troubles. The next error presented was their belief that our people were not in favor of a sound financial policy. Those leaders are now ashamed of their performances in 1896 and seek to have them forgotten. This season they have put a new play upon the boards, and it ought to bear the good old title, 'Much Ado About Nothing.' They call it 'Imperialism.'"—Governor Nash of Ohio.

"It only remains now for Bryan and Tammany hall to take possession of the government and the United States will have an imperialism that will surpass the wildest nightmare visions of Messrs. Schurz and Boutwell."—Cornelius N Bliss.

"Imperialism and expansion mean for you, my fellow-citizens of this Mahoning Valley, new markets for the products of this industrial center. The pacification of the Philippines gives a market of 10,000,000 of people. It will grow every year as they come into more civilized conditions and their wants increase. Our port at Manila is nearer by hundreds of miles than any European country to the coast of Asia, where reside two-thirds of the inhabitants of the globe. China is about as large as the United States and has 400,000,000 people. They are an industrious, sober, producing class. There are nearly 400 miles of railroad in China, while there are one hundred and eighty odd thousand miles in the United States. In the next 20 years China will be gridironed with railroads. The rails and spikes, the fish plates, the locomotives, the electric cars, the wire, must all be brought from abroad. To retire from a situation like that within ourselves, as Colonel Bryan proposes, would be to build a wall within which American industry and industrial workers would suffocate and starve."—Senator Depew.



LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR BATES.

THINK OF THIS!

From Senator Stewart's Letter Declaring In Favor of McKinley.

"Mr. Bryan says that as soon as he is elected he is going to call congress together and have all our soldiers now in the Philippine archipelago brought home and then he is going to let Aguinaldo and Agoncillo form a stable government. And yet in another speech he says that the only reason we ought not to have anything to do with them is that they are entirely unfit for self-government, and he is going to let them establish a stable government, then he is going to establish a protectorate over them.

"Think of that. In the first place, a stable government for the Philippine archipelago: it is the work of years, and it is the work of the gravest instruction, not the work of the Aguinaldos, who never claimed to be anything but dictators. And then a protectorate, a protectorate for what end? Why, to protect them against the 50 insurrections which would spring up the next 90 days after they had established a stable government. There would be an insurrection in every island. We would have to protect Aguinaldo against every chief in the islands who would not want him for a dictator.

"What more? Why, we would have to protect him against Europe. Do you suppose Europe would sit quietly by and see all those various islands in insurrection, property endangered? Why, in less than 90 days the whole of Europe would step in to protect their property and the lives of their citizens, or would go there on a pretense of doing so. Then they would seize on this archipelago and divide it up among them. Very likely they would war over the spoils. Is not that a sensible proposition? What a miserable set of cowards and sneaks the American people would appear to be in the eyes of the whole world if today, under threats of Aguinaldo and his people, with the sympathies of the Democratic party, they should take down the American flag and order the troops home?"

Nerve Food

If you have neuralgia, Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil will feed the nerve that is crying for food—it is hungry—and set your whole body going again, in a way to satisfy nerve and brain from your usual food.

That is cure.

If you are nervous and irritable, you may only need more fat to cushion your nerves—you are probably thin—and Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil will give you the fat, to begin with.

Cure, so far as it goes. Full cure is getting the fat, you need from usual food, and Scott's Emulsion will help you to that.

FROZEN DESSERTS.

Three Dishes That Will Be Appreciated by the Guest in Warm Weather.

For hickory nut ice cream make a boiled custard of one pint of milk, 1¾ cupfuls of sugar, four eggs and one-third of a teaspoonful of salt. When it is cold add one quart of cream and two cupfuls of hickory nut meats that have been powdered fine in a mortar, then freeze, says the New York Tribune.

Coffee ice cream frozen in a cylindrical mold, with the center filled with lemon ice, is an attractive and delicious dessert. For the ice cream mix two tablespoonfuls of arrowroot with half a cupful of cold milk. Beat four eggs well and mix with it. Then beat one pint of milk and pour over the mixture and add four cupfuls of white sugar. When it is cool add two quarts of cream. Put it into the freezer, and when it is partly frozen turn in two cupfuls of strong coffee and freeze thoroughly. Pack it in a cylindrical mold.

For the lemon ice mix together the juice of six lemons, two cupfuls of sugar and three cupfuls of water. Strain and turn it into the freezer. When the ice and salt are packed add to it two cupfuls of sweet milk and freeze at once. Fill it into the center of the coffee ice cream.

Maple mousse is easily and quickly made. Put one pint of maple sirup into a saucepan with the yolks of eight eggs. Stir over the fire until the sirup thickens, then remove at once and stir until it is cold. Fold into it one quart of whipped cream and pack in a mold in ice and salt for five hours.

For Piazza Visitors.

A suitable refreshment to offer to the visitors who are glad to rest on the piazza from the journey out of town is iced tea or lemonade or a saucer of strawberries. If you provide strawberries, remember to leave the hulls on. It is considered desirable to serve them that way, because it indicates that the fruit has not received any unnecessary handling. Use the hull of the strawberry as a little handle by which to lift it from the saucer and dip it in the pile of soft white sugar heaped in one corner of the plate. Use the pulverized fruit sugar, a mere powder, for the strawberries. Have a plate of lady fingers or rice flour plunkets ready to offer with the fruit.—Detroit Free Press.

French Hash.

Two cupfuls of milk, one cupful of soup stock, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, two tablespoonfuls butter, one quart meat, two tablespoonfuls of flour, three eggs, one teaspoonful salt, a dash of pepper; melt the butter without browning it, add the flour, stir until it thickens, add the chopped meat, either chicken or lamb, take from the fire, heat the eggs lightly and add last; grease a baking dish, turn it in and bake an hour.—People's Home Journal.

MAX O'RELL'S MAXIMS.

[Especially for Married Men.]

Mutual confidence and "Liberty Hal" should be the motto of matrimony.

If your wife loses her temper, keep cool as a cucumber and enjoy the scene. The effect will be marvelous and instantaneous.

Never interfere with the liberty and independence of your wife, and never allow her to interfere with yours. Let her correspondence be sacred to you as yours to her.

I say let your wife show and prove she loves you, but never let her tell it you. On the contrary, tell her all day long, if you choose; she will never tire of hearing you telling her.

Never do unto your wife what, as a gentleman you would never think of doing to any lady of your acquaintance, such as to enter a room before her, meet her in the street without taking off your hat, etc.

Quarrel with your wife, but never bore her. Never fidget, never fuss and never sulk. If she is late keeping an appointment, don't scold, don't make yourself unpleasant. Tell her it's much better to have her late than not at all. Next time go without her. The cure is infallible.

Whenever you do your wife a favor, make her a present, etc., never remind her of it. Gratitude like love, is not to be had for the asking. What a woman admires most in a man is generosity, and to remind anyone of a favor is not generous. It looks like asking to be paid for a service.

If you are of a jealous disposition take all the precautions in the world that your wife may not see it, for it will make her so proud that she may give you serious reasons for indulging in it. If you are suspicious, be a diplomatist and hide it from her, for if she does not deserve your suspicion she will naturally resent it, and if she does, it will only make a hypocrite of her.

Never appear to be idle in your house, in the morning especially. If you have nothing to do, go to your study, your library or any other "growlery:" inform your wife that you have to be very busy all the morning and "will she be kind enough to see that you are not disturbed?" Then lock the door, light a cigar and take a paper or a book and be fearfully busy all the time. Your wife, being busy herself all the morning giving orders and preparing the programme of the day, will be grateful to you for being out of the way and think all the more of you for being so busy.—San Francisco Examiner.

Corn Pudding.

To a pint of corn pulp add a pint of milk, stir in the well-beaten yolks of four eggs, a teaspoonful of salt, pepper to taste. Mix thoroughly, lastly add the stiffened whites and bake in a moderate oven in a greased dish for one hour. A delicious accompaniment to roast meat.—Washington Star.

A new remedy for biliousness is now on sale at Mason's drug store. It is called Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. It gives quick relief and will prevent the attack if given as soon as the first indication of the disease appears. Price 25c. per box; samples free.

At the meeting of the Boston West Baptist association in Newton on Wednesday the church in Franklin was one of the five churches reporting the largest number of accessions and baptisms. Rev. F. B. Sleeper was chairman of the committee on resolutions.

Henry T. Bailey, agent of the state board of education, will lecture in the high school building Tuesday evening, Oct. 23, at 7 45, on the need of manual training in the small towns. The public is cordially invited to attend and take part in discussion at the close of the address.

If you want to laugh loud and long go to the Opera house Monday night and smile at "What Happened to Brown." This comedy embodies a cyclone of laughter, a coterie of clever comedians, dashing soubrettes, nimble dancers and superb instrumental harmony by a quartette of finished musicians.

Dr. Hodge begins on Sunday afternoon a series of vesper subjects connected with the religious movements of the nineteenth century. It will be timely and interesting to review its religious tendencies, its gain and losses, and the directions in which religious thought and experience have moved. His first topic is "A Hundred Years Ago."

A. M. Thayer's benefactions run in diverse though none the less pleasing channels. He has donated some new furnishings to the reception room of the Masonic hall, and also offers to set out and maintain an ornamental flower bed in the High school lawn if the committee will remove the fence. It does seem as if the fence should be removed, as few lawns are trampled upon when bordered by concrete and curbing. Try it, Messrs. Committee.

For laughing purposes only the Church Comedy Co. will provide a continuous laugh entertainment at the Opera house Monday night. "What Happened to Brown" is most vividly portrayed by one of the cleverest farce comedy companies on the road. Funny comedians, sprightly soubrettes, grand vocalists, graceful and eccentric dancers, side splitting climaxes and, paramount to all, a superb orchestration by a quartette of superior musicians, comprises a combination and centralization of attractions without rivalry.

The jury in the Mancy M. Daniels damage case awarded the claimants $1,385 for damages and $2,000 to Mrs. Daniels. They were out from 3 Wednesday afternoon till 11 Thursday morning, finally agreeing upon a verdict. Walter Cook, one of the jurors, spoke of the gentlemen as being very fair minded men, with whom it was a pleasure to serve. It was a case full of legal niceties and a difficult one to settle satisfactorily. The judge complimented them after the verdict. The impression seemed to be that each side was somewhat to blame for the accident.

Next Sunday morning at the Methodist church the pastor, Rev S. A. Cook, will begin a series of sermons on "The Higher Christian Life." The several subjects will be: 1, "The Obligation and Privilege of Spiritual Holiness;" 2, "The Meaning and purpose of Sanctification;" 3, "The Sanctification of the Nature;" 4, "The Life in Holiness." Special attention will be given to that which is vital in the highest order of Christian life and experience.

How pleasant it would be if we could speak of our park as does Uxbridge: "One of the prettiest places in town and perhaps one of the least appreciated is the park on Church street. Few towns of this size have parks to equal this one, and no where can one be found that is kept in better shape. The trees are trimmed and the grass mowed regularly, in fact no private grounds are better looked after than this park. During the hot days recently when the evening were so awfully hot, the park was an ideal place to sit in. It was cool and quiet, but strange to say very few availed themselves of the rest and comfort it offered. The park is certainly a thing of beauty and a big addition to the village."

A Pleasing Success.

Browning's charming conceit, "The Pied Piper of Hamelin," was presented by local talent at the Opera house last evening, to an enthusiastic audience who thoroughly enjoyed the pleasing music, the bright pictures and the clever work of the principals.

The star parts were taken by Messrs. Hosford, Leach, Desmond and Miss Adams, and they handled their parts with discretion and power. The children made excellent rats, and seemed to enjoy it fully as much as the audience

The medley dance by eight little boys and eight girls was one of the prettiest bits of the play and evoked much applause They were Ralph Tracy and Pearl Fairfield, John Cunningham and Flora Clark, Dana Searle and Helen Buck, Jeremiah McCarthy and Olive Coleman, Bertram Copeland and Edna Jewett, Clarence Dean and Annie Nixon, Roy Conway and Marie Perron, Percy Fairfield and Harriet Whipple.

Nine little girls, Harriet Whipple, Ethel Avery, Lulu Dunbar, Flora Clark, Olive Coleman, Grace Griffin, Pearl Fairfield and Annie Nixon, sang a darky song nicely, and J. Ray Wyckoff rendered a song very acceptably, being obliged to respond to an encore. Miss Grace Adams was similarly honored. John Cosseboom delighted the audience with his club swinging, which was remarkably good, and Mr. Leach sang a solo with sweetness and expression. The orchestra was especially fine, being composed of ten members under the direction of H. A. Cobb. The choruses were unusually strong.

The entertainment will be repeated this evening and Saturday afternoon, and should be greeted with large audiences. The proceeds are to be devoted to the Y. P. C. U. of the Universalist church.

The cast is as follows:

Pied Piper	J. R. Hosford
Mayor	J. S. Leach
Clerk	Will Elkerton
First Councilman	Wallace Elkerton
Schoolmaster	James Desmond
Hans	Master Chas. McKinnon
Lame Boy	Master Dana Searle

Alden Club Meeting.

The Alden club opened its eighth season last Monday evening. There were one hundred ladies present. Mrs Margaret L. Ray, the president, brought greetings from the executive board as well as her own greetings to all members of the club and visitors. There were ladies present from Colorado and California.

Miss Estelle Stewart, chairman of the flower committee, reported that an average of two baskets of flowers a week were sent to Boston and were much appreciated by the poor children.

Miss Addie Winsor read a very interesting report of the State Federation.

Mrs. Margaret L. Ray gave a bright and spicy report of the National Biennial Federation, in which she told that a spirited discussion on the reconstruction of the per capita tax lasted two days, during which the women from the south and west showed a wonderful knowledge of parliamentary law.

After a duet by Miss Myrtie Whiting and Mrs. Leslie Stewart, the social committee served refreshments.

The club calendars were distributed, and they show a good programme for the coming season. S.

"The New Franklin."

At the union temperance meeting last Sunday evening at the Universalist church Rev. Dr. Sneath took charge of the meeting, Rev. Mr Cook read the scriptures and Rev. Mr. Sleeper made the prayer. Dr. Hodge made a stirring address, which many of his audience thought it a pity they could not be permitted to frequently applaud. Dr. Hodge said in part:

"We are confronting new conditions of life in Franklin. We have these electric railways connecting us with neighboring towns, bringing, as our tradesmen hope, increased trade to Franklin; affording, now that the bicycle, they say, is going out of fashion, opportunities for pleasure seeking; bringing toughs and idlers and drunken men, among others, into town, and making it easy for our own vicious ones to get to the saloons of liquor selling towns. The quiet and simplicity which were the charm of Franklin are gone and gone forever. Another change we are deeply conscious of is that the men who have made Franklin are passing from among us" Dr. Hodge mentioned appreciatively James P. Ray, Francis B Ray, James M. Freeman, William F. Ray, William M. Thayer, Emory Thayer, A. H. Morse, Joseph G. Ray and Charles J. McKenzie, and said these and others we have lost in recent years are the men who have made Franklin. They have built up the business interests of Franklin. They have erected its best buildings. They have put themselves into the industrial, social, political, religious and moral life of the community. We must face the new conditions. How shall we meet them?

"In the first place," Dr. Hodge said, "we must close up the ranks. We must take up the work these men have been carrying on in behalf of a clean, orderly and progressive community. Younger men must realize their responsibility and come to the front. 'God's workmen die, but his work goes on,' and the men who are left must carry it on. I find that there are some who say that now that it is so easy for men to get their strong drink in neighboring towns, we might as well have license here. That is the way in which some men are disposed to meet the new conditions now existing. I think we may divide the people of every community into three classes, so far as their relation to the liquor traffic is concerned. There are those who are all the time against the saloon. You know where to find us; it is a matter of principle with us. I cannot think of any possible condition of things which would make me any less opposed to the saloon. We cannot and dare not sanction it. We want no part nor lot in it in any way. We dare not be responsible for putting temptation in the way of men. There is another class you know where to find—namely, on the wrong side. Men without elevation of character, men who do not care what becomes of men, men who have no clear conception of the evils of drunkenness; these are in favor of license. There is a third something—a class of people who sometimes vote against the saloon, but not as a matter of principle. It is not very respectable to side with the saloon, and I am glad it is not respectable. Men know well that if they favor the saloon they forfeit the respect and sympathy of the best people in the community, and I am glad it is so. From these causes men not as a matter of principle opposed to the saloon sometimes vote no license. But these people are always finding excuses for getting over on the other side. If the law is not properly enforced the cry is, 'We might as well have license' If they suspect liquor is being sold privately or being smuggled into town, we hear again, 'We might as well have license.' If men go to Woonsocket and get drunk, 'We might as well have license,' again they say. If money is spent out of town, we hear it again, 'We must have license.' Let us look at these propositions a little.

"First, as regards the non-enforcement of law The law of course ought to be enforced. If it is not properly enforced we must find out exactly where the trouble is; we must know who is responsible and not permit ourselves to be deceived about it. If we have any town officers not in sympathy with the enforcement of the law, put them out. No matter who they are and whatever other qualifications they may have, out with them. We don't want any such men in office in Franklin. No man in sympathy, secretly or otherwise, with the liquor traffic is fit to hold office in Franklin or anywhere else. Fight such men in the caucus, at the polls—every time. We must stand together and do this if we want a decent town.

"But with officers in sympathy with the law, with all due diligence, it is difficult to enforce the law against the private sale of liquor. Why? Because it is private. There are offences that are secret. You may be so certain that a man is violating the law that you despise him. It is safe to despise any man who is not above suspicion in this matter. You may be so sure that you would not associate with a man. But the law requires positive proof. That cannot convict upon suspicion. It cannot regard character, except as it may influence the credibility of other evidence. It presumes innocence. It gives the accused the benefit of all doubt. So it is often impossible to convict in cases where we are sure liquor is being sold. But does that make it advisable to license? It is a curious reasoning that leads to such a conclusion. Law cannot prohibit any crime. Murder and larceny and burglary are committed in spite of law and officers and courts. Law should make it difficult to do wrong and easy to do right. That is the function of law. It must make wrong-doing, so far as possible, troublesome to the doer of it. A no license vote does not and cannot make the sale of liquor impossible; it can only make it difficult. But there is a vast difference between the private, guilty, law breaking sale of liquor and the temptations opened along public streets by the open saloon. The main ground of our opposition to the saloon is that it puts temptation in the way of the young, the weak, the foolish. We cannot absolutely prevent a man from drinking by any law. That belongs to the sphere of morality, not that of law. If a man is determined to drink you cannot stop him. If a man is bound to go to the devil he will. It is an easy road, down hill all the way. But you can keep temptation in a great measure out of the way. There has never been a time when a man living in Franklin could not go to Boston or Providence and get all the liquor he was able and willing to pay for. Now he can go to Woonsocket at small expense and get it. But the real situation is not altered by that fact, except in degree. It is better to have temptation twenty seven miles away than to have it at hand. Is it not better to have it nine miles away, than to have it all along these streets? Not one single objection is removed by the nearer approach of the temptation—not one. The plea that it is is not a reasonable plea. It is only the excuse of people who want an excuse to get on the wrong side in the conflict. An electric railway does not change wrong into right nor evil into good.

If liquor is sold here secretly, that is no reason why it should be sold openly. Such nonsense makes me weary. To stop the use of liquor:—that is something moral influence, sound instruction, elevation of life and character must accomplish To remove temptation so far and so much as possible,—that comes within the province of law. I see no need of getting into any mental confusion on this point whatever, if you have any brains at all. If you have the saloon in Franklin every man who goes along your streets and is weak enough to be tempted is tempted every day. If he has to go to Medway, or Woonsocket, to be tempted, the temptation is more distant and less frequent. Isn't that very simple sense? Every saloon is a centre of idleness, vulgarity, drunkenness, moral corruption. As a citizen of Franklin, I prefer to have such centres in Medway, or Woonsocket, to having them in Franklin. I am sorry they are there, but I am not responsible for it.

Another silly plea has been that money is spent in surrounding towns that ought to be spent here. It has been claimed that people will go to Woonsocket to trade because they can get liquor there. Let us look at that proposition. In the first place, this is low ground. It leaves out all moral consideration. But I am willing to meet anybody on that ground even. How many people do you think really go to Woonsocket to trade because they can get drink there, or get liquor there? There may be twenty perhaps, but I doubt it. Suppose there are fifty, though I don't believe any such thing. Do you know of one such? I don't. But supposing there are fifty. In the first place these fifty people, are those, are they not, whose trade is least desirable.

If they get credit it is among these, is it not, that you find the bad debts, and unpaid bills? He who goes to another town because he can get liquor there, will have less to spend for everything else beside liquor, will he not? But have you ever thought of the other side of this question; of the increased poverty, the diminished industry, the decreased purchasing capacity consequent upon the open saloon? Why, the testimony is uniform in those towns which have tried license, and no-license. The universal testimony is that the open saloon decreases industry. There is less money earned to begin with. Of this, the larger part in many families goes to the liquor seller. There is more poverty, more pauperism, more crime, less money. The very worst thing for the business men of this community that could happen would be the opening of the saloon here. That is a thing proven so many times that it ought not to be a question in the mind of anybody here whether we could afford to have the saloon. Even on the lowest possible ground, the mercenary ground, Franklin could not afford it. Leaving all moral considerations out of the question, it would be the very worst thing for Franklin that could be proposed.

I want to see this town a healthful town. I want to see our sewerage extended and the low ground about us drained or filled in. I want to see this a beautiful town. Our town hall could very possibly be improved upon. I want to see a handsome public library building. I want to see federation among the churches. I want to see increased intelligence. I want to see peace and order, progress and prosperity. But the saloon is antagonistic to all these, to all that can make life here happier and more successful.

Representatives Nominated.

At the tenth Norfolk district Republican convention, held here in Music hall this afternoon, A. F. Bemis of Foxboro and Geo. W. Bullard of Medway were nominated.

Morse Opera House.

Next Monday evening the Church Comedy Co. offer from their repertoire of funny farce comedies "What Happened to Brown." It is a series of continuous laughs from start to finish and introduces numerous clever specialties. A superb concert orchestra is one of the strong features.

Legal Qualifications of a Voter.

If you desire to vote at the coming election, there are a few things you must conform to:

1. You must not be under the age of twenty-one years.
2. You must have resided in the state at least one year previous to an election.
3 You must have resided in this town at least six months previous to an election.
4 You must be able to read the constitution in the English language and write your name.

No person of foreign birth is entitled to vote unless he or she has been legally naturalized and produces the certificate of naturalization when registered.

If any alien is under twenty one years of age when the father is naturalized, they are naturalized thereby and may be registered, if otherwise qualified, if they present the father's papers.

Any citizen attaining the age of twenty-one years at any time previous to an election, and otherwise qualified, may be registered.

Women of foreign birth whose husbands were born in this country are naturalized thereby and can register, if otherwise qualified.

There has been a little controversy existing in town the past week between two representatives of sunny Italy, and all on account of a cow. Both had laid by a little money each week from their earnings, and putting their heads together they arrived at the conclusion that the money could be best invested in a cow, with the understanding that each should own half the cow, and therein lies all the trouble. When the cow was milked both claimed the milk, putting forth as a reason that they owned half the cow. Friends of both parties are trying to settle the matter amicably by dividing the milk instead of the animal.

The Woonsocket Opera House.

"The County Fair" which is this season being presented with Neil Burgess himself in his original creation of Abigail Prue, serves as an excellent background for the display of Mr. Burgess' peculiar comedy talents and numerous bits are scattered throughout it that are admirably and genuinely humorous. His garrulous, good hearted and unsophiscated old maid of New England is a distinct characterization, perfect in development and complete in detail. Extremely funny, but always avoiding any suggestion of vulgarity, he keeps his audiences laughing continually. Neil Burgess and the "County Fair" will be here Wednesday, Oct. 17. Seats on sale Monday.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1900.

GET out the local Republican vote. The rest will take care of itself.

CRANE AND BATES—you cannot buy a better team in the market. It pulls even, steady and true. Better keep it another year. Vote for them next November.

BRYAN is shocked that the Filipinos are not at once admitted to full citizenship. But he and his admirers deliberately disqualify thousands of negro voters in the south and claim that it is all right.

VOTE carefully. See that you vote the right names—those marked "Republican"—and be very sure that you vote for the Republican nominees for congress. We not only want the right man at the head of the administration, but we want his hand upheld by congressmen of the same kind.

EVEN Josiah Quincy praises the course of President McKinley in China. Now is it not reasonable and sensible that President McKinley has acted just as wisely, honestly and patriotically, if all the truth was known, with reference to the Philippines as to China? He is the same man with the same head, the same heart and the same advisers. He has acted wisely and patriotically not only in China but in the Philippines.

THERE is not an "imperialist" in all the United States—not in the sense used by the orators who affirm that we want to "subject" any people and rule them as slaves against their will. There is not a citizen who does not desire for every person under the flag every privilege he himself possesses just as soon as he is fit to cast an honest and intelligent vote. There is no more danger of "empire" in this Union than of another slaveholders' rebellion—not one bit of it.

IT is said that a railroad switchman is going to vote for Bryan because the McKinley administration has so increased the business over his road that it keeps him busy all the time to switch his trains, while under Cleveland he had most of his time for "loafing." But the other employes of that road, with steady employment instead of idle hours, will vote for the party whose administration gives them steady work and good wages—and that is the Republican party.

POLITICS is really a practical, common-sense matter. Treat it in that way. There are certain men you would sooner trust in business matters than you would others. Now put your trust in the same men in political matters and you will almost invariably vote the Republican ticket. It is as true as daylight. The political principles that you really expect to be of practical value because they will be carried out in a practical manner are those of the Republican party. Democratic platforms, built to catch votes, may attract you sometimes, but look behind the platforms to the men who build them and who are to put them into effect if elected. Do this and you will vote the Republican ticket.

THE friends of sound money should cast a solid vote against Bryan for the very reason that he is openly and avowedly for free silver just as thoroughly and earnestly now as in 1896. He does not make it so prominent, but he worships it just the same. And if chosen president he will do an enormous amount of injury to the business interests of the country by causing uncertainty and uneasiness among business men. It may be all wrong, but men will not invest their money, and thus help business and give work to workingmen besides themselves, unless they are reasonably sure of certain and fair returns on their investments. Democratic administrations invariably bring poor business. Vote against them.

TRUSTS have no more choice of political parties than do the liquor saloons. They always aim to get all they can. They are no more Republican of origin and propagation than they are Democratic. They are found as numerously in Europe as in America. Do not let the Bryan declarations make you believe there would be any fewer or less objectionable trusts with him as president than with McKinley in the presidential chair. Trusts sprout, flourish and grow fat just as much under a Democratic as Republican regime. The Republican party will do more than the Democratic to prevent injurious combinations of capital against the interests of the masses. You can depend on that. But there are good trusts as well as bad trusts.

All except bad ones!

There are hundreds of cough medicines which relieve coughs, all coughs, except bad ones! The medicine which has been curing the worst of bad coughs for 60 years is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Here is evidence:

"My wife was troubled with a deep-seated cough on her lungs for three years. One day I thought of how Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved the life of my sister after the doctors had all given her up to die. So I purchased two bottles, and it cured my wife completely. It took only one bottle to cure my sister. So you see that three bottles (one dollar each) saved two lives. We all send you our heart felt thanks for what you have done for us."—J. H. BURGE, Macon, Col., Jan. 13, 1899.

Now, for the first time you can get a trial bottle of Cherry Pectoral for 25 cents. Ask your druggist.

THE CONTAGION OF FAITH.

Why a Man's Belief or Disbelief Is a Vital Concern to Himself and Others.

There are two spirits in every man and these spirits are contending together for the mastery. In all our relations, says the New York Outlook, we make one choice as to whether we shall evoke the best or the worst in those whom we meet, whether we shall liberate the best that is in them or invigorate the worst. There are men who go through life and do no evil so far as action is concerned, but who blight everything fine and fair which comes in their way, by the chilling breath of skepticism; there are others who have a genius for calling out the best. It was impossible not to believe in the nobility and dignity of life when one listened to Phillips Brooks, his atmosphere made skepticism incredible. When Hume declared that he believed in immortality whenever he remembered his mother, he was bearing testimony to the almost divine influence which women of the highest type always exert, and which they often exert in entire unconsciousness. What a man believes or what he disbelieves is a vital matter, not only for himself, but for others. Let him believe in the best, and, however faint faults and imperfections be may, there will be in his own nature a slow but tidal movement toward goodness and he will make the attainment of virtue easier for all who know him. Let a man disbelieve in the possibility of purity, integrity and unselfishness and, although he may have great ability and many attractive qualities, he will smirch the society through which he passes and leave a blackened trail behind him. When a man comes to look back on his own life, he must bless or [illegible] may be the discernment that for the first time that he has helped instead of hindered, and he must [illegible] punishment may be the [illegible] [illegible] the first time [illegible] he has given [illegible] [illegible] to the [illegible] of [illegible] integration and spiritual decline in those about him.

Hopelessness of Self-Reliance.

"Unless above himself he can erect himself, how mean a thing is man!" So says Wordsworth. Unless beyond himself there is help for a sinful man how hopeless is the outlook! Whoever has honestly tried the moral problem of self-conquest, who has not longed for the Mighty One, the Savior? It is said that when Dr. Darwin, of Derby, one of the most noted English physicians, was succumbing to a fatal disease he went from one to the other [illegible] and had reached the highest [illegible] [illegible] this [illegible] trouble he got for a reply: "There is no man who can save you [illegible] an English physician, Dr. Darwin, of Derby." "Alas!" was the reply, "I am Dr. Darwin of Derby." "O wretched man! * * who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" "Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."—S. S. Times.

The Poet.

"Sir," said the long haired one, indignantly, to the editor, "the poet is born."

It Ought to Be.

"What are your grounds for this breach of promise suit?" asked the lawyer, cheerfully. "Of course you were engaged; that is to say, he asked you to marry him, and you accepted?"

Sometimes He Does.

"Do you ever wish you had chosen some other calling?" asked the lawyer.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

Scrofula

This root of many evils—

Tumors, abscesses, cutaneous eruptions, dyspepsia, readiness to catch cold and inability to get rid of it easily, catarrh, and other ailments including the consumptive tendency—

Is removed by Hood's Sarsaparilla so completely that a radical and permanent cure is effected.

This statement is proved by thousands of voluntary testimonials. SILAS VERNOOY, Wawarsing, N. Y., writes: "When our daughter was two years old, she broke out all over her face and head with scrofula sores. Nothing we did for her seemed to do her any good, and we had become almost discouraged when we thought we would try Hood's Sarsaparilla. The first bottle helped her and when she had taken six the sores were all healed and her face was smooth. She has never shown any sign of the scrofula returning."

Hood's Sarsaparilla

cleanses the system of all humors inherited or acquired and makes rich, healthy blood.

Hood's Pills cure liver ills, the non-irritating and only cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Glorious News

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile of Washita, I. T. He writes "Four bottles of Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50 cents. Sold by A. C. Mason & Co., druggists. Guaranteed.

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2 65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit. The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save. If your druggist can't supply you, it will be forwarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

Genesee Pure Food Co., Le Roy, N. Y.:

Gentlemen:—I must say in regard to GRAIN-O that there is nothing better or healthier. We have used it for years. My brother was a great coffee drinker. He was taken sick and the doctor said coffee was the cause of it and told us to use GRAIN-O. We got a package but did not like it at first, but now would not be without it. My brother has been well ever since we started to use it.

Yours truly, LILLIE SOCHOR.

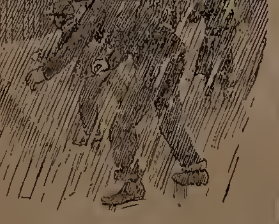
ESCAPED FROM PRISON.

A War Veteran's Story of Hard Times Getting Through the Confederate Lines.

"We all had been telling stories," said the major, relates the Chicago Inter Ocean, "except Tulley McKinney, of the Ninety-fourth Ohio. There were gathered about the breakfast table half a dozen men from the old home neighborhood who had served in as many different regiments. The ladies of the party had called out from each stories of army experience, all of which were interesting and many very exciting, but through all of the talk Tulley had said nothing, until one of the ladies asked him if he had come through the war unscathed. 'Yes,' he said, and then added in a hesitating way: 'I had my feet frozen, you know.' 'You did?' put in a young girl. 'Why, how did that happen, Mr. McKinney?' 'Well,' he said, 'after my escape from prison I was in the mountains about 40 days, and—well, the long and short of it is, I came out of the scrape with my feet frozen.'

"Having said this much, Tulley was silent again until one of the young ladies exclaimed: 'Mercy, Mr. McKinney, why don't you tell the story?' And after he had been badgered and questioned the story came out. 'I was captured at Chickamauga September 19, 1863,' he said. 'We were taken first to the Pemberton prison, near Libby, in Richmond, Va. On the 13th of November a train load of prisoners—say about 700—were transferred to Danville and quartered for the night in a tobacco warehouse near the river.



THE GUARDS WERE ONLY A FEW FEET FROM US.

"'We had not been well fed while in Richmond. Little food was given us the morning of the 13th, and none at all on the night of the 13th, and none on the 14th. We were two days without food and nearly starved. On Saturday, the 14th, a young man of company C, Thirtieth Indiana, offered to lead the prisoners in breaking through the gate. The men were desperate enough for anything, but I went to the man of the Thirtieth, who was not more than 20 years old, and urged him not to be rash, as there was a better way.

"'I took him into a stockaded or high-fenced inclosure leading down toward the river and showed him where it was possible to tear away some heavy boards and escape that way. That night there was a heavy rain and it was very dark. The guards were only a few feet from us as we went into the inclosure, but they had turned their capes up over their heads to protect them from the cold rain and were not very alert. My friend of the Thirtieth had a razor-blade knife, and, crouching in the dark near the fence, he cut and cut until a part of one of the heavy boards could be pushed outward.

"'After the board was ready to be broken off we both went back to the main floor of the prison, hoping that rations would be issued before taps. I told two or three of my friends about the scheme, and the Thirtieth Indiana man told several of his friends. There was to be no signal, no general movement, but the men were to slip out one by one quietly, and each was to act on his own responsibility. In five minutes I missed my friend and went hurriedly to the inclosure. I saw his coattail disappearing through the fence. Watching the guard until he turned his face away from the fence, I went through.

"'I came out in a cabbage patch, and my first movement was to tear off a head of cabbage and eat it. This was the first food I had had in 48 hours, and it was delicious. Then I made my way in the dark along the river bank, and when about 50 yards away I heard the sentinels call out: "Eight-thirty o'clock and all's well." I hid in the brush and on Sunday morning came across the orderly sergeant of company A, Nineteenth regulars, and the sergeant major of the Eighteenth regulars, Second battalion. They told me that 65 men had passed through the opening made by myself and the Thirtieth Indiana man.

"'The opening was not discovered until Sunday morning, when there was a great commotion in the prison, and forces were sent in every direction to recapture us. Twenty men who stopped in the night to cut loose a ferryboat to cross the Dan river were captured just before daylight Sunday morning. I was with them until I heard the roosters in a neighboring barn crow, when I left them. I advised them all [illegible], but they insisted that the only way of escape was to cross the river, and they were going to do it. Twenty minutes after I left they were all prisoners.

"'Another squad of 20 stopped the next day at the house of a man named Hoyt, who welcomed them and asked them to sit down to dinner. While they were eating the first cooked food they had had for three days the house was surrounded by confederates and they were recaptured. Of our own squad four laid in the brush all day Sunday. In the evening a young boy of 14, who was sick, went back and delivered himself up. The two regulars and myself kept together for five days, going, at my suggestion, across the mountains toward Charleston, W. Va.

"On the night of the fifth day out the regulars declared that they would not go any further in that direction, and insisted that we turn toward eastern Kentucky. I decided to keep on the West Virginia route, and we parted the next morning. The two regulars went their way, and within a few miles of the union lines in eastern Kentucky were recaptured and taken back in irons to Danville. I went on alone traveling by night in the mountains stopping in the cabins of colored people or in caves, or sleeping in the wildest and most inaccessible places. On Flat Top mountain I struck a union settlement. Before this my feet had been frozen, and I could hobble along with the greatest difficulty, and was all the time suffering with the keenest pain. I almost fell into the cabin of a negro just before reaching Flat Top. He and his wife took me in and doctored my feet.

"Then I was taken on a mule to the Flat Top settlement, where I stopped several days. Here I came in contact with a squad of confederate deserters, who were afraid to go into the union lines in the belief that they would be sent back to Richmond in exchange. This would, of course, place them in the hands of their own authorities. I slept with one or another of them each night and convinced them that this theory was wrong. In the end they went with me over the 99 miles of mountain road to Charleston, Va.

"There I was given transportation to Gallipolis, at the mouth of the Kenawha, and from there was sent down the river to Cincinnati.

After a rest I started for home, where I arrived the night before Christmas.

"Of all the 65 men who escaped from Danville that night only three reached the union lines. All the others were captured or shot.

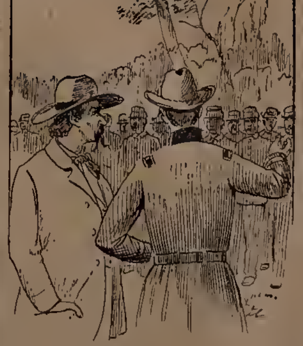
THEY GOT THE HONEY.

How Some Illinois Boys Got Away with the Sweet Plunder.

"Every man in our company had a weakness for honey," said M. J. Corkendorf, of company A, Fifty-fifth Illinois infantry, to a group of veterans at the Sherman house, according to the Chicago Tribune. "In fact," continued Mr. Corkendorf, "they loved honey to such an extent that they frequently risked their lives to procure it. We had moved down into Memphis from a position we had been holding on the outskirts of the town for several days, and on our way in we discovered a farmhouse owned by a southern gentleman who had little or no use for Lincoln's soldiers. This man was a bee fancier and had abundance of honey in his storehouse. When we learned this we went up and tried to purchase some of it. 'No, sah,' he declared, 'Lincoln's soldiers can't have any of my honey; no, sah!' Then he turned and walked away, leaving our boys standing in the road.

"Well, that night a raid was planned by the boys. They first drew lots to see who should compose the expedition. When four men had been chosen they laid their plans. First of all they were to black their faces, put on ragged clothes and then go to the farmhouse and get the honey. On their arrival they were met by a big bloodhound. A shot from one of the guns silenced the animal. Then the owner put in an appearance. He was seized and his gun taken away, placed in the center of his back, and then his hands tied behind him and over the gun. Then he was backed up to a tree and left there. The boys then got into the honey. To make matters safe they left a small kettle of it in front of Capt. Dave Stewart's tent. The next day the owner of the honey came into camp and declared that our company was nothing but a set of thieves.



COULDN'T IDENTIFY THE THIEVES.

"Capt. Stewart became very indignant and asked the man if he could identify the thieves. He replied that he could. Then the entire company had to run the 'gauntlet,' but as the men now wore blue uniforms and were not blacked up, he failed to identify them. When he left, Capt. Stewart said: 'Boys, don't let your fondness for honey get the better of you again.'"

Economy of Labor.

"Woman," he said, wearily, "has no idea of economy of labor. Of course she has a hard time in many ways, but it is largely her own fault. She likes to work."

"Why do you say that?" she demanded.

"Why, just by way of illustration, there's that curtain lecture you have given me every lodge night for over a year. Same old lecture delivered in the same old way, and still you fail to take advantage of modern inventions. Just think what a saving it would be if you used the phonograph!"—Chicago Post.

His "Sooveneer."

Pat was talking to a cigarmaker, who was saying that he supposed President McKinley had smoked some fine cigars he had made.

"Begorra," said Pat, "if yez had only known which one it was whin yez wure making it yez could have kept it as a sooveneer."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

Would Improve with Age.

"Look here, sir!" exclaimed the maiden lady, "I want you to take back that parrot you sold me. I find it swears very badly."

"Well, madam," replied the dealer "it's a very young bird; it'll learn to swear more perfectly when it's a bit older." Philadelphia Press.

Good News for Our Readers

Who have scrofula taints in their blood, and who has not? Scrofula in all its forms is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which thoroughly purifies the blood. This disease, which frequently appears in children, is greatly to be dreaded. It is most likely to affect the glands of neck, which becomes enlarged, eruptions appear on the head and face and the eyes are frequently affected. Upon its first appearance, perhaps in slight eruptions or pimples, scrofula should be entirely eradicated from the system by a thorough course of Hood's Sarsaparilla to prevent all the painful and sickening consequences of running scrofula sores, which drain the system, sap the strength and make existence utterly wretched.

What She Wanted to Know.

A young man home from college, wishing to inspire his little sister with awe for his learning, pointed to a star and said:

"Sis, do you see that bright little luminary? It's bigger than this whole world."

"No 'taint," said Sis.

"Yes, it is," declared the young collegian.

"Then why don't it keep off the rain?" was the triumphant rejoinder.—Tit-Bits.

A New Domestic Arrangement.

"How do you folks manage with the family wash, Giddings? We haven't room in our flat to hang up a clothes line."

"Oh, we hang ours in the kitchen over night."

"But do the clothes dry?"

"Yes, my wife sits up all night and fans them."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Dear Little Woman.

He—I saw that farm that was advertised and I think I'll buy it.

She—Oh! Then we'll move away from the hateful city for good?

He—Yes. It's a fine place; 14 acres and a pond on it.

She—Won't that be nice? We can raise pond lilies and watermelons in it.—Philadelphia Press.

Strategy.

"That fellow Bumbleton is a deep one."

"What has he been doing?"

"Why, he got the new boarder into a brisk controversy with the landlady over the reasons for woman's mental inferiority, and under cover of it he sneaked a second piece of huckleberry pie."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Difference.

"Some newspapers," said the man who can always see philosophy through the bottom of a glass, "are read—"

"And others," interrupted the man who seems to grow more irritable as the number of rounds increases, "are merely yellow."—Puck.

Indeed He Did.

"Work!" scornfully echoed the woman at the kitchen door, to whom he had been relating the hardships of his checkered experience. "Work! You don't know what work is!"

"You bet I do, ma'am," said Tuffold Knutt. "That's w'y I giner'ly avoid it."—Chicago Tribune.

A Life and Death Fight.

Mr. W. A. Hines of Manchester, Ia., writing of his almost miraculous escape from death, says: "Exposure after measles induced serious lung trouble, which ended in consumption. I had frequent hemorrhages and coughed night and day. All my doctors said I must soon die. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, which completely cured me. I would not be without it even if it cost me $5.00 a bottle. Hundreds have used it on my recommendation and say it never fails to cure throat, chest and lung troubles." Regular size 50c and $1.00. Conceded.

"'Mandy," said her elderly relative "that young Spoonamore hasn't a cent to his name. You would be simply crazy to marry him!"

"I am, auntie," replied Miss 'Mandy.—Chicago Tribune.

Hard Hit.

Tess—Yes, she refused him, but it almost broke her heart.

Jess—Really?

Tess—Yes, when she discoverd that it hadn't broke his.—Philadelphia Press.

He Knew the Girl.

The Father—You two had better have a quiet wedding.

The Lovers—Why?

The Father—There'll be noise enough and to spare after you're married.—Tit-Bits.

The Color Was Red.

Towne—D'Auber claims he is an impressionist; that he paints what he sees.

Browne—Ah! that's what he meant, then, when he said he was going out to see the town.—Philadelphia Press.

Father's Essay Writing.

Teacher—I am sorry to say, Henry, but your composition is not worthy of you. The rhetoric is faulty, the logic weak, the statements are based upon misinformation, and the style is lamentably crude.

Henry—My! Won't my dad be mad when I tell him that?

Teacher—But you can tell him you did your very best.

Henry—Did my best nothing. Dad wrote the whole of it himself.—Boston Transcript.

No Proof.

Policeman—Here, your honor, are the tools I found on the prisoner—a jimmy, a center-bit, a dark lantern, and a piece of lead pipe, wrapped in paper to look like a bundle of clothes.

Prisoner—Your honor, you will not let an innocent man be convicted on such flimsy evidence as that, I hope? The articles he speaks of are nothing but my bicycle lantern and repair kit.—N. Y. World.

Getting On.

"Yes, the Muckleseers are coming up fast in society."

"I haven't heard anything about their daughter marrying a nobleman and they don't seem to be entertaining any very prominent people."

"That's all true enough, but they've begun to call their summer cottage a bungalow."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Charles L. Stewart is enjoying the banquet and meeting of the Mass. C. E. union, held at the Parker House, New Bedford, today. He goes as the president of the Norfolk union.

Waldo C. Everett, a graduate of Emerson college of oratory, '00, and who is now studying at Harvard college, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Everett, on the Mount.

Percy Elkerton, son of Charles Elkerton of Cottage street, arrived in town last week from San Francisco, Cal., where he has been for some time. He will engage in the bakery business with his father.

L. C. Fletcher, who lives at No. 3 Thayer street, discovered a polecat in his cellar Sunday night, having been caught in a rat trap which Mr. Fletcher had recently set. The skunk was laid low with the aid of a club.

There was a goodly number at the Methodist church last evening to enjoy the illustrated lecture on "The Passion Play" by Mrs. Ella M. Keith. The views and subject matter proved both entertaining and instructive.

Mrs. Ida Vose Woodbury, representing the American Missionary association, spoke on Sunday evening in the First church. She presented in a most interesting manner the life of the mountain whites and the work among them.

There will be important changes in the W., A. & M. street railway, commencing next Monday. Cars for Wrentham will run only every hour and a half, instead of every half hour. We shall publish Friday and thereafter a complete schedule of the running time.

Capt. J. B. Crocker was in town from Bangor, Me., on Saturday, where he has been superintending repairs to his vessel, the Charles L. Davenport, which was partially burned last summer. The captain left Sunday night for Philadelphia and will sail from that city on Wednesday for Martinique with a cargo of coal.

A. M. Thayer does not desire to appropriate honors not belonging to him, so he requests us to say that others are interested in the gift to the Masonic lodge, W. H. Sweatt, H. T. Hayward and a gentleman who does not care to have his name known. We are pleased to give these gentlemen the credit which is clearly their due.

One of the most significant campaign stories "going" is the following: "An Irishman, when asked why it was that he intended to vote this fall for Bryan, made this reply: 'Four years ago they told me to vote for Bryan and we would have good times. I voted for him, and sure we did have good times, and now its time to vote for him again.' "

This week the Milford, Attleboro & Woonsocket cars will run onto Main street, as far as Music hall, at least, and very likely to the Town hall in Milford. This arrangement will be a great convenience to patrons of the road, who have been compelled to walk from the corner of South Main street, and it will also prove beneficial to merchants and the company.

Instead of the regular Monday evening lecture, Mr. Daniels invited the Franklin teachers to go with him to Medway to visit Mr. Mason's collection of curios and antiques. Mr. Mason is the possessor of many valuable historical documents, and he was most entertaining in his explanation of them. The teachers are indebted to Mr. Daniels for a most delightful and unique evening.

The next meeting of the mothers' section will be held on Saturday from 2 till 5 at Elm farm This is to be children's afternoon, and it is hoped all members and their children will accept Mrs. Ray's hospitable invitation to meet with her. All interested are promising themselves a rare treat. If it is pleasant a large car will leave the switch here at 1.45; if not, two closed cars will run.

The case of Charles A. McGinnis and Theodore Whorle, proprietors of the Hotel Gladstone at Medway, who have been complained against as maintaining a liquor nuisance, which was to have been heard in the district court Saturday, was continued to next Thursday. The complaint alleges a violation of the terms of the license and was made by one of Henry Faxon's law and order detectives of Quincy.

The following notice was sent in by the reporter too late for last Friday's issue: "In his lecture Monday evening at the Horace Mann building the Rev. S. A. Cook took his audience with him through many of the places of historic interest in "That Isle Which is in Itself a World," closing with contrasting descriptions of Westminster abbey and the Bank of England. The trip was greatly appreciated by his hearers."

A goodly number of the housekeepers and home-makers were in attendance at the M. E. church on Monday to listen to a very interesting food lecture given by Mrs. Ella M. Keith of Worcester. Mrs. Keith held the closest attention of her audience while she prepared and served ten dishes free She used the shredded wheat biscuits largely in her work, and surprised all by her delicious and palatable combinations. Mrs. Keith is a fluent and enthusiastic speaker.

At the meeting of the Y. M. C. A., held last evening there was a large number out and much enthusiasm. J. R. Barber was appointed a committee to select a building, and the following delegates to the Fall River convention were appointed. President E. D. Daniels and Secretary C. L. Stewart, ex officio, H. R. Thayer, R. J. Calkin, W. F. Ray, W. S. Richardson and Rev. I. W. Sneath. Matters look very encouraging and subscriptions and names are coming in very satisfactorily.

The passenger train in charge of Conductor Pond was stopped on Saturday morning to pick up a man found lying beside the track this side of Milford. He was in an unconscious condition and suffering from injuries about the chest and feet, having evidently been struck by a train during the night and thrown to one side. The man was later identified as Michael Casey, single, aged 35, of Milford. He was taken to the Massachusetts General hospital in Boston, where his foot was amputated.

Saturday forenoon a telephone wire on Main street crossed with the trolley line and was burned off, falling with a display of fireworks across the buggy and just back of the dashboard of a sewing machine man who was driving along the street. He pulled up and the spectators yelled to him not to touch the wire, and he took the advice and sat waiting for a few moments. Then he took up with other advice and drove slowly ahead while the wire slid through the carriage and over the wheels until the broken end was reached, and the excitement was over.

Master Robert E. Thayer has recently imported through W. C. Harris of Boston a trio of Belgian hares that represent the finest strains in England. At the head of this trio is "Duke," a son of "Sunrise," winner of the gold cup at Crystal Palace last year. The does are "Lady Priory" and "Princess Dottie," the former sired by "Prince Priory" out of "Pearl," and the latter by "Lord Brittain" out of "Ina." Both does are soon to kindle, having been recently bred to "Dashaway" and "London Prince" respectively. See advertisement on this page.

A number from here are planning to attend the thirty-fourth annual state convention of the Young Men's Christian associations of Massachusetts and Rhode Island to be held at Fall River October 25 to 28. Day sessions will be held in First Baptist church, opposite Association building. Evening sessions will be held in the Central Congregational church, Rock street, corner Franklin. Most interesting sessions have been arranged which will surely result in great profit. Among some of the "big men" who will speak are Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, the famous preacher and author of "In His Steps;" Evangelists F. F. Davidson of Boston and L. B. Greenwood; Secretary Walter L. Douglas of Philadelphia and Secretary T. S. McPheeters of St. Louis, Mo.

The Norfolk County Temperance union will hold its autumn meeting at the First Baptist church, Bellingham, on Thursday, commencing at 10 a. m. The morning exercises will include devotional services, reading of records and business meeting, reports of temperance work from those in attendance, address by Rev. D. T. Magill of Milford and probably Rev. J. F. Packard of East Dedham. Recess will be taken at 12 noon, when there will be a basket collation. The afternoon exercises will be as follows: Praise service, business meeting, additional reports not given at morning session, address by Rev. F. B. Sleeper on "God's Great Victory of the Ages," open parliament, address by C. D. Albro, A. M., M. D., of Milford, children's meeting.

An Interesting Convention.

Twenty-four delegates met here last Friday afternoon, representing the six towns in this representative district, to select the two gentlemen who were to look after the district's interest the coming year in the great and general court.

The convention was called to order by G. F. Williams of Foxboro, and Rev. I. W. Sneath of Franklin was selected as secretary. They served the convention throughout. Nominating speeches were called for in the alphabetical order of the towns. Bellingham presented no name. Foxboro presented the name of its honored son, Albion F. Bemis, the straw manufacturer. The speech was made by B. F. Boyden in eloquent words, stating why the delegates present should support Foxboro in this crisis He referred to her losses by fire, and the fact that Foxboro had matters of importance coming up relating to the town. He said if expressions of sympathy meant anything here was an opportunity to show it.

Medway's candidate, George W. Bullard, was presented by C. H. Deans, Esq., of that town, who claimed that it was Medway's turn to present a candidate, while he did not deny the justice of Foxboro's claim. Nathan A. Fales of Norfolk presented the name of Silas E Fales, a man who was entitled to the position, and one who would honor it as well. The claims of Wrentham's candidate, William F. Maintien, were ably presented by E. J. Whitaker, Esq., who considered that Wrentham could by right receive the coveted honor and its candidate was a worthy one.

The balloting begun, the first one developing 27 votes, with only twenty four delegates. These were thrown out, and the voting continued with two names upon the ballot. Fales had 13, Bemis 13, Bullard 10 and Maintien 8, upon the informal ballot. Here was Foxboro's and Norfolk's opportunity to win out by making the vote formal, but the golden opportunity was allowed to pass by, and Norfolk lost as a result. Names were brought in singly again, and no choice Again, and Bullard won, with 13 votes. The next ballot selected Bemis, and the work of the convention was over. Other routine work was then completed and the convention adjourned. The following is the list of delegates:

Franklin—George E. Emerson, Rev. Dr. I. W. Sneath, Dr. G. A. Martin, W. A. Fairfield, James Onslow, D. W. Corson.

Foxboro—George F. Williams, B. F. Boyden, J. A. Morse, Fred S Lane.

Medway—E. S. Woodman, C. H. Deans, S. H. Clark, F. C. Clark, O. T. Mason

Wrentham—W. C. Averill, H. F. Keeney, Fred E. Gilmore, E J. Whitaker.

Bellingham—H. A. Whitney, E. B. Stowe, A. E. Bullard.

Norfolk—Lyman E Ware, Walter H. Fales.

Come and Hear.

On Thursday evening of this week Miss Edith Linwood Winn, the violin teacher at Dean academy, will give a lecture recital at the academy chapel; subject, "The Great Violin Schools." Admission is free and all who are interested are cordially invited.

As this is a subject which is interesting a good many just at present something enjoyable and valuable is assured. Miss Winn is an attractive speaker and has given the subject a good deal of study. She should be greeted by a generous audience.

Democratic Representative Convention.

The tenth Norfolk Democratic representative convention was held Saturday evening at the Democratic headquarters on Central square and placed in nomination Dr. Charles A. Bemis of Medway and Lawrence J. Kelly of Franklin for representatives to the general court. John F. Reardon of Medway was chairman and John A. O'Sullivan of Franklin secretary of the convention. The district committee for the ensuing is John F. Reardon, chairman, D. F. O'Sullivan and the chairman from each town committee in the district.

The convention voted to change the delegations to representative conventions so as to allow one delegate at large and one for every fifty voters in each town in the district.

Thy Crown.

Rev. Dr. Sneath addressed his audience on Sunday morning upon the words in Rev. 3: 11, "Hold fast that which thou hast, that no one take thy crown." Some of the thoughts to which he gave expression is found in the following words: Christ said to the church in Philadelphia, "I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it—hold that fast which thou hast, that no one take thy crown" The "open door" is the symbol of opportunity for service. This open door stands before every Christian for service; in the wide world, through missionary endeavor, in our own land and especially in our own town. The open door of opportunity is very wide in this beautiful town. There is not one person in Franklin in which you and I ought not to be interested. The door which Christ has opened no one can shut. The opportunity for service is ours. But if we refuse it another may enter in and take our crown. The crown of the Christian is of a two fold nature. It is a crown of service and a crown of reward. As a crown of service it has in it the gems of privilege, of influence and of talent. All talent, whether in music, in speaking, in teaching, is not to be used simply for self, much less for self glorification, and still less for the entertainment of others; but to help and bless mankind. As a crown of reward it contains the gems of gratitude, of satisfaction and of divine approval. It is a delight to hear men like Rev. William M. Thayer and Mr. William F. Ray spoken of with grateful recognition of their services. They entered the open door of service and their crowns have the setting of gratitude in them. But too many stand before the open door of opportunity, and, attracted by other influences, refuse to enter. Others enter and take their crowns.

God has clearly placed before the Christian people of Franklin an open door in the organization of the Young Men's Christian association. It is a movement for young men. It is sure to succeed. The young men are enthusiastic over it. Men from Franklin and elsewhere are supporting it. It is your open door for opportunity for service for the young men of this town If you do not enter it, others will. Will you wear the crown of service for the young men and inherit the crown of gratitude from them?

The Sunday evening service is also an open door. It is an opportunity for service on the part of Christians to those who are not. Twelve or more places are open on Sunday evening for other purposes, but only three churches. The Sunday evening church service can be made so attractive, not as an entertainment, but as a place of worship and instruction, that people will want to come to it. But it will require sacrifice? Yes. The crown-wearer must bear the cross. It costs sacrifice in business, in politics—yea, everywhere, to achieve success. It cost one hundred ladies some sacrifice on last Monday evening to be present at the Alden club, going there through the rain. If one-fourth that number loyally sustain the Sunday evening service it will succeed. The most beautiful conditions are the result of sacrifice. The fine ceiling effect of this audience room is due to the crosses everywhere present. Franklin, so beautiful physically, can be made equally beautiful spiritually if everywhere in it the crosses are visible in the lives of sacrificing Christians.

An October Gathering.

Everyone is invited to the fall session of the Mendon conference, to be held at the Congregational church tomorrow. With pleasant weather a large audience will have helpful and spiritual food indeed.

OCTOBER 17.

" 'It was a little way she had.'
O, the little ways!
The dear, odd little ways of those we love!
Shall we find these when meeting up above?
O, the little ways
We speak of softly, tenderly,
With laughing lips and brimming eye!
O, the little ways!—
The sweet originalities;
The unreasoning antipathies;
The lifelong fads love smiled upon;
Phrases, expressions, theirs alone;
The faults that tried, that gave us pain.
And now 'twere heaven to bear again!
The little gestures—O, my heart!—
The graces innocent of art;
The blessed little weaknesses
We bathe in floods of tenderness!—
O, the little ways,
The little ways so treasured up of love!
Shall we find these when meeting up above?"

Dean Academy 28, Pomfret School 0.

The Dean football team went to Pomfret, Conn., Saturday, and defeated the Preparatory school team of that place in a very fast game. Dean showed to good advantage in offensive play, the interference for end runs being very effective and the line men opened big holes for the backs to plunge through. They also ran in punts with great success, twice running back Pomfret's kick offs the whole length of the field for touch downs.

Pomfret resorted to punting nearly every time they got the ball. When they did try to gain by running with the ball their interference was slow in starting and was generally poor, and the Dean ends usually got through it and "nailed" the runner for a loss. Pomfret's team had some good individual players but their team work was weak, while Dean played a strong team game and there was no fumbling behind Dean's line. Pulsifer made three of the touchdowns and never failed to gain his distance when given the ball. Patch and Ball did some clever running and Thompson played a good game. Forbes did the punting and out-kicked his opponent. Pomfret never had possession of the ball in Dean's territory and so had no chance to score.

The lineup was as follows:

DEAN.	Positions.	POMFRET.
Ball	l. e.	Hasbrouck
Mitchell	l. t.	Hitchcock
Woodward	l. g.	Dixon
Echols	c.	Jones
Burroughs	r. g.	Egbert
Stone	r. t.	Montgomery
Thompson, (capt.)	r. e.	Merrell
Phipps	quarter.	Wagstaff
Pulsifer	l. h. b.	Johnson
Patch	r. h. b.	Towle
Forbes	f. b.	Higbee

Score, Dean 28. Touchdowns, Pulsifer 3, Ball, Thompson. Goals from touchdowns, Forbes 3. Umpire, Kimball. Referee, Nowell. Linesmen, Burdakin and Martin. Timer, Smith. Time, 15 and 10 minute halves.

Some time ago a law went into effect which will strike most people as being a rather curious one. The law states that smokestacks and chimneys must not send into the air a dense, gray smoke for two minutes at a time continuously, and violation means a fine of not less than $10 or more than $100

Subtleness of Rheumatism

It has been known for many years that the most fertile cause of heart disease is rheumatism. Only recently has it been realized, however, that many cases of rheumatism which give rise to heart complications really run so mild a course that they are not suspected of being serious and are neglected. This, says a medical authority, is especially true in cases which attack the very young. In children rheumatism often masquerades under the name of "growing pains." In infants it often fails completely of recognition. It has become the custom to a lamentable degree to give for it the coal-tar derivatives, the various antipyretic drugs, anti-pyrine, phenacetine and the like, besides various derivatives of salicylic acid. These drugs alleviate the rheumatic pain by benumbing the nerves; they also lessen fever. The result of their use is that patients are enabled to move about much sooner than they otherwise would, and this throws extra work on the heart, and leads to post rheumatic heart complications which may cripple the organ for life. The recent increase in the number of refusals of risks by life insurance companies is thought to be due to this cause. Doctors from many parts of the world deprecate the present excessive use of these drugs. Pain is nature's demand for rest. To allay it without reaching its cause is to drug the sentinel who watches over the citadel of health because his footsteps disturb our sleep.

A Century of Migration.

In counting up the totals of European migration during the century, the New York Sun finds that the movement is the greatest of the kind recorded in history. In the first 20 years of the century only 25[illegible] Europeans came to this country, but between 18[illegible] and 1822 more than 17[illegible] migrated to the Americas. In the last-named year alone the United States received [illegible]00 immigrants. Since 1882 the European outpouring to various parts of the world has been over 12,[illegible]0 souls. Trustworthy data indicate that during the century Europe has been drained of 30,000,[illegible] persons seeking to better their fortunes in other lands. This number is equal to three-fifths of the total population of Europe at the time of Augustus Caesar. It represents a third more people than Great Britain and Ireland gained in the first [illegible] years of the century. It is greater than the total number of inhabitants of the United Kingdom in 1[illegible], and only a little less than the total population of the United States in the same year. Yet the tremendous loss seems to have strengthened Europe rather than weakened it. This unprecedented migration seems to have been a healthy expansion movement on the part of the civilized races. Probably this remarkable phase of history will never be repeated, for there remain no more such vast and fertile wildernesses in the temperate zone as the United States was at the beginning of the century.

Three years ago congress passed a law forbidding the importation into this country of any tea of a grade lower than good, and imposing a duty of ten cents on every pound of tea brought into our ports. Owing to this law it is impossible for the American people to get anything but good tea to drink.

A sweet-singing poetess of Kansas City is named Hazel Lesueur Pigg. It will now be in order for some rude paragrapher to make witty allusion to the productions of her pen.

The women of Chicago all took off their hats in church last Sunday so the Lord could rain down blessings upon their dear heads without danger of spoiling their millinery.

STRENGTH—WEAKNESS.

The strong man and the weak woman. The sturdy oak and the clinging vine. Women to-day do not expect to be carried around like children. They have serious work to do—hard work—and they must be fitted for it. The ideal medicine to build up weak women is Smith's Green Mountain Renovator, because it is made in Vermont of pure, wholesome herbs, redolent of the fragrant woods, the green hills and the bracing air. These herbs are so combined as to assist Nature in restoring Strength.

"I wish to say to you that after using four bottles of your Renovator it has worked wonders for me. It has given me great strength and muscular vitality; increased my appetite and given me restful sleep. I have also suffered with bad blood for years, and when commencing the Renovator had twenty boils on my neck. They have now disappeared, and I can not say enough in praise of it. It is a great tonic for the muscles, nerves, [illegible] is a grand medicine."

HELEN IS NOT POPULAR.

The New Queen of Italy Is Not Thought Well Of by the Common People.

Though a woman of great beauty and many charming accomplishments, Queen Helen of Italy does not promise to become a favorite with the people. Cold and undemonstrative, reserved and taciturn rather than effusive, her qualities are calculated to appeal rather to the Piedmontese—highlanders like herself—than to the population of the rest of Italy. There is no doubt that the disappointment freely and unkindly expressed by the newspapers of the peninsula regarding her failure to fulfill national expectations in the presentation to the kingdom of an heir to the throne has had the effect of raising a sort of barrier of antagonism between herself and the people of her adopted country. She seems to feel that they resent her childlessness, while they, on the other hand, do not hesitate to express freely the disappointment of the dynastic hope which they had based upon the marriage, says a London paper.

Queen Margherita's popularity was a source of strength to her husband as ruler. Even at the moment when, owing to the mistakes, domestic and foreign, of his ministers, he was most unpopular and reviled as "the Austrian colonel," she always remained an object of so much affection on the part of the people of every shade of political opinion that the field daisy was chosen in her honor as the emblem of a number of political societies, some of them, such as the Italia irredenta, being hostile alike to the government and to the king. But for a queen to be popular in Italy it is necessary that she be of Italian birth and of Italian disposition, and neither the Montenegrin-born Queen Helen nor yet the French-born Duchess Helen of Aosta, who, as the wife of the heir-apparent of the crown, may eventually succeed her as queen, is ever likely to give the same amount of political support to her husband as Queen Margherita was able to furnish to the late King Humbert. Nor is it probable that she will ever share to the same degree as her mother-in-law the duties of her husband as ruler. Humbert was notoriously influenced in many matters by his consort, especially in connection with the triple alliance which she induced him to join. But Queen Helen is completely dominated by her diminutive husband, who, like so many small men, is far too autocratic to accept any advice or to brook any interference, even on the part of his wife, in his duties as ruler.

Disadvantage.

"A pretty girl," observed the Plain Girl, bitterly, "has a great advantage in this business of making a name for herself!"

"I don't know!" sighed the Pretty Girl.

"She finds so many lovely ready-to-wear names at hand!"—Puck.

Hopes.

"I want to get my picture taken," said the populist statesman.

"Cabinet?" inquired the photographer.

"Wouldn't be surprised if Bryan's elected. I've been promised a t.p.op office."—Philadelphia Press.

Blood.

We live by our blood, and on it. We thrive or starve, as our blood is rich or poor.

There is nothing else to live on or by.

When strength is full and spirits high we are being refreshed, bone muscle and brain, in body and mind, with continual flow of rich blood.

This is health.

When weak, in low spirits, no cheer, no spring, when rest is not rest and sleep is not sleep, we are starved; our blood is poor; there is little nutriment in it.

Back of the blood, is food, to keep the blood rich. When it fails, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. It sets the whole body going again—man woman and child.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

Mr. R. Uhlenhuth describes a simple method of preparing free hydroxylamine, which consists in heating hydroxylamine phosphate gently under reduced pressure. It is stated that the hydroxylamine distills over in a state of extreme purity, the distillate solidifying if the receiver be surrounded by melting ice.

MM. Desgrez and Balthazard state that they have discovered a method of regenerating air in confined spaces. They have submitted to the Academy of Sciences aluminum diving dresses weighing 25 pounds. They state that the diver can move in this suit for hours under water without drawing air from the surface. The principal regenerating agent seems to be sodium dioxide. It is said that the invention is applicable to submarine work, poisonous atmospheres in mines, submarine warfare and certain chemical industries.

WISDOM OF JEFFERSON.

I readily suppose my opinion wrong, when opposed by the majority.

The liberty of speaking and writing guards our other liberties.

Postpone to the great object of liberty every smaller motive and passion.

It is the manners and spirit of the people which preserve a republic in vigor.

A disinterested administration of the public trusts is essential to perfect tranquillity of mind.

How easily we prescribe for others a cure for their difficulties when we cannot cure our own.

Public opinion is a censor before which the most exalted tremble for their future as well as present fame.

Whenever things get so far wrong as to attract their notice, the people, if well informed, may be relied on to set them to rights.

The information of the people at large can alone make them the safe, as they are the sole depository of our political and religious freedom.

Let us deserve well of our country by making her interests the end of all our plans, and not our own pomp, patronage and irresponsibility.

The only orthodox object of the institution of government is to secure the greatest degree of happiness possible to the general mass of those associated under it.

AS NATURE TEACHES THEM.

[It is astonishing how differently the various nations of the world will act under precisely the same circumstances. For instance, says London Tit-Bits, when a fly is found in a glass of beer just as the drinker is about to drink it, each nationality pursues a different course of action.]

An American will laugh and order a fresh glass.

A Russian will swallow the beer, fly and all.

A Frenchman will pay and go, but make a tremendous fuss about it.

An Englishman will empty the glass away and demand a fresh one.

A Chinaman will first rescue the fly, eat it, and drink the beer afterward.

A Spaniard will pay for the beer, but quietly move off without touching it.

A German will carefully hook out the fly with his little finger, and then swallow the beer.

Nothing Tastes Good

And eating is simply perfunctory—done because it must be.

This is the common complaint of the dyspeptic.

If eating sparingly, leaving much of the light meal provided, would cure dyspepsia, few would suffer from it long.

The only way to cure dyspepsia, which is difficult digestion, is by giving vigor and tone to the stomach and the whole digestive system. It is therefore cured positively and absolutely by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

The testimonial of Frank Fay, 103 N. Street, South Boston, Mass., voluntarily given like thousands of others, should lead to a trial of this peculiar medicine. "My niece," he writes, "was a great sufferer from dyspepsia for six years. She tried many medicines in vain. She had no appetite and was troubled with sour stomach and headaches. After taking two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla she was well."

FURNISHING NOTES.

Neat and Tasteful Adjuncts to the Completion of a Household.

The new prairie grass mattings are simply delightful; they come in soft greens, reds, blues and ecrus, the natural tints of the long, wiry prairie grasses of the west, which are now proving sources of income to the farmers. Formerly these grasses were supposed to be an unmitigated evil, says Ladies' World.

Prairie grass matting is much heavier than the Chinese and Japanese products, and much more durable; they all have the same clean and fragrant smell that makes them so acceptable as floor coverings. Prairie grass matting is full yard wide and costs 40 cents per yard.

Never were there shown more beautiful lamps than are now made. Especially notable are the piano lamps of welded wrought iron and copper in carmine finish. The antique copper and carmine copper are also beautifully combined in other models. The carmine finish, royal copper is not new, but it is ever beautiful and has never before commonized.

Very attractive portieres in green and soft dull crimson in fish-net, seine pattern, have been selling for three dollars each; the meshes are as large as those of a coarse seine, and the curtains are finished top and bottom by handsome tassels.

Another style in a sort of cross-striped open work pattern comes in rich reds and deep blues, and has upper and lower finish of tassels. The material is cotton, a sort of soft cord, and the colors are claimed to be fast; they drape very gracefully and need no rings.

A handsome top border for a plain curtain, that is, a curtain without figures, may be made by taking a strip of burlap having a figure, and outlining this figure with gold thread and then powdering it with colored spangles.

Warmly Appreciative.

"See the melting sunset!" exclaimed the poetic young woman. "See how the crystal tints seem to be stolen from the rainbow mist and hung boldly over the mountain, like bonnets of beauty, only to fade, alas! with the dying daylight!"

"I beg your pardon," said the young man with close-cut hair, "but would you mind saying all that again?"

"Do you think it is very pretty?"

"I should say so! I'm going to write it down. 'Melting sunset,' 'crystal tints,' 'rainbow mist,' 'dying daylight'—they're great! You see, I'm going to run an 'American bar' in Europe and I've been puzzled almost to death trying to think up new names for mixed drinks."—Washington Star.

Skill of the Cameo Cutter.

The cameo cutter's occupation is very exacting. He can put in only a few hours' work at a time as a usual thing because of the tension on the nerves. A quavering hand may be responsible for the single stroke which will spoil a week's work. He must have an eye almost like a microscope, and a very delicate touch; he must be an artist in soul, and as skillful a craftsman as is a watchmaker; he must know how to model and draw, and he must have a knowledge of chemistry, so as to remove offending spots. The work is executed in relief on many kinds of hard or precious stones, but essentially the chalcedonic variety of quartz and on shells.—Chicago Chronicle.

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2.65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly to color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit. The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save. If your druggist can't supply you, it will be fowarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

STORY OF WING FONG.

"CAN a Chinaman ever be civilized?" asked the New York man in a general way after the little group in the Broadway hotel had discussed the situation in China on the basis of every rumor that could be remembered.

"He can," said the man from Fremont, Neb., confidently; "he was."

The others waited in the questioning silence that follows so bold a declaration and finally the Fremont man went on:

"When he came to Fremont in 1877 he called himself Wing Fong and wore blue burlap clothes and a pigtail. Inside of a year he had prefixed 'Jo' to his name and cut his hair, and his clothes were the latest Fremont style. I was county clerk in 1880. The town was more or less torn up over the presidential campaign and Jo got to going it strong for 'Glafiel' and, well, wouldn't attempt to tell you how he pronounced 'Arthur,' with all its r's. At any rate he strolled into my office one day and said:

"'Me want votee Glafiel, savee? Makee me Melican man allee same. I gotee tlee dolla; you makee me Melican man.'

"'Oh,' I said, 'you want to be naturalized?'

"'Allee same, allight,' said he; 'bully fo lou. You gimme leceipt can vote, I give you tlee dolla.'

"Jo was the only Chinaman in town and everybody humored him. I got him a naturalization application blank and he signed it with his mark. Then I daubed some sealing wax on it and stamped it. 'Never mind the money, Jo,' I said, 'this is a free country.'

"'Much blige,' said Joe, 'you dlop in laundy some time, I set 'em up.'

"After this Jo Wing Fong became the chief object of interest in Fremont. Of course everybody heard that he had been 'naturalized.' The democrats tried to convert him to Hancock, but he said 'me lepublican allee time,' and he was. A German friend of his named Schrager taught him 'Yankee Doodle' and the 'Star Spangled Banner,' and he used to sing them in a voice like a Chinese fiddle at republican ratification meetings, to the great joy of himself and all the rest.

"On election day Jo got up at five in the morning and went over to wake Schrager up to go and vote. Schrager wouldn't get up then and Jo sat on the porch three hours and waited for him. After they had voted, Jo locked up his laundry; went to the livery stable, hired a horse and buggy and drove about all day.

"Some time after this Jo took it into his head that, to still further carry out his plan of becoming a 'Melican man,' he ought to join the fire department, so he went around to the engine house (hand engine), and found the man that polished the brass and took care of the hook and ladder, and made his application. The man told him all right, and in a week or so Jo astonished the natives by marching down street in the red shirt and white cotton gloves which constituted the main portion of a Fremont fireman's uniform.

"In those days the town had one fire bell—an ancient ringer that had been discarded by a church because it was cracked. It was mounted at the top of a scaffolding shaped like the pedestal of Liberty in the harbor here, and the rope hung down almost to the ground, where even a child could reach it. The plan was, of course, that the fellow who discovered a fire should rush to the bell and give the alarm.

"One night about ten o'clock the bell began ringing as though it had just heard of the Chicago fire. There was no tolling to it, but just 'cling-clang-cling-clang,' like the bells on a city ambulance. Most of the town tumbled out of bed and came rushing to the place. There they saw Jo Wing Fong pulling the rope frantically and yelling like a demon.

"'Where's the fire, Jo?' came the breathless chorus.

"'Ain' no flia,' said the Chinaman, dropping the bell rope. 'Stlange man beatee me out two bit laundry bill; lun away like devil. I lingee bell, callee p'lice allee samee Melican man.'

"The next step in the civilization was his romance. His laundry was next door to the New York hotel, and among the help there was Bridget O'Doolihan or words to that effect, with pink cheeks, blue eyes, towsley hair and a blarney. She began by using the blarney on Jo, and then she went further and used her eyes, and finally she promised to marry him. I don't suppose there was ever a lover, native or foreign-born, who took himself more seriously than Jo did at this decidedly American turn in his affairs. When he sprinkled water on his washing through his teeth he looked as solemn as one of the fountain lions that sends a big stream from its iron lips, and the minute anybody tried to joke with him he'd look pained and turn away.

"He got some remarkable ideas about the duty which he and Bridget owed to Fremont society. One day my wife heard a knock while at work in the kitchen, and when she opened the door there stood Jo and his fiancee. Jo explained what every gossip in town knew (with no offense to my wife, you understand) that he and Bridget were to be married. He said he thought that being engaged to him, she ought not to work longer in a hotel—that she ought to have a quiet place in some nice, respectable family. For this reason he was going to take her around to his 'Melican lady flin's' and see what could be done.

"'What's your opinion of the matter?' my wife inquired of Bridget.

"'I think the mon's right,' she replied. 'The hotel's no place fer the likes o' me wid everyone knowin' I'm about to marry wid this young haythen,' and she slyly pinched his arm.

"So it was arranged that Bridget should come to work for us, and there she stayed till they were married by a justice of the peace in our sitting-room. There was no kink in the ceremony except that when the justice said: 'Do you, Jo Wing Fong?' Jo interrupted with 'Melican man' and positively refused to 'take Bridget for his wedded wife' until the justice had repeated the words in the place indicated.

"The happy couple went to live in the rear of the laundry, and that ended the civilization of Jo Wing Fong except the finishing touch."

The Fremont man having a pretty tact at the effective in ending a story, paused here.

After a moment's silence, somebody asked: "And what was the finishing touch?"

"Well, I moved away from Fremont shortly after the wedding and didn't see Jo Wing Fong again for two years. Then one day as I was returning to town I met him on a train.

"'How are you, Jo,' I asked, as I settled in the seat with him. "How's business and how's Mrs. Jo?'

"Jo ignored everything but the reference to his wife. 'Blidget allight,' he said, proudly. 'Me getee devorce, pay flou-teen dolla' month alimony, allee samee Melican man.'"—N. Y. Sun.

HIS LOST PROPOSAL.

BY CLIVE R. FENN.

"YOU say that you wrote to me, Mr Vantrey?" said Beryle.

"It is true that I did mention a letter."

"What was it about?"

"Oh, nothing in particular"

"Ah! It seems to me that the most interesting letters of all are those which are about nothing in particular provided, of course, it is the right sort of nothing in particular"

"My letter was not interesting. I'm afraid in fact, it was precisely because of it that I called."

"You did not, then, call to see me?"

"In a measure, yes"

"Only in a measure! How polite!"

"Well, it was to say good-by."

"Good-by?"

"Yes."

"You are going away?"

"Almost directly."

"Ah! And this letter concerned your departure?"

"No; on the contrary, it had nothing whatever to do with it."

"Then decidedly I understand nothing about it."

"I wished, you see, to—"

"To what? I am very eager to know."

"To ask you not to open the letter."

"Not to open your letter? But, Mr Vautrey, that would be too absurd Does one ever refuse to open a letter? It is no possible"

"Yet it is important that you should not open this letter"

"I am more and more interested. What would you have me do with it?"

"Burn it."

"Burn without reading it?"

"Yes."

"Never."

"At my earnest request?"

"You must request something different—something easier."

"And yet—"

"I must see the letter."

"You must see before you decide?"

"Certainly."

"But it will be too late then."

"I can't help that."

"Miss Delacour, this is something very important indeed."

"So it would seem."

"And you persist in making a joke of it?"

"I am not joking, Mr Vautrey; far from it, believe me. You come to me with a mystery. Well, I adore mysteries. It is about a letter, and going away. Where are you going?"

"I hardly know."

"To the Rivera?"

"Probably."

"Well, we all do that every year; there is nothing striking in that. Then, there is this letter."

"Which when it comes you will destroy."

"As I said before, I will consider the point."

"It is not as if it was of any consequence, you know."

"No."

"Or likely to interest you."

"I suppose not; but when did you post your letter?"

"Last night."

"In town?"

"Yes."

"Then it should be here by now; it will come by the afternoon post, probably, and—yes, half-past four—it should be here immediately. Then you can tell me all about it, or I can read it and decide whether to burn it or not."

A minute later a servant entered the room with a salver, on which lay several letters.

"Here they are, Mr. Vautrey; and yes, here is yours, but—well, it didn't matter about your request."

"Why? What has happened?"

"It is only the envelope which is here."

"And the letter?"

"Has been lost in the post, evidently."

"Ah!"

"And now, what was in this letter, which was not stuck down, and which you were so anxious for me not to see? You owe me an explanation."

"It was a matter which had better be left alone."

"I am not of that opinion."

"Miss Delacour, I assure you to the contrary. The incident is over, the letter is lost—"

"Where did you write it?"

"At the club."

"Then the club has stamped notepaper?"

"Well?"

"And the letter will be returned to you. I know how it is done. I wrote to Jessie Cardington, at Cairo. She had left. The letter was opened and returned to me. So it will be here. Now, Mr. Vautrey, you must tell me all about the letter, or promise to send it to me when you receive it again."

"And if I can do neither?"

"Then our friendship, Mr. Vautrey, comes to an end."

"That is precisely what it has to do in any case."

"What do you mean?"

"It is the simple truth, Miss Delacour; it is no joke about my going away."

"I understand less and less."

"The letter I wrote was a request which, at the time, might not have seemed so extraordinarily impertinent, because—"

"Yes?"

"Because I believed myself wealthy."

"But the request?"

"Was to marry me."

"Go on."

"After writing it, I learned by a telegram from Castlehampton that the solicitors who manage my property have failed absolutely. They have collapsed; not a red cent; so that you see, I was in a double predicament. I tried, little knowing the red tape imperturbability of the department, to recover my letter. It was useless; but Fate behaved in this particular instance like a gentleman, and did the straight thing. That is all. Good-by, Miss Delacour You see how it all is."

"I see nothing of the kind."

"But the world is more clear-sighted."

"You will oblige me by sitting down again."

"Well?"

"Mr Vantrey, you are very unkind to me."

"In what way?"

"In acting as you have. I have plenty of red cents."

"I know"

"Well, doesn't that make it all right?"

"You can't marry a man in the mud."

"There is a crossing at the end of the street it he will only take it, and if you don't propose again directly I shall think that you care for me no more."

"But I do care, and I— But there, a ruined man! Think of it!"

"I don't see why I should think of it. Did you mean the letter?"

"When I wrote it—yes."

"And now?"

"Now I see the impossibility."

"You have written to me, Mr. Vautrey, asking me to marry you. I thank you for your letter, and—I accept your offer."—Lady's Pictorial.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century. discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

Johnny's Heroism.

"This won't do," exclaimed Mrs. Box excitedly, "there's 13 at table."

"Never mind, ma," shouted little Johnny. "I kin eat for two."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Came Near Dying.

"For three days and nights I suffered agony untold from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E Lowther, clerk of the district court, Centreville, Iowa. "I thought I should surely die and tried a dozen different medicines, but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely. I went to sleep and did not awake for eight hours. On awakening a few hours ago I felt so gratified that the first work I do on going to the office is to write to the manufacturers of the remedy and offer them my grateful thanks and say, 'God bless you and the splendid medicine you make.'" This remedy is for sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

Something He Could Recommend.

"I wish," said the housewife who had grudgingly given him a plate of cold victuals, "instead of thanking me you could tell me of something that will drive away cockroaches."

"Ever try this pie on 'em, ma'am?" lugubriously inquired Tuffold Knutt.—Chicago Tribune.

Unpardonable.

Mrs Winks—Why do you hate Deacon De Goode so?

Mrs. Minks—He lost patience with a crying baby in a railroad train.

Origin of the Boers.

The French Society of Ethnology has been looking up the Boers. It seems that the Dutch East India company sent Van Biebeck in 1652 to found a supply station at the Cape of Good Hope, then called the Cape of Tempests. When Louis XVI. revoked the Edict of Nantes in 1685, some 300 French families demanded the hospitality of the East India company, and so were sent to the cape, where there were 600 whites of Dutch origin. The latter received the French colonists, and the Dutch language was later employed exclusively. The present Boers are the descendants of this colony, spreading over the territory of the Cape, Natal, Orange Free State and Transvaal.—Ledger Monthly.

How Silk Equalizes Temperature.

It is known to everybody that silk is electrified by friction. Acting upon the suggestion thus furnished, a French savant, M. Henry, has made experiments which show that the electrification of the air inclosed in a tissue of silk produces a circulation of its particles which tends to equalize the temperature. A similar effect is observable in wool, and hence the superiority of silk and wool for garments intended to protect the body against the vicissitudes of climate.

Greater Generosity.

A young Swede called on a minister in a western state with a blonde sweetheart in tow and asked to be married. The minister performed the ceremony.

"How much you charge for him?" the Swede asked. "Dollar?"

"I don't charge for it," the minister explained, "but the law allows me a dollar and a half."

Ole took a silver half dollar from his pocket, handed it to the minister and remarked, "Ay tank she mek you two dollar."—N. Y. Press.

The Democratic rally which had been announced to take place in Music hall last evening was postponed owing to the inability of Judge Putman to be present and deliver an address on account of previous campaign engagements for the above date. The Judge has sent word to the Democratic town committee that he will be at liberty to speak here any evening next week, and the committee will accordingly arrange another date for the rally.

Here is a pointer for some of our proud mothers: A peculiar sight was witnessed in a neighboring town one afternoon in the shape of a coaching parade—that is, one kind of a coaching parade. About 5 o'clock there appeared on the square 13 baby carriages in a row, each containing an occupant and in charge of a smiling young maid. The route of the procession was through the principal streets of the town, and no little amount of attention was attracted.

Manager Partridge has some of the best attractions on the road booked for the near future: "Prince Pro Tem," with thirty-five people in the cast; "Quo Vadis;" "Remember the Maine," one of Lincoln Carter's best; "Paradise Alley;" "Monte Christo;" "Black Diamonds," all colored, and other plays all known to be good, and with the alterations now being made on the stage all their special scenery can be produced the same as it is in any other place.

On next Sunday, commencing at 12 01 a. m., the winter schedules of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R R. will go into effect, when important changes will be made in train service. For information regarding these changes the public is referred to the large timetable posters and folders which may be obtained at ticket offices in advance of the above date.

An interesting insurance point has just been decided by the courts. It is that it is not necessary, in order to constitute a total loss, that all the material composing the building should be destroyed. It is sufficient, though some parts of it remain standing, that the building has lost its identity and specific character as a building; the insurance not being upon the material composing the building, but upon the building as such. The loss is regarded as total, even though something might be realized for the material by removing it.

If firemen sometimes are not free from the propensity to lose command of themselves in a moment of great excitement it isn't strange that a good old lady in Franklin many years ago, when a store took fire, and the house where the lady lived was expected to soon succumb to the flames, made a heroic effort to save her household furniture, or a part of it, by carefully gathering up her flatirons and carrying them to some distance to a neighbors so they would not be consumed, and at another time the occupant of the building took a basket and tenderly packed his best china and then calmly went to the open window and poured it out of the basket to the ground below. Everyone has heard of the woman who carries out some article of no value from a burning building and forgets the baby. And so it goes.

Politics are but slowly awakening here this year, though in offices and stores there is not a little good natured discussion going on as to the respective merits of the principal candidates. In one respect our national politics are distinctly superior to those of any other nation. They are freer from public abuse. This was not always the case, for in other years our elections ran the whole gamut of vituperation and scandal, but since the Cleveland Blaine campaign, when the climax of intemperance in speech and accusation was reached, there has been a distinct and rapid improvement. No reason exists this year why there should be the slightest mud slinging. On all the tickets the candidates are men of conspicuous cleanliness in their personal and domestic lives, and the issues are sufficiently large to provide the campaign orators with material without obliging them to go into personal matters.

Another landmark has been laid low by the efforts of time, the carpenters, change of owners and modern improvement, and the old Metcalf homestead on Washington street is no more. The building was in the eighteenth century style, two stories at the front and one at the back, and in the red paint of fifty years ago that never wore off. The building stood on Washington street where at the present time the village part of the town leaves off and the country begins. The numerous Metcalf family came from Rev. Leonard Metcalf, rector of Tatterford, Eng., born in 1545, and through his son Michael, who fled from England to escape the persecutions of Bishop Wren and settled in Dedham in 1637. Michael's son of the same name had a son Eleazer, and his son Michael settled in Franklin. He was born in 1687 and married December 23, 1712, so it is probable that the house was built about that time or a little later. He was an elder and original member of the Franklin church. Richardson Metcalf, who died a few years ago, was the last of the family to live in or own the old homestead. Their branch were hard-working farmers of the old-fashioned kind. A local legend says that one morning in haying time a caller at the Metcalf homestead about 5 a. m. inquired for Richardson and received the reply, "Oh, he's out in the field, mowing; he went out this morning."

The Violin at Dean.

Those who attended the violin recital given by Miss Edith Linwood Winn at Dean academy last evening were amply repaid by the fund of musical information which she gave as well as the charming music rendered. She was thoroughly en rapport with her subject and gave a detailed history of the various schools of the violin in a most interesting manner. She was assisted by three young lady violinists, and the solo and quartette music was exceedingly enjoyable. The violin as an instrument is receiving increased attention among musically inclined persons.

A Treat Promised.

The next meeting of the Alden club will be held on Monday evening, when Dr. De Normandie of Boston will speak upon "Women as Citizens." As this is an open meeting it is hoped that there will be a large attendance of gentlemen as well as members of the club.

A Red Letter Day.

Rarely has the Mendon Conference had a more spiritual, helpful and enjoyable session than that of Wednesday, when the First Congregational church entertained the conference in a most fitting manner It was a beautiful October day, with a crispness about the air which was refreshing. The steam and trolley cars brought large numbers, all of whom rejoiced in the accessibility which is now afforded Franklin by these methods of transportation.

The committee in charge of the affair was composed of N. C. Nye, H. W. Thayer, B. M. Rockwood, Mrs. F. M. Richardson, Mrs W S Richardson and Miss Mabel Ray, with E. H. Sherman as chairman. It is needless to say that they worked indefatigably to make the affair a success, the sub-committees doing their part in a most harmonious and successful manner.

The church was trimmed with extreme artistic taste with autumn leaves, a magnificent profusion of ferns, beautiful clusters of dahlias and pinks, making the altar platform a charming picture, indeed. The decorative feature was in the hands of Herbert W. Thayer and Miss Mabel Ray, and many were the compliments heard from the visitors over the beauty of the display. Indeed, the church as a whole was the subject of almost continuous complimentary comment for its general adaptability as a model church home

B. M. Rockwood was the master mind over the collation department, and had every detail thoroughly covered, so that over 550 guests were bountifully attended to in a little over half an hour. His force of waiters numbered about forty, and there was not the slightest confusion or inattention to the wants of anyone. In the kitchen were Messrs. F. M. Richardson and J. O. Chilson as expert meat cutters, with a large force of ladies to supplement their efforts as servers. The whole affair could not be improved upon.

The historical room was the source of much interest, and there was a constant stream of visitors viewing the relics which have been gathered as a nucleus to a much larger and more complete collection later.

The session was called to order about 9.30, over 300 people gathering to enjoy the exercises. Rev. Herman F. Swartz of Mansfield officiated as moderator and Rev. James W. Flagg of Foxboro as scribe. Many other pastors and distinguished laymen were also in attendance. The roll call developed the fact that all of the twelve churches in the conference were represented but one, and nearly fifty delegates were present. Rev. R W. Drawbridge of Medway led the praise service and a resolution of sympathy was sent to Rev. Webster Woodbury, who is ill. The treasurer reported the sum of $34 on hand.

The first address was made by Rev. Eddy T. Pitts of Somerville on "The Church and the Children." He spoke of the relation of the two and how the church regarded children. The child should be appreciated, first for the sake of the church. The church is a necessity to children; gather in the children and you gather up a church. When you save the child's soul you save not only the church, but the state, the nation and the world. Next you should appreciate the child for its own sake, because of the power in the child, who has the power for comfort as has no one else. What is the church doing for the child? That clergyman is a rarity who preaches so that the child does not have to stretch the neck and strain the mind to get the thought. Seek to bring the child into the love of Jesus Christ, as he grows naturally into that love. He unfolds into the graces of the Christ life as the bud unfolds into a beautiful and fragrant flower. The church should give the child its needed religious instruction. As soon as a pagan child is old enough to hold a flower it is taught to offer it to an idol. The Roman Catholic church has solved the secret in its hold upon the children. How useless to turn every energy to amass wealth to the neglect of children to whom you must leave it. Work for children is the best paying work on earth.

Rev. Wilson S. Fritch of Attleboro spoke upon "The Instruction of Adults for Church Membership." The christian minister is working to bring about the kingdom of God on earth. He seeks to make good men better and to bring outsiders into the church. Church methods are different from those of years gone by. The old time revival method has had its day. The church must work in a scientific spirit along religious lines. The two extremes are to be avoided. The training should be theological, doctrinal, asserting the principles of righteousness. Anyone who is willing to do the will of God is ready to be received into the church and ought to be welcome. The church should get rid of outgrown theological statements. Its members must be ready to see the truths, and above all must be ready for service. Service is the main thing. Pastors should lay aside eloquence merely and seek to impress grand religious truths upon their hearers. They will find ready and responsive listeners.

Mrs. W. O. Ballantyne, who has been in the missionary field at Rahari, India, for the past fifteen years, spoke most interestingly of the work there. She dwelt upon the marriage and other customs, the condition of women, told of the growth of the work, and how eager were the people for the truths of the gospel. She referred to the awful state of affairs brought about by the famine, and how it had thrown many children into their care, resulting in good. The language was difficult to master, but the results were far-reaching. God was blessing the work and would continue to do so as long as consecrated people offered themselves in His service.

Rev. Charles H. Beale, D. D., of Boston spoke most effectively upon the distinction between the Christian and the merely moral man, taking his text from "What do ye more than these?" The church is a useless society unless it has something to offer which other organizations have not This is a rational age. It demands facts, and good reasons must be given for the church's right to exist. It used to be thought that the dress or the carriage should denote the Christian. The worst kind of pride is that of being proud of having no pride. The difference must not be indicated by externals Outwardly these moral people are as good as you, but back of it all they are not actuated by the central power which makes for righteousness. They believe in evolution. We believe in a Supreme Power, who watches over all and has a divine purpose and plan which will finally be brought to the end which He has chosen. They have courage, sympathy, philanthropy, they are honest, upright, generous, noble and worthy You have these qualities, and further believe that they are ordained of God, whose power you feel over and under and round about you, as one mighty to save and all things move according to His will. Their lives are not lived in the presence of these realities. They are not actuated by the thought of God, through whom they move and have their being. The Christian goes about with a different feeling. He is in his Father's house, a partner with Him. The church must not try to do the work of other organizations. They have their place in social, educational and fraternal life The duty of the church is to hold up Christ, to teach religious truth and cultivate faith. All worthy organizations exist because the original inspiration was from God, who makes it possible for them to do as well as they do. A Christian spirit carries with it a true missionary spirit and love for others. Danger and hardship will not dampen its ardor nor stop its sacrifices till Christ's kingdom shall be established upon earth.

The session closed with the usual communion service, in charge of Rev. Mr. Minchin and Rev G. E Sweet, a large proportion of the congregation remaining to participate. At the close there were many who spoke of the unusual excellence of the addresses, without exception, all being noticeably of power and practical benefit. The church and committees received the thanks of the conference for their hospitality and kindness throughout. The next session will be held in Milford.

Ask Co-operation.

A number of cases of scarlet fever having recently developed, we ask the co-operation of everyone in Franklin to the end that it may not attain the proportions of the epidemic some months ago. We shall rigidly enforce the provisions of the quarantine law, with due consideration, however, for any peculiar conditions or circumstances which may arise. An intelligent conception of our position and authority on the part of the people will greatly simplify the situation and avoid friction.

FRANKLIN BOARD OF HEALTH.

Precautions Taken.

The state board of health having had careful tests and analyses made of the water taken from various wells and springs used by typhoid fever victims in Franklin, in order, if possible, to determine the origin of the disease, reports to our local board of health that "all of them show evidence of contamination, some of them to a considerable extent." Our local board can justly congratulate itself that in its last report to the town it called attention to this very matter and warned the people of Franklin against using the water of wells, no matter how good they may at one time have been. The ground has become so full of disease germs from saturation through drainage or percolation from cesspools that it is not safe to use water from wells. The town water, notwithstanding an occasional taste and odor, is to be preferred. There is a prejudice against town water and in favor of wells, but it is not an intelligent one, and the sooner our citizens get rid of it the better. We cannot say that there are no uncontaminated wells in Franklin, but we do not know where they are. Even water from springs is not certain to be good, as some of the water found by the state board to be contaminated was taken from springs used by typhoid patients. It ought to be some satisfaction to Franklin people to have had it determined how the typhoid infection has originated. The state board advises that the wells above mentioned should be condemned and the Franklin board of health has acted accordingly.

A Chance to Give.

The local organization of King's Daughters will send out this week to friends some pledge blanks, with the hope of receiving contributions for the Home for the Aged of Norfolk county, which has been established. This is a worthy object and should receive generous support.

Woonsocket Opera House

Commencing next Monday, Oct. 22, the George W. Wilson company will play a week's engagement at the Woonsocket Opera house at popular prices. Mr. Wilson will be seen this year in a number of new plays and will be supported by a company of unusual excellence. Matinees will be given daily, commencing Tuesday, and many high-class specialties will be introduced at every performance. There will also be a half-hour picture concert given before each performance by the Ladies' orchestra. The opening bill Monday night will be "A Social Outlaw." Seats for the engagement went on sale today.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1900

CARL SCHURZ condemned Lincoln as he now condemns McKinley. Enough said about Schurz.

DURING the coming week see to it that every possible Republican is registered. This is a long step toward getting out the full Republican vote.

MARK well that even those Republicans who have not wholly agreed with President McKinley, yet vastly prefer another four years of his administration than to take any chances with Bryan.

EX-PRESIDENT HARRISON uses the strongest language possible to express his condemnation of the principles avowed by Mr Bryan. And he is credited with being competent to judge on such matters.

THE average annual value of Bryan's personal property under the Democratic administration of 1893—6 was $275, while under the Republican administration from 1897—1900 it was $5000, as by the official returns.

IT is worthy of note that the assaults on convention speakers come from Democratic inspiration or instigation. You do not hear of Democratic orators being attacked with clubs and stones by Republicans. Bear this in mind.

MR BRYAN still asserts that "16 to 1" is the real paramount issue of the campaign, and we all know it is in reality. The "imperialist" bugbear has no real influence, because even the Democrats know most of their party really approve what has been done in the Philippines and in China.

IT is becoming very plain that in case Bryan is elected, which does not now seem possible, the hard-headed business men are preparing for the worst kind of a financial panic. Do what you can to prevent it by making the Republican majority for every candidate just as large as possible.

A NET loss of seven congressmen would throw the control of the next house into the hands of the Democrats. This would ensure the election of a Democratic speaker, and a Democratic majority on all committees. To prevent such a catastrophe, be sure to vote for the Republican nominees for congress.

You do not hear of a Republican appealing for "Independent" votes. It is the Democrat who wants that support. But the moment a Democrat gets into office he forgets his "Independent" principles and friends, every time. Vote for men who have the courage of their convictions and expect you to have the same. Vote for the Republican nominees.

THE DEMOCRATS oppose "expansion" in the Philippines, but they favor it by swallowing Canada, without "the consent of the governed." Had Andrew Jackson, instead of William McKinley, annexed the Philippines, not a Democrat would have "yipped" against it. For Andrew Jackson did a good deal of expanding in his day and generation, and his fellow Democrats have ever since approved of it.

"GOOD CITIZENSHIP" voters will have a good chance to help along the good cause by voting for Republican candidates. Either the Republican nominees or the Democratic will be elected. They will be elected because the vast majority of the voters prefer either one or the other. That being the case, those who find fault with both should yet support that which most nearly meets their views, and that party is the Republican, every time. Not so much because of difference in the platforms as because of difference in the men behind the platforms.

BRYAN had an enthusiastic reception in New York on Tuesday evening, speaking to thousands of people. His address was that of a politician seeking for votes rather than that of a statesman. The significant thing about the affair was that he is "Croker's man." Croker dominated everything, and in the event of Bryan's election will be more of a political boss than Mark Hanna was ever charged with being. The thought of Croker's hand in national affairs is enough to to disgust every thinking man in the country. The voters who bury Bryan will also have the satisfaction of burying Croker also.

The Whole Truth!

There's nothing so bad for a cough as coughing. There's nothing so good for a cough as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

The 25 cent size is just right for an ordinary, everyday cold. The 50 cent size is better for the cough of bronchitis, croup, grip, and hoarseness. The dollar size is the best for chronic coughs, as in consumption, chronic bronchitis, asthma, etc.

WILHELM TO HAVE AUTOS.

The German Emperor Is Ordering a General Assortment of Horseless Vehicles.

The Germans were slow in adopting the automobile, but now the emperor has taken it under his protecting wing and it is expected to become the fad in Berlin. A number of persons connected with the Berlin court are trying to do business with it, and there is a good deal of enterprise and readiness to speculate among the courtiers on the Spree. More than a year ago the kaiser's master of the horse inquired of a well-known carriage manufacturer in the capital if he could supply him with motor cars for the conveyance of visitors from the station to his majesty's country seat, at Wildpark, near Potsdam—the new palace. Since then the imperial post office has secured some heavy vans propelled on this principle; and now Kaiser Wilhelm himself is going to try this mode of traveling. In the month of August the kaiser visited the military drill ground at Alten-Grabow, in the province of Saxony, and traveled the distance from Wusterwitz to Ziesar and thence to Nedlitz in a motor car. The carriage-maker above referred to has offered his majesty a present of three of such vehicles, which he has graciously accepted. The roads in the neighborhood were specially put in order for the convenience of the imperial party.

HAVEN FOR CLEVER THIEVES.

Criminals Find a Safe Refuge from Justice in the Republic of Honduras.

This is one corner of Central America that is at present a perfect paradise for men who have committed any crime. It is a place where the outcasts of the world's society rule the land of their adoption—and where the officials of the government protect all thieves that come to them and make it dangerous for any detective to molest them.

This is the republic of Honduras, one of the least advanced of the states in south or Central America. Honduras, indeed, is a country mostly of jungles and gigantic forests of [illegible] and rubber trees, of bugs, vampires, snakes and crocodiles, of all manner of things that creep and crawl and sting and bite; a region where life in the daytime is a misery, and at night one feels as though sleeping in red pepper.

Here in every hamlet and city are to be found men from different lands, mostly outlaws from their own country. Chicago, Boston, New York and Philadelphia all furnish their [illegible], England, France, Italy and even far away Russia have their share. They make no attempt at concealment, bear the names they were born to, wear and go along about their business as if the laws of their own country had not declared them outcasts.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. [illegible] free.

Not More Than One-Fifth of the English Words Are Used by Any Writer.

The growth of the English language is so enormous that it would be practically impossible for the most learned man to be acquainted with every word. Intelligent persons, even those engaged in the learned professions, do not make use of more than from 6,000 to 8,000 words all told, although there are properly belonging to our language over 2[illegible]. The famous writer or authority of to-day, whether he uses words to express nice shades of meaning or as technical tools of thought in his own department, must have at his command a vocabulary of from [illegible] words, the latter being the maximum acquired by any man now living. There is a large number of words which until recently have escaped the attention of lexicographers. In the text of the "Encyclopaedia Britannica" there are [illegible] words which have never been formally entered and defined in any dictionary. In the Century Dictionary there are [illegible] words found in no other, and it has been said that there is not to-day any man living who is sufficiently learned to write one average page of [illegible] pages of this dictionary. To give some idea of the tremendous growth of the language the words and phrases under the letter A have increased in 50 years from 7,000 to nearly 6[illegible].

Extent of the Florist Business.

The florist business of the United States is by no means an unimportant industry. It is estimated that the retail value of flowers sold annually is $12,5[illegible] and of potted plants $[illegible]. There are no less than [illegible] establishments in the United States devoted to the growing of plants under glass.

Steel Cast 2,000 Years Ago.

The manufacture of cast steel in India can be traced back for over 2[illegible] years, while there are also examples of wrought iron work nearly as old. Near Delhi, close to the Kutub, there is an enormous wrought iron pillar which weighs ten tons and is thought to be over 1,500 years old.

Every Movement Hurts

When you have rheumatism. Muscles feel stiff and sore and joints are painful. It does not pay to suffer long from this disease when it may be cured so promptly and perfectly by Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine goes right to the spot, neutralizes the acidity of the blood, which causes rheumatism, and puts an end to the pain and stiffness.

Biliousness is cured by Hood's Pills 25c.

Genesee Pure Food Co., Le Roy, N. Y.:

Gentlemen:—I must say in regard to GRAIN-O that there is nothing better or healthier. We have used it for years. My brother was a great coffee drinker. He was taken sick and the doctor said coffee was the cause of it and told us to use GRAIN-O. We got a package but did not like it at first, but now would not be without it. My brother has been well ever since we started to use it.

The Stimulus of Pure Blood

That is what is required by every organ of the body, for the proper performance of its functions.

It perfects all the vital processes.

It prevents biliousness, dyspepsia, constipation, kidney complaint, rheumatism, catarrh, nervousness, weakness, faintness, pimples, blotches, and all cutaneous eruptions.

It is assured by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla which acts directly and peculiarly on the blood.

This statement is proved by thousands of unsolicited testimonials.

W. P. KEETON, Woodstock, Ala., writes: "When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla my blood was impure and I had not been feeling well for some time. I was bothered very much with that tired feeling. When I had taken the medicine a few days I began to feel better, and after taking two bottles I felt like another person. That tired feeling was gone and I could do my work."

NOT A PRIZE WINNER

THIS couple of whom I write had married for love 20 years ago. He had been away for two months in the city on business and she decided to visit him in the autumn season. She had arrived the evening before. The next morning, carelessly turning over his letters, a dozen or more lying open on his table, she picked up one without an envelope, and written in his well-known handwriting. She thought perhaps it was one she had returned to him for reference. By this time the letter was unfolded and she observed that the beginning was carefully cut away, leaving no name. This was what she read:

My own dearest: At dusk I thought the battle won—but no! I had prayed that you would rescind the decree that "It cannot be." I prayed as I had never prayed before—but your calm, still eyes, as they looked tenderly upon me, had left no hope within me that you would yield.

And we must part—you and I?

Down through the vista of all the years to come I must be alone?

And you? You who have stirred my soul to its depths as no other woman has ever done—will there be no answering throb through the chasms of space that divide us?

Am I never to hold you in my arms again—kiss your eyes—your lips—your hair?

Must it only be across the border land of eternity that our spirits may commune?

Oh, my beloved, give me but one small flower to cherish, one that has lain in sweet complacence on your gentle bosom, that has felt your heartbeats as I, and I shall put my ear to it, and listen, and in fancy I again shall hear, and my eyes again shall see the rise and fall, as that same heart stirred its dainty petals. The odor will again be the sweet fragrance of you, dear, and no more I will be alone. The rose you wore last night? May I hope for it?

Farewell, you whom I love. Y——.

A drawn, tense feeling at the base of the brain caused her to place her hand at the back of her head for relief. Her face grew cold and she shivered. Gradually the cold crept on down her body until she felt chilled, chilled to the heart. Her first impulse was to put the letter back—he need never know—perhaps it was a sudden affair of his that would wear off, if only she would bravely wait. She folded it carefully, slowly, thinking as she did so that her hands would be so folded when she died. All the time she was dully wondering to whom it could be written, half hoping that he meant to send it to her. That was a silly hope, born of the wish; she and he had no need to part. There was something in the letter that quoted something, and she was quite sure she had never said it.

He had never written an ardent letter like that to her, so he must love this woman more than he had ever loved her.

He had never felt, then, the fullness of life that the highest form of love bestows. For 20 years he had been starved of the best that love gives. He had looked worn yesterday when she came; the struggle was perhaps wearing on him.

Then a wave of unuterable pity for him took possession of her. He had lost 20 years out of his life living with her.

How carefully he had hidden his sorrow; how uniformly kind and considerate he had always been. He had never been really impatient with her. He had borne with her so tenderly, even when she must have been trying in her youth-time, before her character was formed. That was the chief reason she loved him so long; had been growing old loving him.

He had sacrificed his entire life, and only now knew what love really was; now had come to him what had come to her 20 years before.

She—the other woman—should have him, for his sake.

She would ask him to whom it was written when he came. That would be the beginning of the end.

She turned to look for a chair, and in turning faced the mirror. How well she looked; how cold she was, and yet the old age she felt so wearily did not show in her face at all.

Yes, she would ask him who it was when he came. Some young and pretty woman, no doubt, who would be sorry to see the wife suffer. Of course, this woman could not help loving him, and yet she was willing to give him up. It must be that she was a girl of strong character, and a good girl, too. He would not love any other kind!

He should have the woman he loved, that was settled.

All this time she was holding the open letter. She would ask him to whom it was written, and tell him her resolve and then she would go away.

Just then she heard his step, and in another second he opened the door. She noticed that his ears were a glowing red with the crisp outer air.

She held out the letter, and her eyes filled with tears.

"Who is it, John?" she asked in a broken voice.

Then she watched the red in his ears; it must be an ordeal for him. The color would presently fade, and she would watch it go.

Listen, he was answering!

"To you;" and then he laughed. She looked. The color had not receded from the ears. Strange! Men could stand things better than women. Surely he had no feeling—no feeling, and the author of that letter!

How clumsily he lied! After 20 years of deception he ought to lie better and more reasonably!

"That is, I was thinking of you when I wrote it," he added, rather shamefacedly. "I thought once I would send it to you."

Clearly the lying was improving. He was probably regaining his composure.

"I should have appreciated it," she said, with a shade of sarcasm in her voice.

"It was one of 12 read before 12 persons at Brown's in a contest," he continued.

She looked at him silently.

"Really, I was thinking of you when I wrote it; that ought to satisfy you," he said, more seriously.

Suddenly she felt as if she had had a reprieve.

She would wait—perhaps—perhaps it was the truth. She would ask Miss B——. She would not insult him by openly doubting his word.

All she said was: "Did it take the prize?"

"No"—and this time there was genuine disappointment in his voice—"another fellow had his all written out in verse, but I don't believe he wrote it himself—and he shouldn't have had the prize."

"I don't think he ought, either," she answered in a tired way. "This is certainly very fine."

A minute or two later she decided not to ask Miss B——, because, when she looked again the color was still in his ears, and she concluded to let it go at that.—St. Louis Republic.

HIS WILL IS LOVE.

There is a comfort to the soul,
That finds in Christ a light,
And feels in this, its highest goal:
Thy will, dear Lord, is right.

When sorrow fills the heart with pain,
In Him is found release,
And spirit yields a sweet refrain:
Thy will, dear Lord, brings peace.

With disappointments of to-day
God puts us oft to test,
That on the morrow we may say,
Thy will, dear Lord, was best

Bid fears to flee. God's hand doth lead;
Let not thy faith decline.
Still pray in each dark hour of need:
Thy will be done, not mine.

Discouraged heart, be strong and know
His will is none but love.
Waiting its blessings to bestow
True riches from above.

Look up! Be comforted and feel
God's gracious presence near
To give thee strength and to reveal
His will in love made clear.

THE SUFFERER'S SONG.

Experience of a Party of Tourists Over the Sea—A Christian's Hope and Inspiration.

On the way to the Lakes of Killarney says the Christian Life, a party of tourists heard a sound of singing in a little farmhouse by the roadside. It was a man's voice in a tenor so marvelously sweet that the strangers halted some time to listen The strains traversed the whole compass of feeling, from soaring triumph to the murmur of a mother's lullaby.

"Oh, if I could hope ever to sing like that!" said one of the company, a young student of music.

A girl came out of the cottage with a basket on her arm, and as she passed the wagon with a courtesy, a wish to know the vocal genius the south of Ireland had hidden away prompted a question from the same young man.

"Will you kindly tell us who it is that sings so beautifully?"

"Yes, sir, it's my Uncle Tim," said the girl. "He's after havin' a bad turn with his leg, and so he's just singin' away the pain the while."

For a moment the astonished tourists did not know what to say. Here was an example of the melody of patience:

the anguish of the sinner
Made the sweetness of the strain.

Then one asked, tenderly: "Is he young? Will he get over the trouble?"

"No, he's gettin' a bit old now, and the doctors say he'll never be the better in this world; but," she added softly, "he's that heavenly good it would near make you cry to see him, with the tears rollin' down his cheeks with the pain, and then it is that he sings the loudest."

Somehow the listeners thought of the eternal city, and they drove on slowly, as if their wheels were pressing its streets.

"God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes," quoted one of the ladies "and there shall be no more pain."

More seldom mentioned, but equally beautiful, is a kindred elevation of spirit that lends cheer to extreme poverty and toil. A writer in the Watchman, passing through one of the narrow lanes, noticed a poor old scrubwoman on her hands and knees scouring a floor, while she sang:

"And I shall see Him face to face,
And tell the story: 'Saved by grace.'"

Heavenly hope is not a creature of circumstances, but sorrow and privation seems adapted to its culture. It is darkness that brings out the nightingales. And contrasted with the profane rage that frets and curses under distress, what a sweet and wise philosophy is singing patience!—Youth's Companion.

SERMONS IN BRIEF.

Hating penalty is no sign of good. —Congregationalist.

No man can rob you of the true riches except yourself.—Ram's Horn.

Wisdom is oft-times nearer when we stoop than when we soar.—William Wadsworth.

We ought not to be weary of doing little things for the love of God, who regards not the greatness of the work, but the love with which it is performed. —Brother Lawrence.

Annihilate not the mercies of God by the oblivion of ingratitude. Let thy diaries stand thick with dutiful mementos and asterisks of acknowledgment. —Sir Thomas Browne.

Many favors which God giveth us ravel out for want of hemming, through our unthankfulness; for though prayer purchaseth blessing, giving praise doth keep the quiet possession of them.—Thomas Fuller.

As love is the life of faith, so with the increase of love faith increases Even from man toward man faith and love grow together. The more we love, the more we understand and the more we trust one another. Pusey.

Oh, the littleness of the lives that we are living! Oh, the way in which we fail to comprehend, or, when we do comprehend, deny ourselves the bigness of that thing which it is to be a man, to be a child of God!—Phillips Brooks.

The possibilities of earth are greater than we are ready to allow. It is not Heaven, but to the faithful soul it is the gate of Heaven. Who shall despise a school taught by the Holy Spirit of God? Who shall think lightly of a house where God abides? Who shall complain of stony pillows in a field where the messengers of God come and return upon His gracious errands?

Interrupted.

They were seated in the parlor, and he was declaring his love in fervent tones. All at once she stopped him with an imperious gesture, and a look of pain overspread her countenance.

"Wait! wait!" she exclaimed in short, sharp tones.

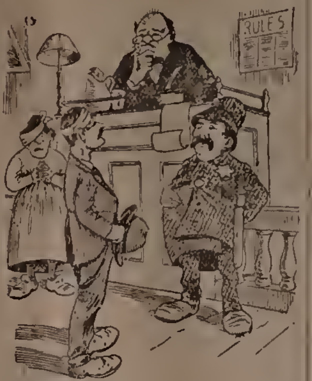
In a moment the sneeze came, and Heloise, looking tenderly up into his face, said: "As you were saying, George?"—N. Y. World.

Not on the Line.

We board the trolley car of life,
We take a seat,
And calmly wait to be put off
At Easy street.

We ask about it when the day
Is nearly done,
And the conductor merely says:
"Not on our run."
—Chicago Tribune.

HAD BEEN PUNISHED ENOUGH.



Judge—You are charged with breaking a lamp on your wife's head.

Prisoner—That lamp cost me six dollars, your honor.

Judge—Discharged.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Polite.

She sat in his lap in a cable car
And her language I won't repeat;
She blushed and arose, and he said: "Beg par-Don, pray do keep your seat."
—Puck.

The Voice of Experience.

Young Wife—I am determined to learn at what hour my husband comes home at night; yet, do what I will, I cannot keep awake, and he is always careful not to make the least noise. Is there any drug which produces wakefulness?

Old Wife—No need to buy drugs! Sprinkle the floor with tacks!—Tit-Bits.

At Saratoga.

Ferdy—I'm out of it! After buying the ring she has refused to give me her answer for a week.

Percy—Well, what of that?

Ferdy—Why, in order to stay here another week I'll have to hock the ring.—Judge.

His Misapprehension.

Farmer Honk—I hear tell that that long-necked young city feller that is boardin' with you has got pajamas?

Farmer Summertime—It's a durned lie! He's been at our house nearly two weeks now, an' he ain't drunk a drop all the time.—Puck.

Unexpected.

Frank Frankleigh—Yes, Miss Antique, to be frank with you—

Miss Antique (with a chirp)—Oh, Mr. Frankleigh, of course you may be Frank with me—but this is so sudden —N. Y. Weekly.

Not Wasted.

Guy—My life is a failure. I fill no useful part whatever in creation's plan.

Percy—Oh, yes you do; you are constantly showing the world how ridiculous a smart man can be sometimes.—Detroit Free Press.

Coming Out on Top.

Hix—I guess your friend Meeks is coming out on top after all.

Dix—How so?

Hix—I saw him purchase a bottle of hair restorer in a drug store the other day.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Oil on the Troubled Waters.

Ethel—That detestable Mrs. Bloom said that I looked 30.

Maud—How perfectly absurd!

Ethel (elated)—Frankly, now, how old do you really think I look.

Maud—About 40.—Tit-Bits.

Commercial Instinct.

"Dad, will you buy me a watch?"

"What for, my boy?"

"'Cause Freddy Jones has a dog I want, dad, an' he says he'll change it for a watch."—N. Y. World.

The Cause of His Affection.

Ma—Tommy, you seem to love pa better than you do me.

Tommy—Oh, ma, I don't mean to, but y' see, pa allus has his pockets full o' nickels.—Indianapolis Journal.

Defensive Indolence.

"Just look at that garden, David; look at those weeds!"

"Well, what's the matter with them? Ain't they thrifty?"—Chicago Record.

Gentle Little Hint.

"My dear," said Crimsonbeak to his wife the other morning, "I wish you would look over my wardrobe. I was up in my room a little while ago, and the only things I could find which had any buttons on were my kodaks!" Yonkers Statesman.

The Only Dance.

Bella—Gran'ma, don't you think the two-step ever so much nicer than the old-fashioned waltz?

Gran'ma—There's only one kind, my dear, that is worth dancing—the one when you're 20.—Brooklyn Life

Boggs—Sorry, old man, but I haven't got a cent!—N. Y. Journal.

It Makes a Difference.

"I thought you said you had only a platonic affection for him."

"True; but that was before he asked me to marry him."—Chicago Post.

His Grudge.

Mrs. Jones—I don't see what you should have against my first husband. The poor fellow is dead.

Mr. Jones—Yes; that's the only thing I've got against him.—Judge.

Banker Routs a Robber.

J. R. Garrison, cashier of the bank of Thornville, Ohio, had been robbed of health by a serious lung trouble until he tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption Then he wrote: "It is the best medicine I ever used for a severe cold or a bad case of lung trouble. I always keep a bottle on hand" Don't suffer with coughs, colds or any throat, chest or lung trouble when you can be cured so easily. Only 50c and $1. Trial bottles free at Mason's drug store.

The Thing Made Clear.

She—He says he loves me; yet he has only known me two days.

Her Friend—Well, perhaps that's the reason, dear.—Tit-Bits.

Stepped Into Live Coals.

"When a child I burned my foot frightfully," writes W. H. Eads of Jonesville, Va., "which caused horrible leg sores for 30 years, but Buckleu's Arnica Salve wholly cured me after everything else failed." Infallible for burns, scalds, cuts, sores, bruises and piles. Sold at Mason's drug store; 25c.

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2.65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save If your druggist can't supply you, it will be fowarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

Scrofula in the blood shows itself sooner or later in swellings, sores, eruptions. But Hood's Sarsaparilla completely cures it.

The Democrats will hold a rally in the Opera house on Thursday evening. The speakers will be William H. Baker, Democratic candidate for congress in the 11th district, Joseph A. Dennison and possibly Judge Putnam.

Supt. E. D. Daniels delivered two addresses at a teachers' institute held in Hingham on Friday, in the forenoon on "Courses of Study in the High School" and in the afternoon on "Latin." Both were highly spoken of.

Prof. and Mrs. L. L. Burrington of Peabody spent the Sabbath with friends in town. The professor finds his new work very congenial and has about ten school buildings and nearly sixty school teachers under his charge.

Charles Williams, who read so acceptably to an appreciative audience last winter, will give a reading Friday of next week for the benefit of the Horace Mann library. His selections will be taken largely from "To Have and to Hold."

The following ladies have qualified to play in the golf contest between the Franklin and Cumberland clubs on next Thursday afternoon on the links here: Miss King, Miss Sherman, Miss Rathbun, Miss Eisenhardt, Mrs. Thayer, Miss Ray, Mrs. Bassett and Miss Stott.

The supreme court has just decided that when a railroad corporation lets the hack privileges to any party it prevents others from soliciting passengers at the station, the ground being taken that the presence of others there constitutes a trespass.

The remains of Cornelius Sullivan, an aged and respected resident of Bellingham, who died Thursday, were brought here for interment in St. Mary's cemetery Saturday morning, a requiem mass being previously celebrated in the chapel by Rev. Father Lee.

Rev. I. W. Sneath and C. B. Johnson represent the Congregational church at the ecclesiastical council of the Milford Congregational church, October 30, to formally dismiss Rev. Mr. Woodbury from the church pastorate, according to Congregational custom.

A meeting of the King's Daughters and Sons will be held next Friday evening, at 7.30, in the parlor of the Universalist church. At this meeting Mrs. Haslam will give her report of the convention held in East Weymouth. It is hoped that all members will be present.

At the Universalist church Sunday evening Rev. D. M. Hodge gave an interesting address on the religious condition of the country a century ago. The intense religious convictions on the one side and the indifference and agnostic tendencies on the other were clearly defined.

That was a fierce contest on the Dean campus on Saturday, when the Deans met the strong eleven from the Friends' school of Providence. The playing continued till about dark, some rattling good plays on both sides resulting. Dean, though outplayed and beaten by a score of 21 to 5, put up a stiff fight.

All who heard Henry T. Bailey, agent of the state board of education, will wish to hear him again. He will give an address in the hall of the Horace Mann High school Tuesday, Oct. 23, at 7.45. The public is most cordially invited to attend and take part in the discussion which is to follow the address.

The Cantabrigia club of Cambridge opened its literary meetings brilliantly on Friday, Oct. 19, in the Newtowne club house, with a lecture by Howard Malcolm Ticknor, A. M., of this place, on "A New View of Portia." The lecture was appealing and suggestive, from a human as well as from a literary point of view.

There was a large attendance of ladies and gentlemen in Odd Fellows' hall last evening to listen to Rev. Dr. DeNormandie, but for some unexplained reason the speaker failed to arrive. Miss Hamlin very kindly stepped into the breach and without preparation gave a very interesting account of her experiences in Paris and at the fair.

The remains of James W. Wilkinson, a veteran of the civil war, who passed away at the soldiers' home in Chelsea last Thursday, were brought here Friday and funeral services held at 23 Cottage street Sunday afternoon, Rev. F. B. Sleeper officiating. The deceased was 65 years and 5 months of age. The interment was at Sheldonville.

S. C. Bourne, with fifty-four others, gathered Wednesday afternoon in the old ancestral house of the Bourne family in Bourne, Mass., to witness the marriage of Miss Helen L. Bourne, daughter of the late Capt. Henry A. Bourne, president of the Old Dominion Steamship company of New York city, to the Rev. Mark B. Taylor, pastor of the Park Congregational church, Brooklyn. The ancient house, (built in 1672) looked pretty in its autumn decorations. Miss Bourne is a niece of our fellow townsman.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Rowe of Harlem, N. Y., were guests of Dr. A. J. and J. C. Gallison last week. Mr. Rowe is a nephew of ex Gov. Perham of Maine and an old schoolmate of Dr. A. J. Gallison in Maine. He is the general agent of a number of the big New York life insurance companies and was touring from New York to the White Mountains on a tandem with his wife.

Cyril LeClair, who has been ill with typhoid fever the past few weeks, succumbed to the disease at midnight Sunday at his home on North Park street. He was 40 years of age and leaves a wife and five children. He was a member of Fidelity lodge, A. O. U. W., and a delegation from the order will attend the funeral, which will be held tomorrow morning from St. Mary's chapel.

The friends of John Ewen, formerly of this place, but who has been for seven years a loom fixer in Texas, will be interested to know that he is at present in Philadelphia. Mr. Ewen has just received his certificate for the designing course from the American Correspondence School of Textiles, New Bedford, Mass. He will couple this knowledge of designing with his experience in the weave room.

Charles Whitney was struck by an electric car near Hoag lake Thursday morning and had one shoulder broken. Whitney was walking on the track, and when the car approached stepped to one side, and when the car had nearly passed him, in some way he got too near and the rail on the rear end struck his shoulder. Whitney was brought to Franklin and attended by Dr. Gallison and later sent to the hospital at Boston. Whitney was employed on the Chilson place, near Hoag lake, and had a basket of provisions with him at the time of the accident.

The farm house owned by A. M. Waite and occupied by Lewis Leighton on the Wrentham road was destroyed by fire that was discovered in the milk house attached to the dwelling about 2 o'clock yesterday morning. Three alarms were rung in. The fire department did good service in preventing the fire spreading to the outbuildings, which contained 50 head of cattle, but were unable to save the dwelling, milk house or granary owing to the headway attained by the flames when the firemen arrived. A large quantity of potatoes that were stored in the cellar were destroyed. Mr. Leighton and family had barely time to escape with their lives, but a piano and some of the household furniture were saved. The loss will reach $3,000, on which there is an insurance of $1,500.

The Norfolk county temperance convention held at Bellingham Thursday was presided over by Sadford W. Billings of Sharon. Dr. Albro of Milford and Rev. F. B. Sleeper of Franklin were among the speakers. The army canteen was referred to in scathing terms, and George Bennett of Northbridge said he read the Voice and didn't believe it would lie, and wanted every voter to vote straight prohibition. He had known rumsellers whom he would believe sooner than he would some professed Christians. Rev. F. B. Sleeper believed temperance reform must come through the Christian church, and thought the outlook was encouraging in that direction. Dr. Albro didn't feel as hopeful as Rev. Mr. Sleeper, but was not disposed to dispute the point. As usual the Bellingham people gave the visitors a cordial welcome and comfortable and bountiful entertainment.

Four candidates were baptized Sunday evening at the Baptist church in the presence of a large audience. Rev. F. B. Sleeper gave an earnest discourse on "Special Work for Special Need." He said the church is lacking in heroic effort. We are fully consecrated unto that which is pleasant and easy, but we refuse the difficult moral and spiritual undertakings that demand sacrifice, and suffering, and deepest courage of soul. The great glory of the saint lies in overcoming mighty obstacles, and like the shepherd pressing his way through dangers and thickets and stinging thorns after the sheep that have wandered from the fold. To help those who need no help amounts to nothing. But to carry deliverance to those enthralled in evil, to bind up the broken-hearted and to make the weak strong in Christ constitutes the great and divine mission of the Christian. We need to pattern after the devotion and heroism of the early church.

John Kingsley was sentenced to three months in Dedham jail at the session of the district court here on Saturday, the charge being the larceny of a dog from the premises of Patrick Collins of Fisher street. Associate Justice Whitaker was on the bench. Kingsley filed a notice of appeal, but was unable to furnish bonds for his appearance at the December term of court and he was taken to Dedham in the afternoon. When on the way to the Medway car in charge of Deputy Sheriff Fitzpatrick a request was made by Kingsley that he be permitted to go into the Jog Along store to leave an overcoat which he carried. Once in the store he slipped out the back door and ran down onto the railroad track as far as the Colonial rubber works, when he crossed over to the Milford track. Officer Redpath had chased him from Nason's crossing and succeeded in capturing him on the Milford track near Beaver pond. The deputy sheriff took Kingsley to Dedham on the 4.15 car.

Probably nineteen twentieths of the happiness you will ever have you will get at home. The independence that comes to a man when his work is over and he feels that he has run out of the storm into the quiet harbor of home, where he can rest in peace and with his family, is something real. It does not make much difference whether you own your house or have one little room in that house. You can make that one little room a true home to you. You can people it with such moods, you can turn to it with such sweet fancies, that it will be fairly luminous with their presence, and it will be to you the very perfection of a home.—Exchange.

Not Yet "Up to the Selectmen."

We have received a communication asking if the selectmen propose to permit the M., A and W. Street Railway company to run cars at intervals greater than one hour, when the terms of the charter read as follows: "Said railway company shall run its cars daily, and, excepting Sundays, at least as often as once an hour from 7 a. m. to 10 p. m., so as to furnish reasonable accommodation to the public." We have interviewed a member of the board and he asserts that it is the privilege of any citizen who feels that he is aggrieved to petition to the selectmen to have the matter investigated, and if the company is exceeding its rights to have the matter corrected.

Everybody Welcome.

A teachers' institute, under the direction of the state board of education, will be held in the Horace Mann building tomorrow, beginning at 9.15. The following will be the programme:

Epworth League Literary.

The literary meeting of the Epworth league, to be held at the residence of Miss Lulu Willard, 16 Dean avenue, tomorrow evening, at 8 o'clock, bids fair to be one of the best ever held thus far, judging from the program. Rev. Mr. Quickmire is a bright and entertaining speaker and a most profitable evening is assured. All young people who are interested will be most cordially welcome.

Following is the program:

The Campaign Now On—Remarks by Third Vice President.
Duett—"The Beautiful City of God," Gebel
Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Stewart.
Current Events,
Miss Emma C. Enegren.
Paper, "Richard Newcomb,"
Miss Mary E. Bright.
Instrumental,
Miss Jessie Hosie.
Address—"A Pilgrimage! A Wheelback!"
Rev. Samuel Quickmire, B. A., of Boston.
An Anecdote of the C. E. Convention, London,
Rev. S. Arthur Cook.
Duett—"Sweet Peace, the Gift of God's Word," Billhorn
Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Stewart.
Quotations—A social game for all.

Happy Children.

More delighted children it would be difficult to find than those who enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. E. K. Ray, at Elm farm, last Saturday, about thirty mothers of the Mothers' section and about fifty children being warmly welcomed by Mrs. Ray in a neat speech. She was assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Broenniman, who added noticeably to the pleasure of the occasion by entertaining the children with fascinating stories. There were little tots, and older ones who proudly asserted "I'm getting a big boy now," the ages ranging from one to ten years. Music was furnished by Miss Gould, and marches, games and dances were enjoyed. Ice cream, cake, fancy crackers, etc., were partaken of, and young and old voted it an occasion of rare enjoyment. Dainty little programs were given each child to be saved as memorabilia of the occasion. The refinement of happiness which one receives by affording it to others was splendidly illustrated by this afternoon of enjoyment.

Death of William Mann.

William Mann passed away this morning about 5 o'clock. He had not been quite so well of late, though his immediate death was not expected. He had taken some nourishment about a half-hour before, and Mrs. Mann was dozing. When she awoke later she noticed that he was still sitting in his chair, but not breathing. The end came very quietly and painlessly. Owing to his malady he could not lie down, but slept sitting. He was 82 years of age. Obituary will appear on Friday.

An Explanation.

Some comment is made upon the slowness with which the cars upon the Medway & Medfield Street railway climb the Franklin hill, and some people attribute the same to lack of power at the station furnishing the same. Such is not the fact; the difficulty is purely an electrical one. The street railway contracts with the Medfield Electric Light and Power company for a supply of electricity of a certain pressure or voltage at the generating station, to which feed wires are run by the street railway company. By the time the current reaches the Medway hill there is a large drop, not in the quantity of current, but in the voltage or electrical pressure, due to the resistance in the line, which the current encounters in passing through the same. And that drop at that point is not constant, but increases with any increase in the load carried, while the voltage at the station is always practically constant. By actual measurement at this point the drop may run as high as seventy per cent., depending upon the load at that place.

As a matter of fact, the pressure at the station is automatically increased slightly with increasing load up to about ten per cent. with full load. It is not well to increase the voltage more because of danger of burning out lamps and motors at other points on the line where the drop at any particular moment might not be heavy.

Three ways are found to overcome the difficulty encountered at this hill: One by an increase in copper in the feeders, which in this particular instance would be very expensive. Secondly, putting in near the hill, or at the lower station, a booster, so called, which automatically takes a certain amount of the current, at a given or low voltage, and increases the voltage at the point desired, but that is open to the objection that it creates what is known as a surging current, dangerous to both lamps and motors, and increases the fuel cost nearly seventy per cent. The third, and most feasible way, is to install a storage battery at, or near, the hill. To this the current is fed automatically. It acts as a great reservoir of power, being supplied when the cars are taking a normal or less amount in running, and then when any car has to take a large amount the storage battery instantly gives forth its current. A small drop in the line voltage near the battery causes the battery to supply its stored current at a high voltage at that point, thus preventing any large drop there.

There is no piece of machinery which will do so much work with so little attention as a good commercial storage battery of the present day. It may be charged today and at the end of three months give out eighty-five per cent. of the energy with which it has been stored.

The street railway company has, I understand, the matter of installation of a storage battery at that hill under advisement, which, if installed, will add greatly to the safety and comfort of passengers, as well as economy of operation of the road.

The Medfield Electric Light and Power company maintains at its station for this road exclusively one three-hundred horse power Westinghouse generator and one two hundred horse power General Electric machine, either one of which would run a road double the size of this road, running four times the number of cars, under the electrical conditions contracted for with us.

J. J. FEELY,
Treasurer Medfield Electric Light and Power Company.

COMMUNICATIONS.

[The editor assumes no responsibility for matter under this caption. This column is entirely at the disposal of the public, avoiding, as far as possible, trivial and controversial matter.]

Of Vital Importance.

In a communication to the SENTINEL March 3, 1899, I said: "Towns with public waterworks must have efficient drainage or suffer a fearful penalty in destruction of life. Shutting our eyes will not give immunity. An enormous amount of water polluted with filth and excrement has destroyed our wells, many of which have been converted into cesspools. These overflowing have saturated the soil with filth in all directions. The old wells are filled with horrible decaying excrement. The emanations from these are a fearful menace to health, finding their way into our homes and living as household gods by our hearthstones. When once the germs of water-borne diseases, like typhoid fever, dysentery, malaria, etc., are planted on this inviting soil an epidemic of fearful virulence will be upon us and the death angel will reap an appalling harvest. Let us meet this question squarely and deal with it in a business like manner. In any event it is a condition, not a theory that confronts us."

This condition has been vastly removed by our system of drainage, thanks to the foresight of our people.

Again, I protest against the indiscriminate, sensational use of the terms "typhoid" and "typhoid fever" used in our beautiful town. A few sporadic cases of any disease do not constitute an "epidemic." In this connection I quote from a letter which I recently received from the state board of health, "this condition in your town has not been called an epidemic by the board."

J. C. GALLISON,
Chairman of Selectmen of Franklin.

A Warm Greeting.

Forty five members of Division 8, A. O. H., went to Milford in a special trolley car Friday evening upon invitation of Division 15, the latter having an anniversary celebration on the above date and arranged for a social smoke talk. Upon the arrival of the Franklin delegation at Milford they were met by a committee from Division 15, and headed by a drum corps, were escorted to the Hibernian rooms in Church block. Elaborate preparations had been made for the entertainment of the Franklin guests and a fine musical and literary programme was carried out after the visitors had been welcomed in a neat speech by Dr. William J. Welch, president of Division 15. Other addresses were made by ex State President J. F. Stratton of Division 7 of Milford, County President J. J. Rogers of Worcester, G. H. Sheahan of Boston, editor of the Hibernian, and M. F. Kearns, president of Division 8. A bountiful collation was served during the evening, and altogether the smoke-talk was one long to be remembered with pleasure by the 250 Hibernians who participated. The Franklin delegation returned home at 12.30.

This is what the poor editor has to "run up against:" "Send me a few copies of your paper which had the obituary and verses about the death of my little child a week ago today. And be sure to publish the inclosed clipping about my niece's marriage. And I wish you would mention in your local columns, if it don't cost me nothing, that I am going to have a public sale and will rent my farm; also that I have a few extra calves to sell. Send me ten or fifteen copies of the paper free, as times is hard and I can't afford to waste money on sich things. I am er life-long Republican." Comment is needless.

Men Supplanting Women. With carefully gleaned statistics, Edward Bok, in Ladies' Home Journal, shows that the number of women in business is decreasing, and will continue rapidly to grow less. "The tide of women rushing pell-mell into all kinds of business has been stemmed—in fact it is already receding, and perceptibly so," he contends. "It has already been asserted by female agitators that the growing tendency to dismiss women from various business positions is because of the opposition of men to the employment of women. On the contrary, men were willing to have women go into business pursuits, and it was men who opened positions for them. Undoubtedly this was largely due to the selfish business reason that women would work for lower wages than men. But with the influx there necessarily came into the business world a great deal of incompetent female help. For a time incompetency was overlooked, because of the lower wages. Gradually, however, there came the inevitable weeding process, temporarily stayed by the business depression of the past few years. When prosperous times came it was different, and it is a very significant story which accurate statistics tell, that more women have been discharged from business positions during the past year of prosperity, even taking into consideration the larger number employed, than in any previous year."

An affecting story comes from Philadelphia of the application for divorce by a deaf mute wife from her deaf mute husband. The history of a married life of this character can be imagined, to some extent. Naturally the matrimonial experience would begin in a quiet wedding and a quiet married life should follow. Nevertheless, although loud words were unknown, exasperating language was possible. The wife complains that her husband "called her names" on his fingers. We all know that it takes two to make a quarrel, and it would appear that a deaf mute possesses superior faculties for avoiding quarrels. As the wife could not hear what the husband was saying, all she needed to do was to turn her back, that she might not see the gyrations of his finger tips. But possibly this procedure would become wearisome at length. At all events, a Philadelphia court has been asked to pronounce the marriage a failure and break the bonds.

A peach grower near Georgetown, Del., protected his trees from the depredations of fruit thieves this summer by conspicuously displaying this legend on signs nailed to the fence surrounding his orchard: "Caution! This Fence is surmounted by a Live Electric Wire!" The wire could be seen on top of the fence, strung on glass insulators and no one attempted to meddle with it, but now that he has marketed his crop the owner of the orchard admits that it was a "dummy."

A St. Louis druggist recently advertised for "an accurate, registered, thin drug clerk, with a mustache." When asked why he wanted an assistant with these special qualifications, the druggist explained that experience had taught him that a young and attractive clerk was of more value in selling to women, particularly those buying soda water. Corpulent clerks, he added, are specially to be avoided on this account.

The number of cut roses sold annually in the markets of the United States is estimated at 100,000,000, valued at $9,0000.000; 100,000,000 carnations, valued at $4,000,000; violets, 75,000,000, valued at $750,000; chrysanthemums, 50,-000,000, valued at $500,000. The capital invested in carnations alone is said to be $2,000,000, and an even greater amount in chrysanthemums.

Eruptions

Dry, moist, scaly tetter, all forms of eczema or salt rheum, pimples and other cutaneous eruptions proceed from humors, either inherited, or acquired through defective digestion and assimilation.

To treat these eruptions with drying medicines is dangerous.

The thing to do is to help the system to discharge the humors, and to strengthen the digestive and assimilative functions against their return.

Hood's Sarsaparilla can be confidently relied upon to do that, according to thousands of voluntary testimonials.

It effects radical and permanent cures.

"I was troubled with eczema for some time, but have had no return of the disease since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla." J. G. HINES, Franks, Ills.

"I was troubled with pimples on my face and back and chafed skin on my body. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me of both troubles." MISS ALVINA WOLTER, Box 212, Algona, Wis.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

is positively unequaled—the medicine for all humors.

HOOD'S PILLS are the best cathartic.

DOG COULDN'T STAND IT.

The Excitement Was Too Much and It Expired While Watching Women in a Fight.

They were only sisters, but the merry way in which they plucked out each other's hair by the roots in the vestibule entrance to a Dearborn avenue apartment house indicated a long standing mutual hatred, reports the Chicago Chronicle. Several hundred excited spectators gathered from the street and near-by flats, but among them all there was none who evinced any desire to separate the women who were pounding each other and rolling on the floor in a confusion and strenuosity that won the plaudits of the crowd.

"Choke her, Ida," shouted a fat man who sided with the woman that had gained the upper hand and was scratching her opponent's face with fingers that worked like a tiny tedder.

It was the landlord who rushed into the crowd in a laudable effort to part the combatants. At his heels and as much excited as his master came his pet terrier. Around and around the little dog whirled, barking loudly while the landlord exerted his strength to end the fight. Just as its owner succeeded in his errand of peace the terrier fell over on its side, dead. The excitement had been too much for its weak heart.

Too Ignorant for Kansas.

A Kansas man en route to the Paris exposition declares that the only time he ever really lost his nerve was when the sailors on the ship commenced to load up the lifeboats with water and biscuits. He says that he didn't know that this was done once a week in order to have the boats always in readiness, and felt sure a great storm was coming that would swamp them all. "I was scared and asked the captain about it," he says, "and the captain laughed at me. That made me mad. These captains put on too much dog, anyway. There isn't one of them that could tell the difference between a self-binder and a strawstacker."

To Protect Wild Animals.

An act for the prevention of cruelty to wild animals has just become effective in England. The new law extends the provisions of the act, which has heretofore extended only to domestic animals, to all birds, fishes and reptiles not included in that measure, and makes offenders liable to three months' imprisonment or a fine of £5.

Bovine Sanctity in India.

The sacredness of the cow has been enormously costly in India this famine year. When the rains failed and the pastures dried up, instead of killing and curing the cattle for food, and so helping to tide over the famine time, the cattle starved with their masters.

PERSONAL ITEMS.

Gen. De Wet, the Boer commander has proved himself a shrewd man of business. He gained a fair fortune from his skillful working of his farm and this he has increased by speculation.

Enthusiasm for music is leading the earl of Dysart to make the rounds of his cottagers and to present a piano to each family where he finds that any of the children show an aptitude for music.

Leif Ericksen, who led a band of Norsemen on the expedition which resulted in what is supposed to be the earliest discovery of America, is to be honored by the Chicago society that bears his name. A statue is to be erected soon.

Pet names are of frequent use in the royal family of England. The duke of York is called "Mumsniff," and the duchess of Fyfe "Her Royal Shyness." Little Prince Edward of York has always been known as "the new boy." Princess Patricia of Connaught, born on St. Patrick's day, is dubbed "Paddy."

Speaker Gully is the fifth who has presided over the house of commons since the queen began to reign. As speaker he receives £5,000 a year and residence at Westminster. When he retires he will receive a peerage and a pension of £4,000 a year. Mr. Gully is a descendant of a prizefighter, John Gully, who became a member of parliament and a colliery proprietor.

Ex-King Milan finds it more difficult every day to borrow money. His debts and his difficulties make his life very bitter. He is placed on the blacklist of Carlsbad's business people, who warn all their friends against "a certain Milan, formerly king of Servia," and announce that no goods should be sold to him except on a cash basis.

ENGINEERING INTERESTS.

The order of [illegible] guns and two destroyers for the Turkish navy has been placed with Messrs. Krupp, of Essen, notwithstanding that the tender of Messrs. Armstrong, Whitworth & Co., of Great Britain, was over $400,000 less than that of the German firm.

The British admiralty are introducing a new weapon into the English navy. It is a modification of the Hotchkiss, but instead of being quick-firing the breech mechanism is self-feeding and automatic. The gun throws a three-pound shell at the rate of 400 rounds per minute. It will probably be officially designated as the three-pound automatic gun.

A remarkable engineering feat is soon to be attempted in Boston—the moving of a six-story brick and stone hotel building from one site to another without taking it apart. The ground upon which the building now stands is of a swampy character, and 750 piles will have to be driven around the foundations of the structure to support the [illegible] jacks upon which it will be raised from its foundations prior to its removal. It will be transferred to its new location, 42 feet distant, on steel rollers.

A giant schooner, capable of carrying 5,000 tons of coal, has been launched at a Maine port. From the two-master of 350 tons the American schooner has been enlarged to a six-master of 2,700 tonnage, in whose double holds can be stored 2½ times the cargo of former days. The crew of the new ship will number only 14. Sails and anchors are handled by steam-hoisting gear, and the vessel is provided with electric bells, telephones and steam heat in her cabins.

VARIOUS INDUSTRIES.

A complete list of glass factories at the opening of the 1900-1901 "fire" shows that there are 380 in the country. Indiana leads the list with 117, five more than Pennsylvania, which comes next. The others fall far behind, Illinois coming last with three—one each for window glass, bottles and jars and pressed ware.

A Colorado inventor proposes a promising improvement in car ventilation whereby the hood is fitted with a sheet of felt which a stream of water keeps damp, says the Railway and Engineering Review. The dust entering with the air impinges upon the felt and is thus caught out from the air, which, after this purification, then is deflected into the car.

Pearls are being found in great quantities in the Black and St. Francois rivers in southwest Missouri. A Poplar Bluff fisherman found the first gem in an ordinary mussel which he picked up on a shoal in Black river. He sold the gem to a St. Louis jeweler for $125 and since then hundreds of people have flocked to the rivers to engage in pearl fishing. Many valuable gems have been found. Nearly all are white, with tinting of different hues, and range in size from a grain of wheat to an ordinary pea.

EXPOSITION NOTES.

Dom Carlos I., artist and king of Portugal, has received a silver medal at the Paris exhibition for a marine sketch in pastel.

The presentation of the awards of the Paris exposition was an elaborate ceremony. A number of decorations of the Legion of Honor have been distributed.

The panorama of the battle of Champigny, by the great French military painters De Neuville and Detaille, has had a checkered career. When the panorama ceased to pay, it was cut into pieces and the groups were sold separately. The central scene was exhibited in several French towns and was finally pawned. It is at present in the section known as "Old Paris," at the exposition.

Her Darling Little Brother.

About half an hour had been expended by the bashful young man in a series of advances and retreats, and little Johnny's cramped position behind the sofa was becoming somewhat painful.

"I wish I dared—" the young man commenced on a new attack, when the couple were electrified by an impatient exclamation behind them: "Aw, make a break! She's dead easy!"—Brooklyn Life.

Her Finance.

Mag—Now dat she's got so rich, I s'pose she's shook Billy Casey dat used ter be her steady comp'ny.

Kit—Not much. She lets him take care of her roll now.

Mag—Git out!

Kit—Dat's right. I sez to 'er: "Is Billy yer steady comp'ny yet?" and she drawed 'erself up an' sez: "Mr. Casey is my financier."—Philadelphia Press.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

TOOK HIM SERIOUSLY

"ANYONE desiring to purchase an eligible suburban residence, three minutes walk from the railway station and 25 minutes' ride from the city, ten commodious rooms, hot and cold water, furnace stable, chicken coop, superior cistern and 150-foot frontage, can get the same at a bargain by applying to me before the thing wears off." Thus Dugway.

"What's the trouble with the desirable residence?" inquired his right-hand man "Mosquitoes?"

"Haven't see a skeeter this summer—not to get a good look at it," said Dugway.

"I suppose they don't come around before dark, and the screens keep them out of the house. Perhaps the suburb is malarious?"

"I've lived there for four years now, and out of a teeming population of nearly 150 souls I have not heard of a case of sickness except one, and that was a man who fell off the roof of a house. The taxes are not excessive, the air is pure, there is no license accorded to cows, the sidewalks are the best you ever saw. There has never been a burglary, a misappropriation of the village funds, a scandal or a keg-beer picnic. The trouble is with the people; they haven't got any sense of humor."

"They're not to blame for that; there are lots of people that way. I am myself. I could never quite understand your jokes, although I know that they must be good because they seem to please you so. I think sometimes that you have a humorous development about a century ahead of your time The present age doesn't appreciate your funny things, but if you had some recording Boswell to put them down you would make the sides of the next generation ache. As it is, you simply make me ache all over."

Dugway accepted the reproof meekly "You know my boy Vance?" he said.

The right-hand man had heard of that boy before, but he knew it was of no use to object when Dugway started in to tell a story of him.

"It seems to me that I have heard you speak of him—some few hundred thousand times, more or less; but don't let that stop you. I think Vance comes tolerably near holding you level, and I've got a deep respect for him on that account."

"Well, Vance came to me the other day and said that he needed 50 cents. It is surprising the thirst for gold that afflicts the present generation. That boy is always needing money for something or other. If his needs increase with his age he will be the most unsatisfied man living or else he will chisel Cecil Rhodes out of the earth.

"I said to him: 'My son, it isn't two days since I gave you a quarter, and yesterday I gave you a kite, so I think you might let those hold you for awhile.' By the way, I want to tell you about that kite. You know I have been trying to inculcate a spirit of unselfishness and self-abnegation in the boy He has, I am sorry to say, frequently shown a tendency to consider himself before others It is very sad and not at all what you would naturally expect of a son of mine, but it is the truth nevertheless. Vance had a corking good kite, and one of his little playmates the son of poor but honest parents, hadn't any kite at all. I told him that I thought it would be a very nice thing if he gave poor Jimmy his kite.

"'I don't want to,' said Vance.

"'I know you don't want to, my little son,' I said, 'but I think, nevertheless, that it would be a very lovely and noble thing for you to do. Jimmy is always very kind to you, and it would please me to see you good to him. I don't tell you to do it, you know The kite is yours, and you can do what you like with it.'

"He went away hanging his head, but the next evening when I came home he told me that he had been with Jimmy helping him to fly his kite.

"'Has Jimmy got a kite?' I asked.

"'Yes,' said Vance, 'I gave him mine.'

"I didn't say anything much, but when I got downtown I went into a store and I got Vance a nice new kite, and when I got home I gave him the parcel. He didn't seem to be very much surprised, somehow, but he opened up the parcel and looked the thing over critically. It was evidently a disappointment. I asked him if he didn't like it

"'Oh, ye-es,' he says, 'only I don't see that it's any better than the one I gave Jimmy.'

"But I was going to tell you about that 50 cents. When I demurred the kid said 'Why, it's only half a dollar.'

"I told him that half a dollar was a sum not to be spoken of lightly. I told him of the many useful things that half a dollar would purchase, and how a plumber would toil and sweat for half an hour for no greater guerdon. I told him about his grandfather, who started out in life at a salary of $240 per annum and saved $220 out of it the first year—and lots of other things. I said: 'Do you know how long it would take you to earn half a dollar?'

"He said it would depend upon the kind of a job he got, and with the recollection of my hundred-dollar bluff in my mind—the time I offered him that to stay awake all night, you know—I told him that I would give him five dollars if he would earn a dollar in one day. He said that was good enough for him, and went away, and I didn't think any more of it until he came to me with a shining cartwheel the next day and claimed his bonus.

"'How did you get this, Vance?' I asked I didn't want to seem to distrust the boy, but at the same time I had my suspicions He is rather sensitive sometimes, and he looked injured when I asked him that question. But with the light of candor and truth shining from his ingenious young countenance he told me that he had earned it.

"'I went to Mrs. Mitchell's first,' he said, 'and told her that I wanted to earn some money, and she let me carry in an armful of wood for her, and gave me ten cents for it. Then I went over to grandma's and she said she hadn't any work for me to do, but she would give me ten cents and let me do something for her some other time After that I tried Mrs. Aylsworth, and Mrs Aylsworth sent me on an errand down to the store to get her five cents' worth of candy, and when I came back she gave me the candy and the change out of the quarter for getting it. That only made 50 cents, and I was getting pretty tired by that time, but I went to Mrs. Halsman, and I told her that you were going to give me five dollars if I earned a dollar, and she laughed and said for me to sit by the baby and keep the flies off it while she went upstairs; so I did There wasn't very many flies around, though, so I didn't mind that work so much "'In about ten minutes Mrs. Halsman came downstairs again and asked me how much money I had earned, and I told her so she said she thought I had done enough for one day, and gave me the other 50 cents Now give me that five dollars, pa.'

"That's the sort of thing that I complain of," concluded Dugway. "Those women might have known, if they had had any sense of humor, that I was just playing a little joke on my son—a joke, mind you, with a certain moral purpose. But they chose to take it quite seriously."—Chicago Daily Record.

Wise Beyond His Years.

"Who are the greatest money-makers in this world?" asked the teacher.

"I know," yelled the small boy in the back of the room. "The Turks and the Mormons."

"Why do you say that?" demanded the teacher.

"Because they have to be," replied the small boy, promptly. "Look at the number of wives they have!"—Chicago Post.

A Few Words about

Pain-Killer

A prominent Montreal clergyman, the Rev. James H. Dixon, Rector St. Judes and Hon. Canon of Christ Church Cathedral, writes:—"Permit me to send you a few lines to strongly recommend PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER. I have used it with satisfaction for thirty-five years. It is a preparation which deserves full public confidence."

Barge Office Tragedies.

Barge office desertions are painfully common. Too often men allow their wives and children to come to America, where they expect to be received with open arms, and the latter discover that the husband and father has, in the interval, attached himself to mettle more attractive, and the deserted ones are deported. Like cases occur with the aged, and these are truly pitiable. When the old people become a burden to the children in Europe, they are sent with [illegible] ceremony to their children here. The latter are perhaps too selfish to have regard for the old folks, and too often they are deported, perhaps only to be shuttlecocked back again within a few months. One old woman was shuttlecocked across four times within a year, barred out on both sides of the water, and died at sea, homeless and friendless, with children in both continents prosperous and well able to make her declining years at least peaceful and calm.—Ainslee's Magazine.

Nice for the Necktie Buyer.

A rather loudly dressed "gentleman" stepped into the necktie department of a big London shop and in a supercilious tone that would have nettled a graven image into anger uttered the single mandatory word: "Neckties!" Then he threw back his head as if the assistant were entirely beneath his notice. This top-lofty air aggravated the assistant, but he quickly displayed a number of late patterns with a deferential air.

"These," said he, obsequiously, "are the very newest things, and are excellent quality at a shilling."

"A shilling!" haughtily snapped the customer; "shilling! Do I look like a man that would wear a shilling necktie? Is there anything about me to indicate that—"

"I beg your pardon, sir," meekly interposed the assistant, "the sixpenny counter is at the other end of the shop."—London Tit-Bits.

Teaching the Young Idea.

A Manchester lawyer noticed the other evening that his youthful son, who was studying arithmetic, seemed very restless. Getting impatient, the father broke out:

"What on earth ails you? Why can't you sit still? Wriggling about every minute."

"It's all your fault," murmured the boy.

"Why is it?"

"'Cos I asked you last night how many a billion was, and you said it was a thundering lot. Teacher asked me the same question to-day, and I gave the same reply. That's why I can't keep still."—London Answers.

A Royal Editor.

There is at least one newspaper which is edited by a king. In faraway New Zealand there is an interesting little eight-page paper, with three columns to a page, printed in both the English and the native tongue, and called the Pleiades of Seven Stars. Its editor is no less a person than his royal highness, Tawhiao. It is true that this potentate is not an independent sovereign, but when he descends from the royal throne to the editorial chair, then, indeed, he is monarch of all he surveys.—N. Y. Sun.

Strength by Using Smith's Green Mountain Renovator.

Why Strength.

Because this famous Body Builder is made in Vermont, of pure, wholesome herbs, redolent of the fragrant woods, green hills and bracing air of the Green Mountains. These herbs and plants are so combined as to be powerful agents in assisting nature to impart bodily vigor to nerves, muscles and brain.

I write you from St Vincent's Hospital, East Lake, Tenn. The hardships of the campaign brought on typhoid fever. I recovered from the fever all right, but have been unable to regain my strength until I began using your Smith's Green Mountain Renovator. I knew of its reputation in New England, and sent for some. I felt its strengthening effects in a few days, and in a week's time gained four pounds. This was four weeks ago. I am now ready to leave the Hospital, and have gained [illegible] lbs., strength returned, appetite returned, muscles firm and feel like a new man—better than ever before, and am frank to say that I owe my speedy and complete recovery to your wonderful preparation,

DIVINE CONSOLATION.

A Side of the Character of Providence Which Is Revealed Only in Our Distress.

The late Dr. W. M Barbour once preached a sermon from the text: "He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass," in which, with the delicacy and skill of which he was master, he showed how the mown grass is just in the condition to be enriched by the rain, and in how many ways the Divine gift of rain ministers to the needs of the earth, drawing therefrom choice lessons of comfort and consolation to those in affliction. It was a beautiful suggestion of the peculiar receptiveness of those who have been afflicted and have learned to accept affliction in a lowly humble spirit for the peculiar blessings which God can bestow at no other time and upon no other mood.

God understands us through and through, and never makes a mistake in dealing with us. Probably we might never learn, adequately, at any rate, the possibilities of His infinite tenderness and compassion if we were not reduced by sorrow in some form to such a state as to need them. There is a whole side of the Divine character which is revealed in our distress which, but for affliction, might go unknown and unnoticed. The price is worth the paying, even by suffering if the suffering bring this precious assurance of the Divine presence and comfort.

At no other time does our Heavenly Father appear more winsome and inviting. His sympathy always is precious whenever we are conscious of it but probably because at no other time is our sense of need equally great, at no other time is His revelation of Himself within our hearts so unspeakably sweet and satisfying. Like the gentle summer rain which falls softly and is absorbed thirstily by the grass which has been freshly cropped, so the ministration of God descends upon the stricken, aching soul to soothe and fortify, to cheer and strengthen it. "Thy gentleness hath made me great," said the Psalmist. Surely it must have been as he looked back upon a time of affliction or sorrow of some kind that he said it.—Boston Congregationalist.

Not Cut Out for a Grocer.

"Have you any nice fresh eggs today?" asked the woman with business-like ways.

"Madam," answered the man who has just started in the grocery business, "permit me to remind you that nice eggs are necessarily fresh and fresh eggs are always nice. Moreover, if I have any, I have them today. My possession of eggs yesterday or to-morrow does not in the slightest degree affect the situation. Therefore, time being precious to a business man, I will simply content myself with replying that I have nice eggs."—Washington Star.

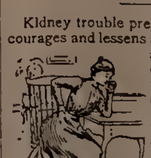
Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.



Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

Came Near Dying.

"For three days and nights I suffered agony untold from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Lowther, clerk of the district court, Centreville, Iowa. "I thought I should surely die and tried a dozen different medicines, but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely. I went to sleep and did not awake for eight hours. On awakening a few hours ago I felt so gratified that the first work I do on going to the office is to write to the manufacturers of the remedy and offer them my grateful thanks and say, 'God bless you and the splendid medicine you make.'" This remedy is for sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2 65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save If your druggist can't supply you, it will be fowarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

Many Millions of Dollars Are Left Annually in Switzerland and the Riviera.

An astonishing contrast is apparent in the sums of money spent by the average visitor to these two world-famous pleasure resorts, says the New York World. In the season of 18[illegible] about 2,3[illegible] tourists visited Switzerland. They paid to the landlords of 1,800 hotels and inns a little less than $25,000,[illegible] The average hotel bill was, therefore, only about $[illegible] In addition to this, about $6,[illegible] was expended for trinkets and mementoes.

These two items, in addition to a comparatively small outlay for horses and carriages, form the principal means of subsistence of the vast number of people whose livelihood is dependent on the natural features of the "playground of Europe."

The figures for the Riviera are very different. In the first place, a season's visitors are not to be reckoned by millions. A recent estimate puts the annual number at 27[illegible], of whom 60,000 were English and 3[illegible] Americans, and the money expended at about $60,000,000, or $225 for the average visitor.

Coal in the Rockies.

By far the most important mining work in progress in British Columbia is the opening up of the vast areas of the Crow's Nest—undoubtedly one of the largest coal properties known. The measures occur in the heart of the Rockies and extend north and south a distance of 40 miles, stretching east and west ten miles from the banks of the Elk river toward the boundary line between Alberta and British Columbia. The area is, of course, reduced by the creeks which abound on the mountain slopes and from which the coal measures have been eroded, but sufficient remains to constitute the coal fields, unique in extent as they are in richness.

New York Indians Still Pagan.

Christianity has not made much progress among the Indians in New York state. There are now on the reservation there 4,850 Indians, and a missionary says at least five-eighths of them adhere to the old pagan religion rites and superstitions.

Just to Keep Them Quiet.

"Yes," said the young matron, "I believe in voice culture for children. It is undeniably true that many little ones have harsh and disagreeable voices, and I think voice culture would add much to the pleasures of existence. Don't you?"

The savage bachelor hesitated a moment before answering.

"Possibly," he said, at last, "as a substitute for more effective measures voice culture might be acceptable, but don't you think it would be better to cut out their vocal chords?"—Chicago Post.

A Man of Good Taste.

"Papa," said the boy, "when you say in your advertisements that your goods are acknowledged by connoisseurs to be the best, what do you mean by connoisseurs?"

"A connoisseur, my boy," answered the great manufacturer, "is an eminent authority—an authority, in short, who admits that our goods are the best."—Tit-Bits.

Her Eyes.

Elderly Aunt (slightly deaf)—Mancy, what did the oculist say ailed your eyes?

Miss Mancy—He said it was astigmatism.

Elderly Aunt—Higbee Chisholm? I thought so. Isn't that the name of the young man who comes here and keeps you up till 11 or 12 o'clock every night?—Chicago Tribune.

Cause and Effect.

Prisoner—Indeed, I was not drunk, sir.

Magistrate—Are you a teetotaler?

Prisoner—Well, not exactly a teetotaler, sir; but months sometimes pass without my tasting a drop of strong drink.

Jailer—That's when he's in prison, your honor.—Ally Sloper.

Shunning Danger.

"No," said the man who wanted the meal, "I can't. I'm sorry, too. I'd like to do dis work, but I'm afraid."

"What," the lady asked, "are you afraid of?"

"I'm afraid I might catch de habit. I never did have much control of myself dat way."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Keeping Even.

"Why don't you economize?" asked the pedestrian, indignantly.

"I have economized," answered Meandering Mike. "I started out wit' nothin' an' I've helt right on to it."—Washington Star.

Agnosticism.

No more presumptuous philosophy was ever palmed off on unthinking man than the philosophy of agnosticism. No philosophy ever so insulted the religion of Jesus Christ. None ever faced so squarely against God's word. From first to last all of God's dealings with man have been that he might know. This is the sole object of the whole plan of revelation. This is the meaning of every symbol, figure and ceremony—that man might know God and man's own future.—Rev. J. M. Cromer.

IN THE SAHARA.

A Traveler Tells of a Recent Pleasant Visit to the Great Desert.

A traveler from the Sahara desert has just returned to Washington with 500 young date palms which will be planted in Arizona, many parts of which have a climate similar to North Africa and Arabia. He found the nights pleasant on the sandy desert, there being often a difference of 60 degrees between noon and midnight. The sirocco, or hot wind and sand storm, made the days unbearable, but the nights were wonderful—cool, clear and windless and filled with far stars. He traveled at night, and the long caravan of which he and his baggage was a part swung silently along in the shadow of the sand dunes. The Arab guides steered their way by the stars.

This traveler witnessed the magnificent rising of the sun over the limitless waste of glittering sand, rocky heaps and promontories and clustered plumes of date palms that rose from green oases, where gay tents sheltered bands of Bedouins and their flocks and herds of sheep and camels. In such places as these he visited during the day and was served with goat's milk and bread and dates and good mutton and Arabian coffee. It was all so like a story book that he was afraid he would wake up sometimes and find it was all a dream.

Mrs. Hubbard M. Bullock has removed to her daughter's in Providence.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Rathbun have gone to Woonsocket to spend the winter.

The regular teachers' meeting will be held next Monday evening, at the High school, at 7 o'clock.

Mrs. Mary A. Tyler, mother of Mrs. E. D. Daniels, died at her home in Philadelphia on Wednesday.

Misses Margaret Farrell and Catherine Heffernan of Woonsocket are guests of Miss Mamie Kenney of Cottage street.

St. John's guild will hold a "rummage sale" in the last store of Opera house block all day and evening of Saturday, Nov. 3.

The Medway High school football eleven came here on Wednesday afternoon, defeating the Dean second team by a score of 6 to 0.

Messrs. Ray and Wiggin had a conference with the Wrentham selectmen on Wednesday in regard to the more frequent running of cars.

The running time between here and Woonsocket has been reduced to thirty minutes, and the cars stop only opposite the white posts. Look out for them.

O. S. Stetson, Jr., now of Dartmouth, has recently published an exhaustive monogram on "Triangular Residues," which cannot fail of a welcome reception.

The registrars added thirty-one new names to the voting list on Wednesday evening. The time for further registration is short and no one should neglect the opportunity.

Chapman Calkin, son of Artist Calkin, had both bones of his right arm broken while on his way to school this noon, Conductor McCarthy's boy throwing him to the ground in a scuffle.

An idea of the personal interest which is taken in this election may be gained from the fact that one man 82 years of age has just had his name added to the voting list. He reads and writes without glasses.

The warrant for the general election will be issued by the selectmen this week. The polls will open at 7 a. m. and probably will close at 3 or 4 p. m., as usual. The tellers for the meeting have not been appointed.

Rt. Worthy Jarvis B. Woolford and suite made an official visitation to Excelsior lodge, A. F. & A. M., on Wednesday evening, a banquet and social following the exemplification. Milford and Medway sent goodly delegations.

The Epworth league and friends met at the home of Miss Lulu A. Willard on Wednesday evening, entirely filling the house. A most enjoyable program of music, informal talks, etc., made the occasion one of especial pleasure.

Jason T. Sprague of Franklin and Miss Sarah Brown of Bellingham were united in marriage on Thursday evening, by Rev. Mr Sneath, at the parsonage. Mr. Sprague labors for Edgar K. Ray and the couple will reside in Unionville.

The pupils of Mrs. Treen Hosmer, the musical instructor here, gave her a "surprise" at her music rooms in Lynn on Friday evening, presenting her with a handsome flag, in a neat presentation speech. Lunch was served and all had a most enjoyable time.

The next regular meeting of the Alden club will occur Oct. 31, next Wednesday evening, at Elm farm, in celebration of Hallowe'en Cars leave postoffice at quarter of and quarter past every hour. If possible, an additional car will be put on at 7 15.

Milford has lost one of its most worthy young men in Eben Williams, who died on Wednesday, aged 33. He was known to scores of people here as one of the young men who placed Milford's base ball upon a clean respectable footing, both as player and manager.

Charles L. Stewart, who is attending the Y. M. C. A. convention at Fall River, writes that so far it has been a very profitable time, a good number present and most excellent spirit, and that the addresses have been strong and earnest.

The many friends of James W. Desmond will be pleased to learn that he has been secured to take charge of the stock room of the Carroll straw shop in Matteawan, N. Y. He has been employed in the Stewart straw shop here during the entire ownership of Mr. Stewart.

One good thing is recorded for the automobile. By its use on a recent Sunday a physician was able to complete his Sunday morning rounds in time to attend church services, something he had been unable to do for several months past, when he used a horse for locomotive power.

Cider retails for ten cents per gallon, and the farmers who refrain from making any on principle can congratulate themselves that they are not losing much money. The commodity is so cheap that farmers have hundreds of bushels of apples on the ground, which they neglect to pick up.

The cranberries gathered in this vicinity are of good quality and good color. Five hundred barrels have been gathered at the Miller bog, now owned by the J. G. Ray estate. The crop is not as large as in some previous years, but of very good quality, so that the money value may be about the same.

Mrs. Harriet Blake, who gave the money for the building of the Globe Congregational church in Woonsocket, declares that she received the first impression in that direction, upon seeing the Congregational church in Franklin. Dr. Sneath and Mr. Alvord will exchange services on next Sabbath, thus bringing these two churches into closer relations.

There was a very large attendance at the social at the Baptist church Wednesday evening. A fine literary and musical entertainment was given, consisting of a piano solo by Miss Grace Bly, solos by Miss Jessie Corbin, recitations by Miss Gertrude Clark and Mrs. Ida Hunter. Cake and coffee were served and a general good time observed. One of the sweet toothsome things was the candy fudge given out, sure to impart grace and good temper to all.

The quarterly visits of Rev. W. T. Perrin, Ph. D., P. E., to the Methodist church of Franklin are always looked forward to with pleasure, not only by the members of that church but also by many others. It is a little unfortunate that his visit this time comes at the same time as the union temperance service, but any other arrangement seemed impossible. Dr. Perrin is a talented and eloquent preacher and deserves a large audience to hear him preach next Sunday evening, at 7 p. m., at the Methodist church.

The monthly union temperance meeting at the Baptist church next Sunday evening will be of special interest. Rev. John W. F. Barnes, who has been chaplain of the state prison in Charlestown for many years, will give the address. He will speak on scenes and incidents in the prison, giving thrilling and important facts in the lives of criminals. Rev. Mr. Barnes has made special study of prison reform and has a practical theory to advance. Very seldom is the opportunity given our community of hearing a discourse from one who has had such long experience in prison work.

Republican Rally.

The Republican town committee have arranged some rousing speeches for next Wednesday evening, when it is certain the Opera house will be crowded to the doors to hear Hon. S. L. Powers, candidate for congress, and Hon. William Schofield of Malden, member of the legislature. Both of these gentlemen have been doing valiant work for the cause, and will say something worth hearing. The gallery will be reserved for ladies.

William Mann's Funeral.

The funeral of the late William Mann was held this afternoon, at 2 o'clock, at the house. Rev. Mr. Sneath was the officiating clergyman and the interment was made in the Union street cemetery. A sketch of his life and portrait will appear on Tuesday.

Helpful and Interesting.

The annual Teachers' Institute was held in the Horace Mann building, commencing Tuesday evening with a very able and delightful address on "Manual Training" by Henry T Bailey, state superintendent of drawing He showed by statistical reference how vastly changed American life today is from that of eighty, forty, even ten years ago, and hence how different, proportionally, must be the present day school training

Four causes for these changes are noted: Improved means of agriculture, application of machinery to manufacture, the redistribution of population (partly a result of the first two), and improved facilities of communication. The study of nature at first hand, by which nature "is turned back upon herself," led to this evolution in industrial life, and suggests the maxim, "Let the pupil study nature at first hand." Train the muscles to obey the mind, and train a mind which has ideals.

With an appropriation increased six dollars per pupil to equal the average appropriation in this county we could easily introduce manual training into our schools. It would serve to keep boys in school, giving them a higher estimate of manual labor—the doing of something worth the while—and leading them to a better choice of a life work.

The opening address Wednesday morning, on "Discipline and Good Citizenship," was given by Secretary Hill. His main point was that inasmuch as all human law finds its origin in the will of the people, and this public opinion is formed largely in youth, civic government in our schools, rather than military, will be conducive to the development of a right public opinion and good citizenship.

Mr. Bailey gave two characteristic talks on "Drawing," one adapted to primary and the other to grammar school work, emphasizing the importance of dictation drill and drawing from memory of forms already studied.

Mr. Bailey confined his remarks to the medium to be used—whether pencil, ink or water color—to form and to make an artistic whole.

Mr. Prince's lectures on arithmetic and the purpose of the study of geometry were practical and valuable. In the latter he advocated the inductive method for grammar school and demonstrative method for high school work.

Those who are familiar with Mr. McDonald's breezy talks were not surprised to hear some rather out of the ordinary suggestions in the morning lecture on "Latin." He advocates strongly drill on construction before translation rather than afterwards.

Everybody was glad to listen to Mr. Boyden's paper on "History." He urged his hearers to go to the sources of historical events, to study the scenes of action in pictorial art, to strengthen the imaginative faculties of the child, to endeavor to show the meaning of events, and to study the personality of the actors for the purpose of establishing character. In the afternoon Mr. Boyden treated nature study as a means of development in thought, perception and expression.

Mr. Sanderson gave two lectures on "Language and Grammar." He discussed the merits of supplementary reading and suggested a course of such selections for all grades. Two very helpful and interesting talks on "English Literature" were given by Miss Fisher. In special study she advised the reading of other selections for similar characteristics of thought and feeling, e. g., "The Mill on the Floss," illustrative of renunciation; and also the use of pictures with their middle, fore and back ground to show the place of the central idea in a paragraph.

Miss Thompson laid great stress on the distinction between the study of history and the study of historians. The material for the former is constantly being accumulated by archæologists and placed into the art museums, and it is to these institutions that the present-day student of history must refer.

Miss Devereaux, of the Lowell State Normal school, was very entertaining on "Kindergarten Methods in the Primary School." Her purpose was to show how the work of the kindergarten could be more perfectly dovetailed into that of the first grade of the primary school.

One of the pleasantest features of the day was a talk on story-telling by Mrs. Rutan of Boston, who illustrated her thought with stories told in her own delightful, earnest manner, that was very fascinating. Two kinds of stories appeal to children—the nursery class, which has earned its right to exist by its age, and the story whose pathos or humor or beauty appeals to the one who tells it. To know one's story well and to tell it earnestly are two prime requisites in good story-telling.

Nickerson Asks Governor for a Pardon.

The petition of William S. Nickerson for executive clemency opens up a new field of thought Nickerson was for five hours at the threshold of eternity, a few days ago, and while he stood there, looking through the gates ajar upon an awfully lurid scene, with which he is to become better acquainted later, he had, he says, a long and fearful interview with the lord of the nether regions.

Nickerson is the young man who was sentenced to five years at hard labor last week for housebreaking, and who, on Monday last, swallowed sixty morphine pills after one day's experience as a convict. He was found insensible in his cell, and for a long time the prison physicians thought it impossible for him to recover. How he obtained sixty morphine pills in the state prison was a mystery which they waited for his return to consciousness to clear up.

When Nickerson came back to earth he called the doctor "evil one," and bade him in the name of God to depart, whereupon the physician applied a plaster to the nape of Nickerson's neck, and exhorted him to give up the rest of the pills.

To no one but the one man in all the world able to help him would Nickerson reveal the secret of the morphine, and that one man was his excellency the governor, in whom is vested the pardoning power.

"I am the most wretched of men," wrote Nickerson, when out of danger, but cruel as is my fate on earth it is nothing to the fearful time in store for me in the next world, unless your excellency comes to my relief.

"I am a victim of predestination. While I was at death's door the other night it was revealed to me that ages before I was born I was one of the unfortunates predestined to pass eternity in hell.

"When the poison deprived me of consciousness my soul was borne to the gates of the infernal regions, and there came out to me the dread fiend himself, who, looking me over critically, remarked that it was too bad for one so young to be condemned millions of years before I had a chance to be either saintly or sinful. He said it with a sneer.

"'Tis it was shown to me that no matter how good I may be in this world I must spend eternity with the fiends. I might become a bishop or a cardinal, the devil said, and be a most exemplary churchman, but the end would be the same—Hades.

He produced the roster of the predestined, including those who have lived and those not yet born, and I saw my name in the hell column.

It may be some consolation to your excellency to know that among the Gs in the opposite column I noticed your illustrious name. Being such a good man you have probably never doubted your destination, and I merely mention this, thinking that it would be comforting to know that if your excellency should at any time be tempted to break loose for a season from church discipline you will be all right in the end.

"Out of compassion for me it was agreed that if I could succeed in getting out of prison without force or strategy hell would relinquish its claim to me, and I could be forever with the so-called blest. To you I appeal for salvation, Governor. Pardon me and I shall live forever with you and the rest of the saints. It is a grave responsibility, sir. Dare you shirk it?"

His excellency read Nickerson's petition with with deep interest and remarked that the petitioner could not have been free from the influence of the drug when he wrote it.

"His story reeks of opium," said Gov. Gregory. "File it away. When his mind is clearer he may wish to revise it." —Boston Globe.

Got to Come.

The automobile is destined, when perfected, to prove a valuable aid in the way of locomotion, but, as another remarks, "when it goes crazy it performs the maddest kind of freaks." It may on very short notice wheel with sufficient force to throw the occupants over the fence, or it may forge ahead at the rate of sixty miles an hour without reference to any rights of way which other vehicles may possess, or it may sulk in the middle of a trip and refuse to start without special attention, or get afire, as in Stamford, Conn., and frighten the entire town The machine when in repose looks as steady as an old farm horse, but when once it is aroused and off its base, like the venerable nag, it shows the least possible amount of common sense in its wild and unmethodical career; and yet it promises to become in time and after a due amount of experiment the modern and the model wheel of the road.—Exchange.

Franklin's First Minister.

If the reader will take his way to the cemetery, to that portion which is now being graded, and find the largest tombstone nearest to the corner of Union and Central streets, he will find himself standing at the grave of the first pastor of Franklin. The inscription reads as follows: "To the Memory of the Rev. Elias Haven. Fifteen years pastor of this people, who are desirous of giving and of perpetuating their public testimony to his faithful ministry and pious life, by which, though dead, he yet speaketh to his once beloved and ever grateful flock. He died August 10, 1754, in the 41st year of his age." The phrase "this people" means the people of Franklin. It was the only church in the town, Congregational by name, and every man was taxed at the town meeting a certain sum for its support. Until the year 1738 the people of Franklin, belonging to what was known as the "western precinct" of Wrentham, went to Wrentham to church. February 16, 1738 (February 27 new style), the second church in Wrentham was organized, which became the First church of Franklin in 1778, when the western precinct was incorporated under the name of Franklin On the day on which the church was organized they chose a committee of the brethren to ask the advice of the three neighboring ministers, who were present at the gathering of this church, relating to the ministerial accomplishments of Mr. Elias Haven, who had for a considerable time preached in this precinct; who were pleased to signify to said committee their approbation of Mr. Haven as "one in some good measure qualified for the Gospel ministry." Mr. Haven was examined "as to his principles, both of doctrine and discipline," and on March 23, 1738, he was chosen "to be their Gospel minister." His letter of acceptance consisted of one sentence:

"Brethren—I accept your call and consent to take the office of a pastor in this church, humbly sensible of my own insufficiency and unworthiness for the work, and relying on the help of God to carry me through, and begging His acceptance of me therein through Jesus Christ, and am now ready to join with you in appointing my ordination, asking earnestly a constant interest in your prayers. ELIAS HAVEN."

On the 8th of November, 1738, he was ordained, the churches of Christ in Wrentham, Medfield, Uxbridge, Leicester, Hopkinton and the Old North and New North churches of Boston assisting in the ordination services.

Mr. Haven was born April 16, 1714, in Hopkinton. He was one of eleven children. His parents were Joseph and Martha Haven. He graduated from Harvard in 1733, and became the pastor of Franklin at 24 years of age. He was pastor of the church nearly sixteen years, although five or six years before his death he "was taken off from his ministerial labors by bodily weakness, contracting a consumptive habit, and was able to preach but very little during that time, to the no small affliction of his parishioners." During his long illness they supplied the pulpit at their own charge and granted him his "annual stipend" until his death. A wife and seven children survived him, but in a brief period after his death his wife also died. Her place of burial I have not discovered as yet. Nearly six years passed away before the church settled another pastor.

Mr. Haven was "a man of undissembled piety and virtue." He was a devoted and successful pastor. "He was esteemed a gentleman of good powers and abilities, happily gifted and well furnished and qualified for the work of the Gospel ministry." During his ministry there were added to this church 171 persons, 132 by profession and 39 by letter. There was a most remarkable revival in the town in 1741, and as a result 89 were added to the church. Mr. Haven's work was brief in years, but great in effects. He was one of the men upon whom, as foundations, this town was built, and "though dead, he yet speaketh," not only to "his once beloved and ever grateful flock," but also to the generations which have followed, even to the generation of today. The Democrats Enthuse.

There was no inspiring music to attract the wavering or careless voter to the Opera house last evening to hear William H. Baker, Democratic candidate for congress in the eleventh district, and Quincy A. Lothrop of Boston discuss the issues of the campaign from a Democratic standpoint. The hall, however, was comfortably filled, a number of ladies being seated in the balcony, but it was a cold, undemonstrative gathering, the only time that it became stirred to a high pitch being when the name of Mr. Bryan was mentioned by the speakers, when there was liberal applause.

The meeting was presided over by D. F. O'Sullivan, chairman of the Democratic town committee, and seated upon the stage were ex Postmaster M. F. Conroy, who did not favor Bryan in 1896, but will vote for him this time; Secretary B. W. McCabe and members of the town committee and campaign club. Mr. Lothrop was the first speaker introduced. At the start he had a good word to say for Mr. Baker in his aspiration for a seat in congress, afterward taking up the issues of imperialism and trusts, speaking about 40 minutes on these subjects

Before Mr. Baker discussed the national issues he spoke of the attempt of the friends of Mr Storey, who is running for congress in this district as the anti-imperialistic candidate, to have him withdraw in Mr. Storey's favor He "dressed up" these friends forcibly and at times eloquently and said Mr. Storey stood upon only one plank of the Kansas City platform. Trusts received the greatest share of attention from Mr. Baker, although imperialism was not forgotten. He was well received by his auditors, his address lasting an hour and the meeting ending at 9.45

A Prophet With Honor.

A remarkably dainty little volume—"As It Is To Be," from the pen of Mrs. Cora Linn Daniels and the press of Little, Brown & Co.—has reached us, marking the issuance of another edition. The book is an especially interesting one from the point of psychical research, and shows a vast amount of thought, couched in clear, comprehensive and beautiful language. We are pleased to know that it has attained already a wide reading, six thousand having been issued, and it has received the unqualified indorsement of the thinking people of the day. It combines interestingly a veritable science of the hereafter, a philosophy after death and a new gospel for the twentieth century. Its pages hold one from first to last, and the usual "dry-as-dust" theoretical discussions are agreeably lacking. Although it is necessarily imaginative, it is truly inspirational. Indeed, there is much that is possible, more that is probable, and a deal that is certain.

VOTE for McKinley and hasten the suppression of the guerilla warfare in the Philippines.

SEE to it that your neighbor gets registered and votes, and then you will be pretty sure to do so yourself.

URGE the young men to get registered and to vote the Republican ticket. A great many of them need only a little judicious urging to cause them to take this step.

EXPANSION will give you wider and better markets, causing better prices for what you produce. Get legitimate and honorable expansion by voting for the Republican nominees.

FREE silver is not heard of very much just now, but it is the threatening evil, in case of Bryan's election that is causing business men to prepare for a terrible panic in case of his success. Prevent the panic by preventing his election just so far as your vote will do it.

ALL admit that McKinley has handled the Chinese problem most admirably. He will handle other national problems with equal ability if you give him a chance by giving him your votes. What can you hope to gain by a change? And carefully consider what a terrible risk you would run in making a change in these times of [illegible] responsibility and uncertainty.

Do not deceive yourself with the idea that your vote won't count. It may be the very single one needed to elect a good Republican. Such instances have happened. But it is your duty and your privilege to vote, and thus help secure a continuance of the blessings you have enjoyed for the past four years. Your duty to yourself and to your neighbors demands your vote.

WHEN you go to the polls allow ample time to vote for every candidate on the list. You get this chance but once a year, or once in two or four years. In every doubtful district take special pains to vote for the Republican congressional candidates. They will all be needed at Washington to uphold the hands of President McKinley and to co-operate with the senate in enacting wise legislation.

BRYAN poses as the enemy of monopoly. He says there can be "no good monopoly in private hands." But in 18[illegible] Bryan wrote a book. He got a "monopoly" on it by taking out a copyright. It has made him rich. Were it not for that "monopoly" his book would be sold for a third or a quarter of its present price. He practices the rankest and most absolute monopoly himself but condemns it in others. "Consistency is a jewel" but its name is not Bryan.

THE Republicans of congress in 1890 enacted a law against trusts, which has already done much good. Further legislation, a constitutional amendment, is needed to make that law most effective. But in June last, by an almost solid Democratic vote, the amendment was defeated, while an almost solid Republican vote was cast for it. A two-thirds vote was needed. The amendment would have been radical, extreme, and have given ample power to curb any trust in existence. It was defeated by the Democrats and now they are making their opposition to trusts their cardinal virtue.

THE best test of the rightness or the wrongness of political principles is the result of their practical application. Whenever this country has had a Republican administration, since the Republican party was founded, it has had progress and prosperity, but whenever it has had a Democratic administration it has had business distress and financial disaster. Every intelligent man knows this. There are just as good Democrats, personally, as Republicans, and they desire their country's good just as earnestly and honestly. But the cold frozen truth of history is that the Democratic influence paralyzes industry while Republican influence stimulates and increases it. Years of talk and tons of arguments could prove no more. The intelligent man will therefore support the Republican candidates.

TIME IS LIFE

The father? Gone for the doctor. The mother? Alone with her suffering child. Will the doctor never come? When there is croup in the house you can't get the doctor quick enough. It's too dangerous to wait. Don't make such a mistake again; it may cost a life. Always keep on hand a dollar bottle of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

It cures the croup at once. Then when any one in the family comes down with a hard cold or cough a few doses of the Pectoral will cut short the attack at once. A 25 cent bottle will cure a miserable cold; the 50c. size is better for a cold that has been hanging on.

Keep the dollar size on hand.

HOW TO MAKE FORTUNES.

The Late Collis P. Huntington Said It Was by the Chemistry of Manufactures.

Mr. Huntington was of the opinion that the field of chemistry applied to commercial ends offered the greatest opportunities probably for amassing wealth which will open up in this country in the twentieth century, writes Holland, in the Philadelphia Press. The great fortunes from the development of the transportation business have been made. Hereafter there is to be more and more distribution of these fortunes. But Mr. Huntington not long ago said that if a chemist were to make a discovery of some combination that would take the place of rubber he would have at his hand a fortune quite as great as that gained by Bessemer when he discovered his cheap process of making steel. In fact, Mr. Huntington declared that if he were a younger man, or were beginning today his career he would go to Africa or South America and undertake the cultivation of rubber, while at the same time he would keep in close touch with all the chemists, with the hope that they might be able to make a [illegible] for rubber.

So, too, he said that the chemist or the botanist who was able to discover in some leaf or shrub or annual plant just the qualities that are in spruce timber and by a chemical or scientific process, of which he should have the trade mark or the secret, was able to deliver a pulp to paper manufacturers as good as that of spruce timber, would not wait long for wealth or enormous wealth, and in gaining great riches for himself would add greatly to the wealth of the world.

If your stomach is weak it should have help. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives strength to the stomach and cures dyspepsia and indigestion.

The Stimulus of Pure Blood

That is what is required by every organ of the body, for the proper performance of its functions.

It perfects all the vital processes.

It prevents biliousness, dyspepsia, constipation, kidney complaint, rheumatism, catarrh, nervousness, weakness, faintness, pimples, blotches, and all cutaneous eruptions.

It is assured by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla which acts directly and peculiarly on the blood.

This statement is proved by thousands of unsolicited testimonials.

W. P. KEETON, Woodstock, Ala., writes: "When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla my blood was impure and I had not been feeling well for some time. I was bothered very much with that tired feeling. When I had taken the medicine a few days I began to feel better, and after taking two bottles I felt like another person. That tired feeling was gone and I could do my work."

Our Loftiest Mountains.

The records of the geological survey in Washington establish the fact that the loftiest known mountain in North America is Mount McKinley in Alaska, about 2[illegible] miles from the shore of Cook inlet. The aboriginal name of the peak is Tralega. It is 20,464 feet high. This is not far from the elevation of Mount Chimborazo, the highest peak of the Andes, and is 2,440 feet greater than that of Mount St. Elias, which was at one time believed to be our loftiest mountain.

Banker Routs a Robber.

J. R. Garrison, cashier of the bank of Thornville, Ohio, had been robbed of health by a serious lung trouble until he tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Then he wrote: "It is the best medicine I ever used for a severe cold or a bad case of lung trouble. I always keep a bottle on hand." Don't suffer with coughs, colds or any throat, chest or lung trouble when you can be cured so easily. Only 50c. and $1. Trial bottles free at Mason's drug store.

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2 65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit. The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save. If your druggist can't supply you, it will be fowarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

Paris Has Many Trees.

Paris possesses about 80,000 trees in the streets and public places in the city. It is calculated that there are 26,000 plane trees, 17,000 chestnuts and 15,000 elms, the remainder consisting of sycamores, maples, lichens, etc. Apparently there is only one oak and one ash tree.—N. Y. Journal.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. No remedy helped him until he tried Electric Bitters, which effected such a wonderful change that he writes he feels like a new man. This marvelous medicine cures backache and kidney trouble, purifies the blood and builds up your health. Only 50c. at Mason's drug store.

Gentlemen:—I must say in regard to GRAIN-O that there is nothing better or healthier. We have used it for years. My brother was a great coffee drinker. He was taken sick and the doctor said coffee was the cause of it and told us to use GRAIN-O. We got a package but did not like it at first, but now would not be without it. My brother has been well ever since we started to use it.

Use of Waste Slate.

Slate pencils were formerly all cut from solid slate, just as it is dug from the earth, but pencils so made were objected to on account of the grit which they contain, and which would scratch the slate. To overcome this difficulty an ingenious process has been devised by which the slate is ground to a very fine powder, all grit and foreign substances removed, and the powder bolted through silk cloth in much the same manner in which flour is bolted. The powder is then made into a dough, and this dough is subjected to a very heavy hydraulic pressure, which presses the pencil out the required shape and diameter, but in length about three feet. While yet soft the pencils are cut into the desired lengths and set out to dry in the open air. After they are thoroughly dry the pencils are placed in steam baking kilns, where they receive the proper temper. Pencils made in this manner are not only free from all grit, and of uniform hardness, but are stronger than those cut out of solid slate. For these reasons they have superseded the old kind. Over 25,000,000 of these pencils were made and sold in 1899 by one American concern in Chattanooga.—Cement and Slate.

Even Later.

He had been talking and talking and talking until the poor girl was so tired and sleepy she didn't know whether it was this week or last week or come next Sunday, and the clock on the mantel was holding up its hands, either in pity or in protest. Finally it occurred to the young man that an evening call had its limits, at least in a latitude where the nights are not six months long.

"Bless me," he exclaimed, starting up suddenly, "it certainly must be time I was going home."

"Oh," she said, in a dazed kind of a way, "it must be a good deal later than that."—Detroit Free Press.

Failed In Its Purpose.

Perhaps the strangest attempt ever seen at creating a nation by immigration was that begun by the American Colonization society in 1820. Having secured a territory on the west coast of Africa, these philanthropic people with the famous Henry Clay at their head, began offering free passages to all freed negro slaves. Some 20,000 of these were carried back to their native continent, and the state of Liberia became an established fact. But, well meant though it was, the experiment has proved a failure.—N. Y. Telegraph.

Inconsistency.

"Who is that man over there with the white, scared face?"

Proof Positive.

"Do you drink coffee?" asked the doctor of an aged patient.

"Yes," was the reply.

"Coffee," continued the M. D., "is a slow poison."

"Yes, very slow," replied the old man. "I have taken it daily for nearly 80 years."—Chicago Evening News.

Yarmouth Line's Fall Excursions.

Not to have visited Nova Scotia during September is to have missed one of the most delightful of autumnal tours. During this month the Yarmouth Steamship company will sell excursion tickets, good for thirty days from date of purchase, to all points in Nova Scotia at unusually low rates. You may go to Yarmouth and return for only $3; to Digby and return for $6 35; to Halifax and return for $8.50; and correspondingly low rates to all other places, including south shore ports reached by the steamer City of Monticello from Yarmouth. Yarmouth line steamers leave Pier 1, Lewis wharf, every Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at 2 p. m. for Yarmouth. Full particulars and tickets at the tourist agencies, 201, 296 and 332 Washington street, or of H. F. Hammond, agent Yarmouth Steamship company, Pier 1, Lewis wharf, Boston.

Doan's Kidney Pills

Make well kidneys—they are not a new medicine—not an experiment—they've been tested and thousands endorse their merit. Here's a case of it:

Mr. J. W. Parker, carpenter in the wood turning department of the Fitchburg Car Shops, Fitchburg, Mass., says: "In the month of February, 1896, I was asked by a gentleman who called on me to publicly give my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills. What I gave him for publication has appeared in our Fitchburg papers. I was interviewed a second time over two years afterwards when I told my interviewer the following: Ever since my original statement appeared in the Fitchburg papers I have been repeatedly asked by people in the shops where I work, on the street, and by callers at my house if the said statement were true. I often wished it were in Halifax, and in allowing my name to appear as an endorser of Doan's Kidney Pills during the coming year, I want it thoroughly understood that they proved of great benefit and from my experience I can conscientiously say they are one patent medicine upon which people can depend to do as represented."

Asia's Great Sink Holes.

While Asia has the loftiest mountains in the world, it also possesses the deepest and most extensive land depressions, several of them, as is well known, sinking below sea level, so that if the ocean could flow into them they would be filled to the brim. In the deepest parts of most of them water now stands, forming small seas. Others are destitute of water. Among these is the Lukchun depression in Central Asia, concerning which Gen. Tillo writes, in the "Proceedings of the Russian Geographical society," that in places it sinks as much as 400 feet below sea level. This sink-hole in the middle of the largest of the continents is also remarkable for its meteorological features, the yearly amplitudes of the barometer being greater than are recorded anywhere else on earth. In summer the temperature rises to Saharan heat, a record of 118 degrees Fahrenheit having been obtained in July, while the air is of desert dryness.

Turkish Lime.

A recent visitor to Constantinople reports one custom of the Turks which causes a vast deal of trouble and confusion. This is the Turkish system of reckoning time. A Turk holds that the day begins exactly at sunset; at that time he sets his clocks and watches at the hour of 12. As the sun has the same habits in presiding over Turkey that he exercises with regard to other localities, it may easily be seen that this system of reckoning time necessitates setting the clocks every day. It appears that a watch which could run for weeks without gaining or losing a minute would be of no special value to a Turk.—Youth's Companion.

Timber Laws of England.

By the general laws of England oak, ash and elm are "timber" if not younger than 20 years or so old that a good post cannot be cut from them. What constitutes "timber" varies slightly according to locality. But when a tree is proved to be "timber" a person who has only a life interest in the land it grows upon cannot cut it down unless it be on an estate cultivated solely for the production of salable timber or unless he has a special agreement giving him power to do so.—Chicago Chronicle.

Women at the Paris Exposition.

Mathematical cranks are busy figuring upon an estimated number of visitors at the Paris exposition. The last and most interesting one endeavors to fix the proportionate number of men and women, and the women, as usual, carry off the palm. Of the 150,000 Americans due, according to his estimate, to make the journey, 100,000 of them will be females. If this statement is true, or even proportionately true, America can be congratulated on being "beautifully" represented, at least.—N. Y. Herald.

Mortgagee's Sale.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Daniel Kempton to the Milford Savings Bank, dated October 17, 1877, and recorded with Norfolk deeds, book 494, page 73, and for a breach of the condition thereof, will be sold at public auction upon the premises, on SATURDAY THE SEVENTEENTH DAY OF NOVEMBER, 1900, at three o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely, "A certain tract or parcel of land situated in Bellingham in our county of Norfolk, containing about fifty acres of and bounded and described as follows, viz. Beginning at the southeast corner of the premises on the Scott hill road leading from said Bellingham to Woonsocket, at corner of land of Israel B. Salisbury, thence running westerly by land of the heirs of Lebbeus Gaskill and Nahum Cook to land conveyed by the grantor to Otis D. and Warren J. Ballou, thence northerly by said last-named land to land of Nahum Cook; thence easterly by land of Nahum Cook and Mrs. Anson Salisbury to the said road; thence southerly by and with said road to the point of departure, being all the land described in a deed from Elias Kempton and others, dated May 22, 1872, recorded in said registry, book 440, page 119, except one tract sold to Otis D and Warren J. Ballou."

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
NORFOLK, ss.
SUPERIOR COURT.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court, next to be holden at Dedham within and for the County of Norfolk on the first Monday of December next:

Respectfully libels and represents Achsah Camp of Bellingham, in said county, that she was lawfully married to Fred Camp, now of parts unknown, at Medway on the twelfth day of December, A. D. 1879, and thereafterwards your libellant and the said Fred Camp lived together as husband and wife in this Commonwealth, to wit, at Medway in said county; that your libellant has always been faithful to her marriage vows and obligations, but the said Fred Camp being wholly regardless of the same at Medway aforesaid on or about the first day of August, 1889, utterly deserted your libellant and has continued such desertion to the date of this libel.

Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Fred Camp.

Dated the sixteenth day of October, A. D. 1900.

ACHSAH CAMP.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
NORFOLK, ss.
SUPERIOR COURT.

On the foregoing libel it is ordered that the libellant give notice to the said Fred Camp, the libellee, to appear before the Justices of this Court, to be holden at Dedham within and for said county, on the first Monday of December next, by causing an attested copy of said libel, and of this order thereon, to be published once in a week for three successive weeks in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper printed at Franklin, in the county of Norfolk, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before the said first Monday of December next, and further, by sending through the mail, as soon as may be, by a registered letter addressed to the last known residence of the said Fred Camp an attested copy of said libel and of this order thereon, that the said Fred Camp may then and there show cause why the prayer of said libel should not be granted.

By the Court,
LOUIS A. COOK, Clerk.
October 22, A. D. 1900.
A true copy of said libel and the order thereon.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
NORFOLK, ss.

To the Honorable the Board of County Commissioners of the County of Norfolk.

Respectfully represent your petitioners being five and more inhabitants of the town of Wrentham, in said county of Norfolk, that common convenience and necessity require that that part of East street, in said Wrentham, which begins at the line separating the towns of Wrentham and Foxborough and runs westerly to a point near the almshouse in said Wrentham, which point is the terminus of the former relocation of the westerly part of said East street as made by the county commissioners of said county of Norfolk, be located anew, the boundary lines thereof established and alterations made in its course and width.

Wherefore your petitioners pray that you will, after giving notice and proceeding in the manner prescribed in laying out highways, order and decree that that part of East street above described be located anew, the boundary thereof be established, that such alterations in its course and width as your Board deems proper be made, and that such further proceedings may be had in the premises as the statute requires.

Dated this eighteenth day of September, A. D. 1900.

DANIEL BROWN and nineteen others.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
NORFOLK, ss.

At a meeting of the County Commissioners, begun and held at Dedham, within and for said county of Norfolk, on the fourth Tuesday of September, A. D. 1900, and by adjournment on the sixteenth day of October, A. D. 1900.

On the petition aforesaid, Ordered that the County Commissioners will meet at the town house in Wrentham on at 10 o'clock a. m. and thence proceed to view the route described in said petition and hear and act thereon.

And that an attested copy of said petition, with this order thereon, be served upon the clerk of the town of Wrentham thirty days at least before the time appointed for said view, and also that a like copy be published three weeks successively in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper printed at Franklin, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before said view, and that like copies be posted up in two or more public places in Wrentham fourteen days at least before said view, that all persons and corporations interested for or against said petition may then and there appear and be heard if they see fit.

LOUIS A. COOK, Clerk.
A true copy of original petition on file and of order thereon.
Attest R. B. WORTHINGTON,
Assistant Clerk.

Automobiles on English Farms.

The automobile is to be turned to practical account by the farmers of Kent, England. Every year a large part of the fruit crop rots from lack of transportation, the railways not being able to meet the emergency, and the plan is for the farmers next year to take things in their own hands, starting motor cars round the orchards during the evening and night and bringing the day's pickings to London by the early morning.—N. Mrs. Wiseguy—Fairy tales? I should say not. He's too smart to waste his time on fairy tales. He tells me Chinese stories because they're half true.—Syracuse Herald

Had to See the Boss.

Jones—I say, Jim, will you go with us down to the shore to-morrow night? We'll get back soon after 12 o'clock, I guess.

Brown—I should like to go, and I don't know but I will. I can't tell you positively just now.

Jones—I understand. You want to ask your wife.

Brown—No such thing. I want to ask the janitor if he is willing. I live in an apartment house, you remember.—Boston Transcript.

FRANKLIN NEWS IN BRIEF

Latest Local Events and Personal Items of Interest to Readers.

Conductor George Cotton has moved from Hyde Park to Winter street.

L. W. Daniels entertained Charles H. Dunton and family of Allston on Sunday.

N. B. Stone, former manager of the Town farm here, is master of the Medway grange.

A number of the Franklin Masonic fraternity will go to Milford on Wednesday evening.

The Dean football eleven will play the Tufts second team at Medford next Saturday afternoon.

Albert James Gilmore is reported about to move to Holliston, where a son is engaged in the meat business.

G. S. F. Singleton moved last week into the house he recently purchased of Mrs. Morse-Russell on Main street.

Rev. F. B. Sleeper is attending the Baptist State anniversaries held in the First Baptist church in Beverly this week.

Miss Ellen Butters, teacher in the Thayer school, is suffering from tonsilitis. Mrs. Barbara Tower substitutes in her place.

The Ladies' Social circle of the Universalist church will meet with Mrs. James Chilson, Dean avenue, Wednesday afternoon.

Miss Ethel Hornick, formerly instructor in elocution at Dean, is in Frohman's "Manœuvres of Jane" cast at the Hollis theatre in Boston.

Rev. and Mrs. I. W. Sneath are entertaining his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Sneath, and his sister, Mrs. H. C. Bruner, of Columbia, Pa.

The Jolly club held another enjoyable hop at Red Men's hall Friday evening, the affair being well attended. Prof. J. A. O'Sullivan furnished the music.

Arrangements are being made to receive the returns by telegraph at some central place next Tuesday evening, particulars of which will be given later.

A telephone pay station was established at McCabe & Cody's grocery store on Union street Friday for the accommodation of people in that section of the town.

About ten of the members of the Roundabout club went to Natick today as guests of Mrs. W. H. Colby. Of course they were most delightfully entertained.

A. R. Morse, of Walpole, formerly liquor officer here, but now manager of the truant school at Walpole, was in town on Friday, attending the funeral of William Mann.

The Mothers' section will meet with Mrs. C. F. Nye on Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Enoch Waite, when Mrs. Rebecca Farnum will give an interesting "picture talk."

Rev. Dr. DeNormandie, who failed to meet his engagement with the Alden club last week Monday evening, was sidetracked at Norwood while on his way here. The joke is on him.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of James E. O'Connell of Woonsocket and Miss Agnes Callahan of Washington street. The ceremony will be performed on Wednesday, Nov. 7.

Some of our local sportsmen are rather indignant that game wardens from neighboring Woonsocket come up here to shoot birds and carry them away, contrary to law. They propose to look the matter up.

The following election officers were appointed by the selectmen Friday evening: Tellers, B. M. Rockwood, John P. Costello, John E Barber and M. F. Conroy; ballot clerks, Albert H. Martin, John A. O'Sullivan.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Stewart and H. W. Thayer have returned from the Fall River Y M C. A. conference decidedly enthusiastic over association work, and speak very highly of the interest and results of the conference

Elaborate preparations are being made by the different committees of the Ladies' Auxiliary in charge of the Hallowe'en party to be held Wednesday evening in Foresters' hall, and the affair promises to be a pleasant social event.

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Noyes have returned from the vacation in New York state and Massachusetts. Mr. Noyes' father, by the way, is a campaign speaker and speaks at Wrentham next Monday evening with Candidate Powers.

An eastern-born lady, living many years in California, writes to a friend here: "This (California) is God's country" She has evidently forgotten the New England climate and does not realize what a delightful fall season we have experienced.

Rev. G W. Miner gave an informal talk Friday morning before some of the pupils of the High school on the subject, "The Nebula Hypothesis." He traced briefly the evolution of the sun and planets from a nebulus state to their present condition.

Mrs. Mary Dugan passed away at her home on Cottage street Friday evening, aged 63 years, her death being due to heart trouble. She leaves one son and one daughter, Charles and Miss Mary Dugan. The funeral was held yesterday from St. Mary's chapel.

We doubt if there is another telephone exchange in the state that has a more expert and courteous day operator than our local exchange possesses in Mrs. Tracey. Although kept busy all day long answering calls, never once does she lose her temper or get "rattled."

Commencing yesterday morning, the electric cars to Wrentham and Plainville began upon an hourly schedule, instead of every hour and a half, the cars leaving the postoffice at quarter past the hour. This change is due to the request of the Wrentham people, who thought the hours of running too far apart.

On Friday the 2 p. m. car from Milford to Bellingham, on the Milford, Attleboro and Woonsocket street railway, jumped the track at Bellingham and ran into the front yard of Carroll E. White's home. It had fourteen passengers, but none were injured. The car is a vestibuled one and every window was broken and the apparatus wrecked to the extent of $100. Traffic was delayed four hours.

The following children of the Four Corners school have been neither absent nor tardy during the month of October: Walter Bristew, Earle Conway, Beatrice Copeland, Willie Dauphinee, Bertha Feeley, Nellie Feeley, Edwin Ferrer, Henry Granger, Lina Hamilton, George Joyce, May Keefe, Chester Ledbury, Raymond Lundborn, Richard Savage, Genevieve Searle, Russell Stewart, Robert Winters.

An eleven year-old boy and a shot gun were the cause for consternation among the employees in the spinning room of Hayward's mill yesterday morning. The boy had placed a tin can on a post near the mill for a target and was in the act of firing when a companion knocked the gun upward, the shot pouring into the windows of the spinning room on the second floor of the mill and grazing the heads of several of the help, some of whom ran out through fright. The boy was corraled and reprimanded. Several panes of glass were shattered.

The meeting of the Young Men's Christian association held last evening was well attended and particularly interesting. President E. D. Daniels presided. Encouraging reports from the committees were listened to, as well as a very interesting report of the Y. M. C. A. convention held at Fall River last week, which was given by H. W. Thayer. Sixteen new names were added to the list of members, which brings the membership up to over seventy at the present time. It is hoped the building question will be settled in a few days and active work commenced.

Fred. V. Hussey is studying medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York city. He went to London with his brother, Dr. C. B. Hussey, but on arriving there discovered that upon a number of matters he had been misinformed, and concluded that the wisest thing would be to take a four years' course here and finish up in Europe, if necessary. The course there would have required five years, and some other incidental matters made it more expensive than an American course, considering what one gained thereby. Dr. C. B. Hussey will remain abroad some months longer.

A sight of Daniel Brown's grapery at Wrentham center is a delight to the eye and good for the soul of the Christian. Clusters of delicious grapes nearly as large as a man's head hang on carefully trimmed vines. It sometimes seems a little strange that Eve was tempted by an apple when the consequences were so serious, but if she had gone into Mr. Brown's grapery and found the temptation too much it would not have been surprising to anyone who has been there.

The Greenhalge Literary society held their meeting last Friday afternoon. There was a large attendance. After the business was transacted the following program was enjoyed: Musical selection, Misses Van Arsdalen and Smith and Mr. Hudson; piano duet, Misses Bly and Daniels; reading, Mr. Munroe; vocal duet, Misses Billings and Corbin; piano solo, Miss Smith; reading, Miss Thompson; mandolin solo, Miss Daniels. This was one of the most enjoyable meetings held for a long time.

In the suit of John O'Donnell vs. George R Whiting, which was begun in the civil court at Dedham last Wednesday, the jury Friday returned a verdict in favor of the defendant The plaintiff claimed $2,000 damages for injuries alleged to have been sustained while employed in a mill at South Milford owned by the defendant, who is a resident of Unionville. A similar suit had also been entered for the same amount by another employe. Charles Todd of Boston represented the plaintiff, and Samuel L. Powers of Brookline the defendant.

The M. A & W. Street Railway company has made a report to the assessors of the gross receipts for a year and miles of track, as required by the law of 1898, and by which the railway company has to pay an excise or franchise tax varying according to the amount of receipts. The tax this year will amount to about $70 or $80, which under the law is to be expended in repair of highways, but not the part of the highway which the railway company is obliged by statute to keep in condition. The tax is based upon the mileage of track within town limits. The M. A & W. company operates 24.795 miles of track. The company's receipts for the year were $41,975 05, less than $4,000 per mile.

J. B. McKinnon, H. A. Worthley, J. McParland and N. Daniels were before Judge Doe in the district court Saturday to answer charges as follows: One for illegal keeping and one for selling liquor against McKinnon; one for illegal keeping against Worthley; three for alleged violation of the express law and one for illegal keeping against McParland, and one for exposing liquor for sale and one for illegal keeping against Daniels McKinnon and Worthley pleaded guilty to the charge of illegal keeping and were fined $50 each, the charge of selling against the former being placed on file. McParland and Daniels pleaded not guilty to all the charges entered against them. A hearing was given McParland, but no decision was reached, and both cases were continued until next Saturday.

Registration closed at 10 p. m Saturday with 65 names added during the day and evening, making the added names 144. The assessors were in session from noon for assessing omitted polls, and several who had been overlooked in the spring applied and were put on the list. It is noticed that many are more concerned about this matter in the fall, near election time, than in the spring, when the assessors are looking for them. In 1896 the vote for president here was a total of 821; of which the Republicans had 661, the Democrats 98, and Democratic nomination 42, 18 votes divided between the other four parties. The registration at that time was somewhat larger than now. The total number of voters registered is 910, against 1,004 in 1896, and 986 in 1892.

A special car for the accommodation of the Franklin help employed at the Worcester Textile company's works at Unionville has been put on at 6 p. m. The regular 6 o'clock car had been unable to accommodate all the hands coming to Franklin and many of them had been obliged to stand daily, and it appears the employees had called upon the street railway officials and requested that a special car be placed at their service. The company was considering the matter, but were acting too slow for the employees, who agreed not to ride on the regular car. Accordingly on Wednesday and Thursday evenings the help did not ride on the regular car, but made the distance to town on foot. The railway company, however, came to their relief on Friday and provided the desired accommodation.

A Rummage Sale.

St. John's Guild will conduct a "rummage sale" of large proportions next Saturday afternoon and evening, Nov. 3, in the eastermost store in Opera House block. All kinds of articles, including clothing, household furnishings, boots, shoes, hats and caps, furniture, utensils and tools will be sold at prices so low as to be insignificant. Come one, come all, to this rummage sale.

Rally Postponed.

Owing to the death of the mother of Hon. S. L. Powers, the rally arranged for tomorrow evening has been postponed until next Monday evening at the same time and place. Please extend the notice

An Interesting Discourse.

Chaplain John W. F. Barnes of the State prison, Charlestown, gave a thrilling and impressive address at the monthly temperance meeting at the Baptist church Sunday evening. The Scripture was read by Rev. Dr. Sneath, and prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. Hodge.

Rev. Mr. Barnes certainly has the rare tact of completely hiding his own personality behind the important message he is giving, and making the startling facts speak forcefully and eloquently. There was genuine refinement of pathos and wit in all the discourse. He painted with absolute accuracy and fulness the life of the criminals in prison. He revealed them as human beings subject to human infirmities the same as others. To brand a rebellious prisoner with a hot iron or largely starve him as punishment is using the Devil to punish the Devil, and as a result you have all the more Devil in the convict. He requires united firmness and love. There is no worse sin than Christian respectability that is heartless toward those who are in prison Sometimes the convicts are victims of heredity or environment, blighted and cursed intellectually, socially, morally and spiritually.

Too often the man least guilty is caught and punished, and the chief offender goes free Too often men have been goaded into crime by the injustice and cruelty of society If our prisons are not to "reform" as well as "punish" they fail of their purpose. There is great moral and spiritual hope for many of the convicts who in the future may become genuine and noble Christian men. To say that Chaplain Barnes is well fitted for his important position is mild praise. His great soul is all absorbed in his work until it has become the ruling passion of his life. For nearly twenty years he has filled this office, sparing not himself in the slightest in his loving, patient devotion to the convicts Would that the world had more of such noble and godly men, who live only for the good they can do.

Decided Improvement.

Much needed improvements are under way at the Opera house, which, when completed, will be of decided convenience and advantage. It has always been a difficult matter for the stage to accommodate companies carrying high scenery, owing to the fact that the ceiling was too low to admit of its being put in This has been obviated by removing some of the upper woodwork. Scenery of any height can now be used, though, of course, no more will show than the proscenium arch will admit. A new gridiron has been built 22 feet above the stage and the supports for the smaller flats and scenes will be arranged to turn back to give a clear stage the full height of the stage when required. The sanitary arrangements will be completely renovated and a great addition to the conveniences of the house will be a new ladies' toilet and dressing room in the rear of the box office, with an entrance from the main room under the balcony. These changes will add both to the convenience of the stage people and the audience and make the house also much more desirable for balls and parties.

Thayer a Winner, 10 to 6.

Dean lost to Thayer academy at football Saturday mostly through overconfidence. Both teams played strongly, the visitors having just a shade the best of it. The contest was played in a drizzling rain, but the teams paid little attention to the disagreeable conditions and battled on to the end. The summary:

DEAN.	Positions.	THAYER.
Manning	l. e	Reilly
Mitchell	l. t	Harmon
Townsend	l. g	Burroughs, Bickley
Echols	c	Dok
Roberts	r. g	Platts
Stone	r. t	Adams
Smith	r. e	Carr
Phipps	quarter	Gallagher
Pulsifer	l. h. b	Esterbrooks
Thompson, (capt)	r. h. b	Remick
Forbes	f. b	Kelley

Score, Thayer 10, Dean 6. Touchdowns, Esterbrooks, Townsend, Phipps. Goal from touchdown, Forbes. Umpire, Gallagher. Referee, Healy. Linesmen, Winslow and M. Benson. Time, 20-minute halves.

A Useful Life.

The passing of William Mann, on the 23d instant, to his final rest from earthly service, removes from our midst one of sterling worth, whose presence among us for upwards of forty eight years has been a continued example of devotion to the sturdy principles of Puritanism, as exhibited in church life and worldly activities.

He was born in Chesterfield, N. H., Dec. 11, 1819, where he remained till seventeen years of age, when he removed to Forestdale, R. I., to learn the trade of scythe plating,—walking the entire distance of about one hundred miles.

WILLIAM MANN.

Possessed of a longing desire for a better education, he later found his way to Clinton, N. Y., where he lived with a professor of Hamilton college, working for his board while attending school in the preparatory department Returning to Rhode Island, he served the remainder of his apprenticeship at his trade, which he perfected to that degree his services were sought after far and near, throughout the New England states, New York and Canada. He held the record for plating the most scythes in one day, and plated the last scythe manufactured in Rhode Island. He worked at his trade for thirty-seven years, until machines largely supplanted the use of scythes.

He purchased his home here in the spring of '52, continuing his trade at Forestdale, and for the want of a public conveyance walking home after his week's work, that he might be with his family on Sunday, which for him was the day of all the week Denied church privileges in early life, he yet as a young man sought counsel of Rev. Timothy Alden Taylor concerning his spiritual interests, and at the age of twenty five united with the Congregational church at Slatersville, R. I., removing his relationship to the sister church in this place nearly half a century ago

For forty eight years previous to his last sickness, he never once missed attendance upon Sunday services, on one occasion braving a severe storm to find himself in the Catholic church, when no other was open in town. One of the first, by word and act, to advocate the suppression of slavery, he early devoted himself to the cause of temperance, standing firmly and uncompromisingly for prohibition.

He was a man of frugal economy, yet of large benevolence, as many are able testify whom he has quietly helped financially and otherwise; a man of strong, earnest convictions, freely and fearlessly expressed at all times. Illustrative of the appreciation felt for his staunch character and noble qualities, we quote a few sentences from a letter addressed to his son-in law, under date of May 31, last, by his children's pastor, Rev. W. A. Bartlett, D. D., of Lowell: "I shall never forget the help his presence and earnestness have given us here. It has been a rare privilege to have known him, and it is something to remember that he has been in our church and there has given testimony to the grace of God. * * I have thought of him so much, and I wish you would extend to him my Christian greetings, and tell him how much his faith has helped us all, especially myself, in the preaching of the gospel, for which he is so true a witness."

In June, '49, he married Sarah Bacon, daughter of Deacon Joseph Addison and Chloe Fales Metcalf, who died Nov. 1, 1872. In October, '79, he married Mrs. Mary W. Smith, who survives him. He will be greatly missed by a wide circle of friends, and deeply mourned by his widowed wife, three daughters and a son, with their families, including eight grandchildren, who survive him

The funeral services were held at his late home Friday afternoon, his pastor, Rev. I. W. Sneath, officiating. His remarks were based upon Prov. 20: 7, "The just man walketh in his integrity; his children are blessed after him." Rev. N. T. Dyer, his son-in-law, supplemented the pastor's remarks with a few words concerning his exemplary home life. Mrs. H. R. Jenks feelingly rendered his two favorite hymns, "Rock of Ages" and "Jesus, Lover of My Soul."

The body was borne from the house and laid in its last resting place in Union street cemetery by four nephews, John S., Bernerd M., Charles A. and Philip R. Allen, of Walpole Among the many present from out of town was Samuel Tabor, of Slatersville, R. I., an intimate friend for upwards of a half century.

An Interesting Meeting.

The Fairbanks chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, met with Mrs. E. K. Ray, Friday afternoon, Nov. 26.

Members were present from Walpole, Hyde Park and Braintree. Fairbanks chapter at present is doing the work of marking the graves of its Revolutionary ancestors with the bronze marker. The looking up of the Revolutionary services and burial places of these staunch old New Englanders has been very interesting This is a work that the town of Franklin should do for its graves of the Revolution to be found in the cemetery here. It is especially brought to mind as we see the improvements going on in that sacred place. The chapter found one of its heroes was buried in Winthrop, Me., and upon writing to the board of selectmen in regard to a marker, learned that Winthrop had honored every Revolutionary soldier buried there with this memorial. Our country, young as it is, has a history; let us honor it.

Woonsocket Opera House.

James A. Herne's "Shore Acres" has a turkey dinner with cranberry sauce and all the accustomed trimmings. In "Sag Harbor" clam pie is the principal feature. In "Hearts of Oak" the bill of fare will comprise Boston baked beans, meat pie, pancakes, boiled potatoes, bread, butter and tea. "Hearts of Oak" will be the attraction at the Opera house on Friday, Nov. 2. Seats go on sale tomorrow.

A Treat Promised.

Charles Williams, one of the most popular readers before the public, will give a reading for the benefit of the High school library Friday of this week, at 7.45, in the hall of the Horace Mann school. Mr. Williams read here last year to a very delighted audience. The selections will be from the stage versions of "To Have and To Hold."

This book is one of the best selling and widest read books of the day. Over 250,000 have already been sold. The Boston Herald says of him: "Mr. Williams' clear and flexible voice, his keen sense of humor, and his fine intelligence make him a most agreeable platform reader."

Grand Opera at Woonsocket Opera House.

On Thursday evening, Nov 8, the International Grand Operatic company will be in Woonsocket, and the event will be the talk of the city for a long time to come. The programme will consist of the second act of "Martha" and "Cavalleria Rusticana," which will be given in correct costumes and stage effects complete. Madame Charles Fontaine Lorraine, the great artist impersonator, will give her inimitable delineations during the acts. Such a musical treat as promised will doubtless draw a large audience. All lovers of opera should not fail to see this company, which is composed of some of the finest artists in the world. Prices are very reasonable, consistent with such a high-grade attraction. Seats secured at the Woonsocket Opera house Nov. 3 by letter or telephone, No. 173—2.

American Corn in Europe.

It looks as though the fight that has been going on for years to get Europeans to buy American corn has been won at last, for the exports of this cereal are now on such a large scale that it is reasonable to assume that it has got a firm foothold abroad. For the past ten years the various secretaries of agriculture have endeavored to show to foreigners the value of our corn and all sorts of schemes were adopted to introduce it in Europe. During the famous famine in Ireland a number of ship loads of corn were sent to the sufferers, says an eastern exchange, but they had such a poor opinion of it that they refused to receive it. The fight was kept up, however, with gratifying results, the exports last year amounting to more than [illegible] bushels. The demand for this cereal is widely distributed and extends to the northern half of South America to Mexico, the West Indies, Central America, the British possessions in North America and even to Africa and Australia. As regards distribution, however, the most significant fact is that from eight to nine-tenths of the total exports are usually consigned to the various countries of Europe, preeminent among these takers being Great Britain, Germany, France, Belgium, Denmark and Holland. In these countries it is interesting to note, the use of corn is mostly confined, as is the case in the United States, to the feeding of live stock, though it is also employed to a limited extent in brewing, distilling and other industries and in the manufacture of proprietary foods and confectionery.

Man and His Clothes.

Ten years ago a man who would have appeared in the streets of any city in this country in knickerbockers and golf stockings would have gone through a very uncomfortable experience. Now he can wear that sort of leg attire in rain or shine, hot weather or cold, through snow or mud, or for any purpose he pleases, in city or country, and nobody thinks anything about it. The only attention he will be likely to attract to himself will be caused solely by marked excess or defect of pulchritude in his calves, facetiously observes the Philadelphia North American. In the matter of head covering there has been an almost equal growth in the latitude allowed to personal taste and comfort. The shirt-waist man is only treading in the footsteps of all those who have gone before. Few in numbers, but determined and unterrified, he goes on his way, calm and cool, this summer, but next summer he will be seen everywhere, and by the dog days of the following year the man who wears a coat will be as scarce and as conspicuous as the man is who now wears a waistcoat.

To-day the seat of the sheep-shearing industry of the union has shifted from the middle west to the plateau region between the Rockies and Sierras. Ohio is still doing well in the business, with nearly 3,0[illegible] head, but she has dropped from first to fourth in the list of mutton producing states. New Mexico is at the head, with more than 4,[illegible]. Montana has nearly as many, while Wyoming leads Ohio by a few hundred thousand head. Utah closely follows Ohio in the rating. Oregon, California and Texas each has about 2,5[illegible] sheep.

It is made in Vermont, of pure herbs, and is redolent of the fragrant woods, green hills, and bracing air of the Green Mountains.

THE FALSE PROPHET.

Bryan's Predictions Which Failed to Materialize.

If the prophecies and predictions made by Mr Bryan had proven to be true, the gold standard, which has been in operation since he uttered them, would have produced the following dire results, to wit:

It would have increased the purchasing power of the gold dollar.—Madison Square Garden speech.

It would have been as certain to make prices fall as a stone is to fall when it is thrown into the air.—Newton, Ia., speech.

It would have increased the debts of the people and lessened their ability to pay them.—Baltimore speech.

It would have made times harder and harder.—Same speech.

It would have starved everybody except the money changers and the money owners.—New Haven speech.

It would have transferred the bread which one man earns to another man who had not earned it.—Hartford speech.

It would have made the rich richer and the poor poorer.—Newark, O., speech.

It would have decreased the number who are happy and increased the number who are in distress.—Same speech.

It would have destroyed the hope of the toiling masses.—Minneapolis speech.

It would have destroyed the opportunity to work.—Same speech.

It would have increased the number of idle men.—Same speech.

It would have decreased the volume of standard money.—Same speech.

It would have encouraged the hoarding of money.—Hornesville, N. Y., speech.

It would have made it more and more difficult for the farmer to live.—Madison Square Garden speech.

It would have injured the wage-earner.—Same speech.

It would have made employment less certain.—Same speech.

It would have discouraged enterprise.—Same speech.

It would have paralyzed industry.—Same speech.

It would have lessened the ability of savings banks to collect their assets.—Same speech.

It would have increased the danger of depositors losing their deposits in savings banks.—Madison Square Garden speech.

It would have compelled depositors in savings banks to withdraw their deposits to pay living expenses.—Same speech.

It would have lessened the [illegible] of those engaged in business occupations and would have lessened the permanency of such salaries.—Same speech.

It would have injured those who have permanent investments in railroad stocks and other like enterprises.—Same speech.

It would have injured or destroyed the manufacturers of agricultural implements, wagons and buggies.—Springfield, O., and Flint, Mich., speeches.

It would have lessened the ability of the masses to buy goods and thereby would have lessened the number of traveling men.—Indianapolis speech to traveling men.

It would have made it impossible for husbands and wives to pay off the mortgages on their homes.—Minneapolis speech to ladies.

It would have made it necessary to advocate the closing up of our public schools.—Monmouth, Ills., speech.

Prosaic Reason.

"So she has gone home to her mother, has she? Don't you know it's the saddest thing on earth to think of a trusting young woman awakening to find her ideals have been shattered, that she loves him no longer; that her idol has feet of clay?"

GENERAL HARRISON'S OPINION.

Bryan's Election Would Throw the Country's Affairs Into Confusion.

"I think, therefore, that voters ought to vote with a view to the right decision of those questions that are directly and finally in the control of the president and congress.

"The general reasons I gave in my Carnegie hall speech in 1896, why Bryan should not be elected, still hold good with me. His election would, I think, throw governmental and business affairs into confusion.

"We should not aid the election of a president who would, admittedly, if he could, destroy the gold standard and other things that we value even more, upon the deceptive suggestion that he has been bound and that the Republican party will, after defeat, still have strength enough to save the temple. It will be much better not to allow the man with destructive tendencies so much as to lean against its pillars.

"Perhaps it will save you much trouble if I give you and underwrite as of this date, this extract from my Carnegie hall speech: 'When we have a president who believes that it is neither his right nor his duty to see that the mail trains are not obstructed, and that interstate commerce has its free way, irrespective of state lines, and courts that fear to use their ancient and familiar writs to restrain and punish law-breakers, free trade and free silver will be appropriate accompaniments of such an administration and cannot add appreciably to the national distress or the national dishonor.'

"The economic policies of the Republican party have been vindicated by the remarkable and general prosperity that has developed during Mr. McKinley's administration—succeeding a period of great depression.

"A change of administration this fall would almost certainly renew conditions from which we have so happily escaped. The full dinner bucket is not a sordid emblem. It has a spiritual significance for the spiritually-minded. It means more comfort for the wife and family, more schooling and less work for the children and a margin of saving for sickness and old age."

THE FUTURE MARKET.

The Time Is Coming When It Will Be In the Far East.

"A great change has recently taken place in the manufacture of goods. It is now necessary to have an outlet for our overflow of all kinds of manufactured goods. The home market is safe. We are able to compete in most of the markets of the world. We have met hostile tariffs abroad, but we have by our business ability been able to overcome opposition.

SENATOR HENRY CABOT LODGE.

"The great markets of the future will be in the far east. China is particularly a market which needs attention of such an industrial State as Massachusetts.

"The time has come when we must have our share of the eastern trade. There are powers which would close us out. We will take our chances in fair competition. Unfair restrictions will perhaps close some of our mills and large machine shops. Russia would like to shut us out of China, and will attempt it elsewhere. That is the reason the Chinese question must be important to Americans.

"We demand that the Chinese empire should be upheld and that the open door policy should be maintained to all the world. The United States is taking an important part in Chinese affairs. In that Pres. McKinley and Sec. Hay have taken an important part."—Senator Lodge.

Which Party?

Which party can you trust in this matter—the party that has done everything that has been accomplished for liberty in the past, or the party which has resisted everything that has been accomplished for liberty; the party that sustained slavery, or the party that abolished it; the party that made war upon the Union, or the party that put down the rebellion; the party that adopted the three great amendments which made every slave a freeman and every freeman a citizen and every citizen a voter, or the party that filibustered for days and nights against the adoption of the 13th amendment, which was carried by a single vote? Will you trust the party that governs Massachusetts, or the party that governs New York city and Mississippi?—Senator Hoar.

"If Bryan Is Honest."

"If Bryan is an honest man and has the convictions he avows, his first and greatest effort will be to promote the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1. His next step will be to reorganize the supreme court as to take from it the functions the exercise of which has made it great, and which have differentiated it from any court which ever before existed.—W. H. Peckham (Dem.), nominated by Cleveland for United States supreme court.

wasted muscles and decaying bones.
What havoc!

Scrofula, let alone, is capable of all that, and more.

It is always radically and permanently cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I was a sufferer from scrofula from birth. My eyes were so affected that I was almost blind for days at a time. My neck began to swell so that I could not breathe freely. Medicines failed to do me any good until I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. Today I have excellent health." MISS KETTIE McGUIRE, Silver Creek, Ky.

"I was troubled with scrofula and came near losing my eyesight. For four months I could not see to do anything. After taking two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla I could see to walk around the house and when I had taken eight bottles I could see as well as I ever could." SUSIE A. HAIRSTON, Withers, N. C.

Many Royal Palaces in Siam.

The royal palaces at Bangkok form a city in themselves. They consist of several hundred individual palaces, surrounded by magnificent gardens and pagodas. Bangkok is really a city of waters. It is an Indo-Chinese Venice. More people live in floating houses on the Menam, "the Nile of Siam," and in many canals, than in permanent buildings.—N. Y. Times.

Came Near Dying.

"For three days and nights I suffered agony untold from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Lowther, clerk of the district court, Centreville, Iowa. "I thought I should surely die and tried a dozen different medicines, but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely. I went to sleep and did not awake for eight hours. On awakening a few hours ago I felt so gratified that the first work I do on going to the office is to write to the manufacturers of the remedy and offer them my grateful thanks and say, 'God bless you and the splendid medicine you make.'" Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know it.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail, address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.

Why He Couldn't Understand.

Two commercial travelers in a railway carriage entered into conversation.

One of them tried very hard to make the other understand something, but he was either very hard of hearing or slow in believing.

At last his friend lost his temper and exclaimed: "Why, don't you see? It's as plain as A, B, C!"

"That may be," said the other; "but, you see, I am D E F."—Tit-Bits.

TO YOUNG VOTERS.

Secretary Long Offers Some Sound Advice.

Secretary Long has issued through the national Republican committee headquarters in Chicago an address which is in the nature of an explanation to a first voter of what he must consider before casting his ballot on Nov. 6. Among other things, Secretary Long says to the first voter that the problems set before him are too grave for snap judgment. Secretary Long says:

Copyright by J. E. Purdy, Boston.
HON. JOHN D. LONG.

"He must decide whether, being now on a tidal wave of prosperity brought about us the result of Republican principles, he is justified in promoting the supremacy of the Democratic principles which were responsible for the years of national depression which characterized the recent administrations of the Democratic party.

"He must decide whether he favors honest and stable money which the Republican party insured by its enactment of the gold standard, or debased money, the sure consequence of the free silver heresy which the Democratic party specifically advocates.

"He must decide whether he shall support the administration which carried the nation through a successful war and added to its jurisdiction new possessions which his country's intelligence and humanity will develop to the enjoyment of stable institutions and local self-government, or shall repudiate the victories he and his brothers in arms won at Santiago and Manila and abandon to anarchy, or to the sway of foreign governments, the islands which are a sacred trust on the American people.

"If he live in the country, he sees the product of the farm bringing a higher price than it did before the Republican party gained control of the national administration. If he live in the manufacturing town, he sees the doors of the factories open and hears the hum of their business works. In all walks of life he finds that labor is receiving a higher wage for its output, and, carrying his investigation still further, he discovers that his wage has a greater purchasing power.

"In spite of the manifest advantages of the gold standard law, the Democratic party has vigorously denounced it and has asserted its purpose to bring about its repeal as promptly as it is able to do so.

"The intelligent young voter will not neglect to calculate the effect of the overturning of a law which is in great measure responsible for the prosperous condition of the country today, and that has made the United States a creditor nation. Nor will he forget to consider that the success of the party that stands for a principle that involves a reduction of the value of the nation's unit of money in the markets of the world will of itself cause vast injury to business interests and incidentally to himself

"He has been told that we should at once grant the Filipinos self-government and establish a protectorate over the islands when he knows there are 84 tribes in the islands and that millions of money and thousands of men would be necessary to support them against the assaults of the others, and that the war-making power which rests under the constitution in the hands of his representatives would be transferred to an irresponsible people whom we would be obliged to uphold."

The German Vote.

New York, Oct. 8.—The New Yorker Staats Zeitung, the big independent German daily of this city, in its leading editorial today announces that it is unequivocally and unqualifiedly in favor of the re-election of McKinley. The editorial, in part, follows:—

"The lack of confidence in Bryan's character is so pronounced that his election would suffice to produce grave economic convulsions, even if his hands were completely tied, but he can do untold harm without the assistance of congress. And we must consider that his election would be interpreted by the politicians as a victory of silver.

Lincoln's Logic.

Abraham Lincoln told his countrymen in 1864 that it was not a good time to swap horses when they were crossing a stream. It does not seem to me to be a very good time to swap horses now, while we are crossing the tempestuous Chinese sea in a typhoon. I like the way President McKinley and the department of state are handling this great and difficult Chinese question. They will go through with it to the satisfaction of the American people.—Senator Hoar.

OLNEY IS THE ONLY ONE

Of Surviving Members of Democratic Cabinets Who Is For Bryanism.

The Bryanites throughout the country have been so pleased over the fact that ex-Secretary Olney, a life-long Democrat, intended to support Bryan for the presidency this fall, that the Republican national committee took the trouble to look up the present political affiliations of all the men who were in the two Cleveland cabinets—the only Democratic cabinets since the war.

There were 20 of these men in all, and of them Olney is the only one who has declared himself for Bryan. The committee says in its statement:

"It was Mr. Olney who interpreted the law of injunction by the courts so as to restrain the strikers at Chicago, a doctrine that the Democrats have found to be so obnoxious.

"Six members of the Democratic cabinets are now dead. Six of the living members have come out in the support of sound money and the party that stands for law and order. No one doubts where these men stand in the present campaign—Fairchild, Carlisle, Lamont, Whitney, Dickinson and Morton. The Bryanites do not say much about the others besides Mr. Olney.

"In the list of campaign speakers the names of H. A. Herbert, Hoke Smith, D. R. Francis, W. S. Bissell, W. F. Vilas, Judson Harmon and W. L. Wilson do not appear. Their silence expresses their feelings toward the crowd that is running the Democracy today. Not one of these former cabinet members has announced that he will support Mr. Bryan."

Carlisle's Prediction.

Ex-Secretary Carlisle has told intimate friends that he would not vote for president in the coming election. He said he was satisfied that McKinley would be elected, and that he would probably receive a larger vote in the electoral college than he had four years ago.

As for New York, Mr. Carlisle said it was as sure for McKinley as was Iowa, and that he would probably carry the state by between 65,000 and 70,000. Mr. Carlisle said that even the Democratic leaders in New York admitted that they had no confidence in carrying the state and no hope of electing Bryan.

Then and Now.

During Cleveland's two administrations the most sanguine prayer either workman or employer dared to breathe was, "God grant I may be no worse off tomorrow than I was yesterday." Under President McKinley the employer gets rich, and the workman every Saturday night lays up a half or a third of his wages.—Senator Hoar.

How Bryan Has It.

There was a Democrat once who said: "If any one attempts to haul down the American flag, shoot him on the spot."

The paramount chief of the so-called Democratic party of today says, in effect and substance: "If any man fires on the American flag, haul it down."—N. Y. Sun.

SENATOR HOAR'S SUMMING UP.

Democrats Have the Same Old Leaders and the Same Old Doctrines.

We had a great debate in 1896. We made up the issue and the Democratic party was defeated. We have had four years' experience. The Democratic party comes back, I say, for a new trial with the same old candidate, the same old leaders, and, with one, or perhaps I ought properly to say, two exceptions, the same old doctrines. They mean to elect Mr. Bryan if they can; they mean to get the free coinage of silver at 16 to 1, if they can; they mean to overthrow the protective system, if they can; they mean to adopt Mr. Bryan's remedy for what they call "trusts" or great and overgrown aggregations of capital, if they can; they mean to impose an income tax by national authority, if they can, and they mean to reconstruct the supreme court of the United States, if they can. Two other questions have assumed prominence at the present time not discussed in the last election, but practical questions now. In five states at the south the Democratic party has succeeded, by ingenious processes, in taking away from the colored men the right to vote. Other states are following their example, so that before long if they do not stop there are to be 10,000,000 colored people in the United States deprived of the rights of American citizenship, and the question is upon us whether we shall execute the constitutional mandate that the southern Democratic states which have done this thing shall have their representation in congress proportionately reduced, or whether you and I also are to be disfranchised and have 50 or 60 men make laws for us who represent nothing but usurpation. That question demands our attention now.—Senator Hoar.

SENATOR GEORGE F. HOAR.

HE WOULD CHECK EXPANSION.

Yet Bryan Does Not Promise Exploitation of New Enterprises.

"The present campaign," says Senator Chauncey M. Depew, "emphasizes the difference in practical life between a prophet whose predictions must stand the test of time and experience, and the pledge of a party whose promises are based upon principles which have worked out in the past the results which are guarantees for the future. In other words, theory and experience are again, as in 1896, in hostile array.

"Having proved himself such a colossal failure as a prophet in 1896, we can hardly believe in 1900 that Col. Bryan has now the real mantle of Elijah. The difficulty with the terrors which he depicts from Republican principles and policies is that they have all been tested, both under Republican and Democratic Administrations. Protection of American industries has given America to Americans and sent forth our products to the conquest of the markets of the world. The gold standard of value has divorced us from Mexico and China, has placed us in commercial relations with and upon the same commercial basis as the great industrial nations of Christendom. It has given stability to our credit; it has made the American dollar recognized upon an equal value with the English sovereign or the French louis everywhere around the globe; it has given steadiness to our business, unexampled credit to our Government

"Mr. Bryan does not deny the wonderful prosperity of our country and of our people; he does not promise any better returns to the farmer or the manufacturer or the merchant; he does not promise any greater employment or higher wages to the laborer; he does not promise the exploitation of new enterprises and the conditions which make money active and capital useful by new additions to the productive powers of the country, and therefore a larger employment and a greater distribution of money. The country is to be no better than it is today or was yesterday by his election, even upon his own showing, upon his own prophecy, and upon his own promise.

"His position, measured by plain standards of business, is simply this: 'The country is drunk with prosperity; it is an inebriation which is unhealthy and cannot last; if you elect me I will check the pace, curtail this unhealthy expansion; my methods and my remedies will arrest the disease and eradicate it before it has destroyed the body politic.' In other words, through the process of a milder catastrophe he will prevent the greater one which he thinks otherwise inevitable. He is the veritable successor of the doctor in the well-known and venerable story who threw his patient into fits because he was death on fits.

"But, dear Dr. Bryan, except a little surface irritation here and there from too good living, there is nothing the matter with the American patient. He is in magnificent health, his vitality was never so vigorous, his brain never so active, his purposes never so clear and his future never so promising before. It will be many years before he leaves the healthy diet upon which he is now feeding for your patent medicines.

"A prophet who attempts to fool the people by holding up as untried theory demonstrated results and upon that theory predicting the reverse of what history has established, insults the intelligence of every person who is familiar with the story of the marvelous growth of the United States in the nineteenth century."

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2 65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit. The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save If your druggist can't supply you, it will be fowarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

Boring Metal Plates with Water.

Some fairly successful experiments have recently been made in drilling holes in and engraving on metal by means of electrolytic solutions. A nozzle of special construction was used. The lower end, which is pressed against the metal plate, is divided into two compartments, through which the electrolytic fluid flows. The upper end has two openings; through one the electrolyte flows in, down to the lower end against the plate, and finally up and out of the other The end of the nozzle, which is pressed against the plate to be drilled, is fitted with a rubber washer, whose shape determines that of the hole bored. A strong electric current is caused to flow through the plate into the electrolyte and back to the source of electricity. The nozzle circulation of the electrolyte in the nozzle carries off the metal as fast as the electrolysis liberates it. Some of the best results for iron were obtained with sulphuric acid as the electrolyte, but good work was also done with ordinary salt water.—Chicago Chronicle

Portable Electric Lamps to Be Introduced in Mining Operations to Succeed Present Oil One.

Old miners in England claim that they can always detect the presence of gas more quickly in their working places with a candle than with the ordinary safety lamp, and that they can always clear it off in a few minutes by fanning with their coats, the candle standing on the ground meanwhile, out of harm's way, the gas collecting near the roof. But mines are very different now from what they were in the typical old collier's days Explosions in those days, when they did take place, were only local and did little harm beyond burning the clothes and skin of those near. In these days an explosion often means the loss of hundreds of lives and the wrecking of the mine so that though many collieries are still worked by naked lights, either candles or small oil lamps, the number is becoming less every year, the pressure of mining inspectors being constantly directed to the adoption of safety lamps.

But the ordinary oil-burning safety lamp gives but a poor light and it must not be used in any position much out of the vertical or it goes out, and moreover, it is not a perfect safety lamp in the proper sense of the term, inasmuch as any one of the numerous forms will become red-hot and explode if it is exposed to a sufficiently powerful current of an explosive gaseous mixture for a sufficient time. Hence great efforts have been made to develop a portable electric lamp, which shall take the place of the present safety lamp at the face of the coal and in those parts of the mine where it is not considered safe to use lamps from the ordinary electric service

LESSON IN CHINESE WORDS

Here Is an Easy Rule by Which They May Be Pronounced Correctly.

If a few simple rules are observed Chinese words are not difficult to pronounce. A always about as a in far; e always approximately as e in they; i very like i in the machine or pin and u always as the u of rule. Every syllable has an independent value, and should be given that value in pronunciation. As for consonants, they are pronounced exactly as written These three rules will secure as correct a pronunciation of Chinese names as can be secured without oral instruction, says the Chicago Chronicle

For example, under the first rule one would say tah-koo for Taku, not take-you, as one may frequently hear the word pronounced: lee-hoong-chahng for Li Hung Chang, not lie-hung-chang; peh-king for Peking, not peek-in; shahng-hah-ee for Shanghai not shang-high; tsoong-le-yahmen for tsung-li-yamen, not tsunglie yamen and so on. Under the second rule Tientsin is pronounced teeyentsinn accenting the yen syllable, not teen-tsin Yunnan-fu is yoo-nahn-foo, not ynan-fyu. In like manner all words are pronounced with syllable distinctness and with uniform vowel sound. Under the third rule the province name Szechuan is sounded not zekuan, but nearly as zeh-choo-ahn, touching the choo very lightly; Liau-tong peninsula is li-hoo-tong.

SPOONS FROM EVERY HOTEL.

A Housekeeper's Fad That Astonished a Party of Roaming Bicyclists of Chicago.

In the northwestern part of Chicago is a little farm, removed from the main road over which the trolley cars rumble, and almost hidden by wide clover fields, says the Tribune of that city. It is not a regular stopping place for anyone going by on the main road, for no one would suspect that anything like civilization lurked among the tall weeds on that prairie.

Purely by accident some bicyclists stopped near the farmhouse, a little, tumble-down structure with a dilapidated shed attached to it, owing to a bicycle mishap to one of the party.

Inquiry for a drink of water brought to earth some of the most peculiar artificial well water ever drank by mortal man, but the surprise came when some honey was brought out. The spoons offered to the party were undoubtedly silver, and of the best. They bore the inscription of all the big hotels of the city, including the Grand Pacific, Palmer house, Tremont, Revere and a number of others.

Some one suggested that they were souvenir spoons, but just how they came to be where they were discovered by the bicycling party is a mystery

Changed Shirts with Each Other

The Outlook tells this story illustrative of the fussy, amateur generalship which has cost the British so dearly in South Africa: Notice was received in the various camps that on such and such a morning every man in Gen. ——'s army must change his shirt. The Imperial Light horse, who formed part of the command, had only one shirt apiece, and that was on their backs, so a messenger was dispatched to headquarters to explain But Gen. —— rose at once to the occasion. 'My orders,' he remarked grandly 'are imperative. If the Imperial Light horse have not got a second shirt let them change shirts with each other."

Bourne, on the Medway road, has been given up, owing to an accident to Mrs. Bourne.

A new timetable went into effect on the Medway & Medfield Street railroad Oct. 29. Both the Franklin and Dedham cars now run to the top of the Medway hill and connect with Milford line. This is what the selectmen of Medway have been trying to bring about for the past few months, and it has been before the town in town meeting once. It is a great convenience to the traveling public.

Dean lost to Tufts second eleven on Wednesday in the football contest played on the academy grounds. Both teams were remarkably strong and the game was hotly contested throughout. The score stood: Tufts 10, Dean 6. This was the last game the academy boys are scheduled to play here, having a date with Tufts second at Medford next Wednesday and one with Friends' school at Providence on Saturday, Nov. 17.

On Sunday evening a series of special services will be inaugurated in the Congregational church. Dr. Sneath will give a number of talks on the sacred places of the Holy Land. He will take his audience on an imaginary trip to these different places, and as guide give all the most interesting facts concerning them. On Sunday evening the place visited will be Bethlehem. The quartet will furnish appropriate music. All are welcome to journey with us.

The Rummage sale to be held by the ladies of St. John's guild Saturday afternoon and evening bids fair to be most successful. We have heard of sales where the articles contributed ranged from onyx lamps, Bagdad portierres and dress suits to kitchen stoves and baby carriages. The Franklin sale may not offer such remarkable attractions, but the goods already promised show that an opportunity will be given to those who need them to purchase useful articles of good quality at very low prices.

The Hallowe'en party given by the Ladies' Auxiliary, A. O. H., at Central square hall on Wednesday evening was well attended and proved an enjoyable affair. From 8 to 9 an entertaining programme was rendered, including vocal solos by Misses Elizabeth Pendergast and Bessie Walsh, piano solos by Misses Katherine Costello, Agnes Sullivan and Louise Fiorani and a recitation by Miss Rose Walsh. Dancing was then enjoyed until midnight, Prof. J. A. O'Sullivan furnishing music. A goodly number were present from the surrounding towns.

The Chicago women teachers are the pluckiest corps on earth. It looks as if they would get $5,000,000 extra taxes as a result of their crusade against untaxed stocks. They provided data for $238,000,000 addition to the valuation of a few corporations." —Journal of Education. This crusade was a result of a movement to curtail the teachers' salary because of high rates of taxation. The teachers proved that if all taxable property were taxed there could be no outcry at the high rates, because the rates would be materially reduced.

Rev. Mr. Woodland, former pastor of the Baptist church, who has been away from here nearly two years, is now located near Yarmouth, Nova Scotia. A short time ago he was the recipient of a most pleasing surprise party from his parishioners, who left with him and Mrs. Woodland a large number of substantial gifts. An address of congratulation, written upon a pine shingle, was read, and the reverend gentleman responded feelingly and fittingly. The Yarmouth Herald says of the event, in closing: "During the two years that Mr. and Mrs. Woodland have resided at Lockport they have surrounded themselves with a host of friends, and we suspect that they also think that the lines have fallen to them in pleasant places." Their many friends here will be glad to learn that they are so pleasantly situated Hallowe'en at Elm Farm.

On the evening of Oct. 31st a large number of ladies of the Alden club started for Elm farm in high expectation of a good time. As we entered the hall it presented a very weird appearance, lights only from Jack o'lanterns, while Hallowe'en spooks were gliding about everywhere. We were warmly but silently greeted by the spook, enchanting music seemed to pervade the whole place and we felt that the Hallowe'en fairies and elves must be all about us. Every once in a while there were evidences of witches, which heightened the spirit of the occasion.

After the club was called to order by Mrs. Margaret Rey, the president and hostess of the evening, the lights were turned on and revealed the beauty of our surroundings—Jack o'lanterns all about the room, vegetables, fruit and bunches of corn in profusion, Chinese lanterns and the national colors added color and beauty. The platform was very prettily decorated with vegetables and bunches of corn, as well as Jack o'lanterns. The background, however, was the chief attraction. It was beautifully decorated with a screen of unbleached cotton cloth, upon which large and beautiful sunflowers were painted. It was a real work of art and wes painted and designed by Mrs. Addison Thayer.

On either side of the room were tables tastefully arranged and decorated, loaded with refreshments suitable for the occasion. On one of these tables was a Cuban knife such as they use in their battles, also a candelabra, which Mrs. Ray assured us was brought over in the Mayflower.

After the reading and approving of the records and a report by Miss Minnie Bowers of the federation held in Amherst, Mrs. I. W. Sneath read a paper giving the origin of Hallowe'en, tracing it back as far as the third century. One of the spooks sang a solo, after which the lights disappeared and the witches came from glen and dale and all the surrounding woods of Franklin, and as they stirred their cauldron with their magic wands, they brought greetings and good fortune to the Alden club, its Mothers' section, the secretary, treasurer, and an especially bright and good message for the president. These witches were real good looking in their black robes and tall, pointed red hats. After several Hallowe'en games were indulged in and refreshments enjoyed, we returned to our homes, having spent an evening long to be remembered, thanks to our hostess, the spooks and the witches. Dean Celebrates the Festal Night.

A most enjoyable Hallowe'en party was held at Dean academy on Wednesday evening, all of the students participating in the general jollity of the occasion. The festivities were held in the dining room, which was appropriately trimmed with corn and pumpkins, the students also attiring themselves in costumes befitting the occasion. One of the features was a cake walk, the couples being Messrs Baker and Currie, Mr. Echols and Miss Barron, Misses Burr and Schmidt, Mr. Kennedy and Miss Andrews, the judges deciding in favor of the latter. Among the games were finding the thimble, button, a potato race, a shoe race, fortune telling, doughnut eating and, dancing. The refreshments consisted of popcorn and fudge. Altogether the evening was a red letter one in school life.

Republicans.

In voting for representatives, remember the Republican candidates are George W. Bullard of Medway and Albion F. Bemis of Foxboro. Unusual caution should be used in regard to the latter, as the Democrats have nominated Charles A. Bemis of Medway, and some confusion may result. Be sure end merk for Albion F. Bemis of Foxboro.

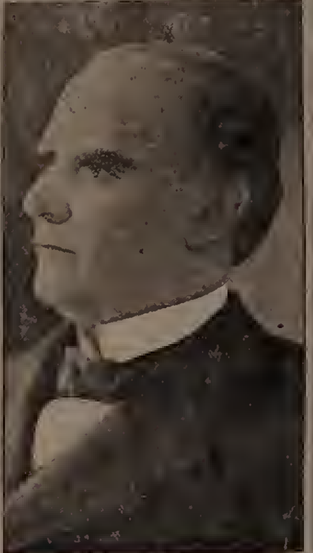
Republican Rally.

The first Republican rally of the campaign is to be held here Monday evening, when Hon. Samuel L. Powers, candidate for congress in this district, and ex-Senator A. L. Harwood, of Newton, will address the voters. Both gentlemen have been about the state and have been enthusiastically received, especially Mr. Powers, who has commended himself to the voters as an able and eloquent speaker. That he will be elected and that he will honor the district no one doubts. The Republican party is united in his support, while the Democrats are divided between candidates Baker and Storey. While no attempt at decorations will be made, yet it would be a gracious act if some of the business places would show by a little decorative effort that they realize the "campaign is on."

HON. SAMUEL L. POWERS.

The Franklin band will be in attendance at the Opera house and the gallery will be reserved for ladies. Turn out and give the gentlemen a hearty welcome.



HONEST and intelligent men believe that President McKinley has tried to do what was best for the American people and what they wanted done. That is why he will be given a second term.

ABOVE all things in Massachusetts vote for Republican congressmen. Every Republican nominee for Congress is worthy of every Republican vote. See that they are given

STUDY the character of the support of McKinley and Bryan and "Vote as you pray." If you want the rule of Croker and Tammany Hall and the Tammany "tiger" vote for Bryan. If you want the rule of a man who is the type of those opposed to "Tammanyism" and all that it implies, vote for McKinley

LEST we forget the miseries of the last Democratic administration, we can easily remember the souphouses that had to be opened in our large cities because there was no work for those willing to work. We can easily remember by what a tremendous vote the people said in 1896 that they had had enough of free soup. Those same men are not going to vote again for more soup.

ONLY a few days remain to complete the work of the campaign. Make the canvass of the voters so complete that all who can will be got to the polls. Once in four years you can well afford to give a day to help secure good government for yourself and your neighbors for the four years to come. You will get the best government possible by voting for the Republican candidates.

A LARGE employer of labor in Chicago tells briefly why he would vote the Republican ticket if he were a wage earner: because under Republican rule prosperity, happiness and contentment abound, where under Democratic rule, smokeless factory chimneys, silent mill wheels, idle men, flourishing soup houses, misery, discontent, disorder, lawlessness, cheap money, cheap men, no work, no money, starvation—are our every day companions.

ARE you a savings bank depositor? You cannot afford to vote for Bryan. Are you dependent on your daily labor? You cannot afford to vote for Bryan. Are you a manufacturer? You cannot afford to vote for Bryan. Are you a capitalist with your money invested on guaranteed securities? You may afford to vote for Bryan, for your income will remain the same while the cost of living will go down. No other living man can afford to exchange from certainty of reasonable prosperity under McKinley to certain disaster under Bryan.

MAKE up your mind between McKinley and Bryan, deliberately, carefully, conscientiously. You know perfectly well what the former has given you for four years. You know what a Democratic administration under a "sound money" Democrat gave you. Add to that all the evils you would suffer from a Bryanized Democratic Crokerized Democratic administration, and then decide. Face the fact as if your vote was to determine the administration for the next four years, and then vote your honest conviction. You will not vote for Bryan.

THE men behind the guns. In every battle they are the ones that bring victory or defeat. "The men behind the guns" of the Republican party in this campaign, and no one can successfully deny it, are the business men of the country, the professional men, the men of the college, the school, the church and the home. Every man of intelligence knows perfectly well that the majority of these divisions of our voters will vote the Republican ticket. They are pretty safe guides to follow. Where they lead there is no danger of "imperialism," "16 to 1," or any other of the fallacies known as "Bryanism."

WHY "hard times" if Bryan is elected? Because he proposes, by free silver, to halve the purchasing powers of every dollar. Prices of all commodities would fall, perforce. Sellers would appear on all sides, but no buyers. The mills and factories would close and labor would be walking the streets. All the terrible scenes of distress seen during the worst periods of depression would appear—just as we saw them in 1893 and again in 1896. It would come as surely as water runs down hill to find its own level, and by the time "bottom prices were reached," there would be the worst panic the country has ever seen.

BRYAN insults the intelligence and manhood of the American workingmen when he tells them they have to ask the financial magnates to "Give us this day our daily bread." The workman does not expect bread without working for it. But when he considers how much more and how much better "bread" he gets for his work than does his fellow workman anywhere else on earth he is satisfied to continue in power the very men whose administration gives him his fortune, even though it was not all he could desire. He knows the difference between the "full dinner pail" he has actually had under Republican administration and the soup house whose charity he had to crave under Democratic administration. He knows it is better to order the Republicans to "give us our daily bread" than to beg the Democrats to dole out a little soup. He has tried both kinds. He will continue his "bread" rather than than beg for "soup."

Vote for Powers for Congressman.

We would especially urge upon every Republican voter to see to it that he does not fail to vote upon the congressional question. When it is remembered that a few votes may turn the scale in some districts, the importance of voting will be understood. The small majority in congress which the Republicans now hold should not be imperiled. As the house now stands a change of four congressmen from Republican to Democrat would place the house in the hands of the Democrats, give them the speaker, the appointing of all the committees, and absolutely tie the hands of the president so far as carrying out his plans are concerned. Mr. Powers' record is clear; no one need fear giving him a vote, and he should have the vote of every loyal Republican in his district, and as many Democrats as can consistently support him.

The Grist Mill.

The case of Charles Cooley, charged with adultery, was continued to Nov. 8, in the district court. His Honor, Judge Doe, also adjudicated upon a dispute between the proprietor of the cobbling shop on Central street and a man who had some repairs made upon his shoes. He claimed to have tendered a $5 bill, while the cobbler insisted it was a $1, giving him the change therefor. The judge decided the cobbler was in the wrong, imposing a fine of $10. He also rendered a decision in the case of McGtunis & Wharle of Medway, who were tried a few weeks ago for maintaining a liquor nuisance at Medway. They were adjudged guilty and fined $50 each. The defendants served notice of appeal and gave bonds for their appearance et Dedham at the December term.

Using Up the Horses.

The South African war has again given the horse a dignified place among the world's things of value, but it is doubtful whether he is to be congratulated upon his rehabilitation. Though he is no longer a drug on the market, says the Chicago Tribune, he has no brighter future before him than at any other time since the trolley car and the automobile began to crowd him off the earth. For the crowding-off process continues at a rate that might well alarm the whole equine race. Competent authorities estimate that the Boer war is killing at least 5,000 horses per month, which will account for 35,000 or 40,000 animals since the beginning of the war, not counting those used for table purposes in Ladysmith, Kimberley and Mafeking. There is every probability that the wastage of horses will be still greater when the British penetrate farther into the Boer country. The Boers take special pains to kill the enemy's horses, because the death of a horse is almost as great a military loss as the death of a man. The climate also causes the wholesale sickness and death of the unacclimated animals. To supply this enormous wastage the British are scouring the horse markets of the world. The war office is said to have arranged to convey 2[illegible] horses in 23 vessels from New Orleans, Buenos Ayres and Australian ports, while at the same time a New York dispatch states that a contract has been nearly completed in that city for 30,000 more. If the war continues long enough at this rate the American horse breeders will be in clover.

Disaster Sure to Follow.

Here is the latest story, according to the Kansas City Journal, on the man who is too stingy to take his home paper: "A man who was too economical to take this paper sent his little boy to borrow the copy taken by his neighbor. In his haste the boy ran over a four-dollar stand of bees, and in ten minutes looked like a warty summer squash. His cries reached his father, who ran to his assistance, and failing to notice a barbed-wire fence ran into that, breaking it down, cutting a handful of flesh from his anatomy and ruining a four-dollar pair of pants. The old cow took advantage of the gap in the fence and got into the cornfield, and killed herself eating green corn. Hearing the racket, the wife ran, upset a four-gallon churn full of rich cream into a basket of chickens, drowning the whole flock. In the hurry she dropped a seven-dollar set of false teeth. The baby, left alone, crawled through the spilled milk and into the parlor, ruining a brand new $20 carpet. During the excitement the oldest daughter ran away with the hired man, the dog broke up 11 setting hens, and the calves got out and chewed the tails off four fine shirts."

An odd method of pulling a tooth was tried a few days ago by a Bloomville (N. Y.) young man who had been suffering with toothache. In vain he tried to extract the molar with a pincers and string. Then his anger rose, and when his wife taunted him with not having a particle of sand he resolved upon desperate measures. Procuring a yard of stove pipe wire, he fastened one end of it firmly around the deeply rooted tooth in such a manner that it could not pull loose, and the other end he wound around a ramrod. Taking down his shotgun, he placed an extra charge of powder in the barrel, rammed the rod home, and, stepping to the door, he cocked the gun, opened his mouth and fired skyward. There was a loud explosion and tooth and ramrod sailed away skyward. He has not since been troubled with toothache.

A church society in Brooklyn discussed at a recent meeting the question: "Which is more demoralizing, fashion or tobacco?" The old contention between man and woman

It Made Him Weary.

"Do you drink?" asked the woman at the door.

Frayed Frawley looked at her reproachfully.

"You see me, don't you?" he said.

"Yes," she replied, somewhat surprised.

"You see my patched and tattered clothes?"

"Yes."

"And my busted-out shoes and all that?"

"Yes."

"And I ain't working an automobile nor driving a fast horse, am I?"

"No."

"Don't look as if I'd saved up money and bought a summer place, do I?"

"No."

"And yet you ask me if I drink! Say! you make me weary. How much evidence do you need?"—Chicago Post.

Expenses of the Sultan.

The yearly expenses of the sultan have been estimated at no less a sum than $[illegible]0,0[illegible]0. Of this $7.5[illegible] alone is spent on the clothing of the women and $400,000 on the sultan's own wardrobe. Nearly $7,500,[illegible] is swallowed up by presents. $5,[illegible]00 goes for pocket money and still another $5,000,[illegible] for the table. It seems incredible that so much money can possibly be spent in a year by one man, but when it is remembered that some 1,500 people live within the palace walls—live luxuriously and dress expensively at the cost of the civil list—it appears a little more comprehensible.—Chicago Chronicle.

THE CHARM OF LIFE

Is Lost When the Burden is Too Heavy

Life is hardly worth the living with the never-ceasing aches and pains of a bad back. If you would remove the burden of backache, reach the cause—the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills will cure sick kidneys, and the cure is lasting. Here is proof of it.

Mr. Israel A. Morse, of 10 Tyng street, Newburyport, a member of the Board of Aldermen for two years, and Common Council for three years, says: "My experience with and opinions of Doan's Kidney Pills which I expressed through our newspapers in 1896, after taking a course of the treatment, have not altered. I value that preparation more highly today than I did when I first published my statement, and that is over three years ago. To my personal experience I can add that of many others in this city who one and all coincide with me in saying that Doan's Kidney Pills act as represented.'

SOUND MONEY DEMOCRATS

Who Believe McKinley's Election Would Continue Beneficial Conditions.

"I shall vote for McKinley this year," said H. F. Hurlburt, in reply to a question as to his preference in the presidential election. "I have always been a Democrat and I voted for Palmer and Buckner four years ago. The Democrats this year, however, have injected the anti-imperialist issue into the platform to cover up the Chicago platform of 1896, and that platform no gold Democrat could indorse. Personally, I believe, moreover, in the retention of the Philippines. The only business way out of the difficulty there is that which the administration has been compelled to pursue.

"Mr. Bryan said four years ago that if the country should adopt the gold standard, it would become bankrupt under any emergency, war, for example. He has proved a false prophet. Upon McKinley's election four years ago money which had been hoarded in fear was released and the country entered upon a season of great prosperity; and although I would by no means attribute the good times of the past few years wholly to the Republican party, I am very sure that if Mr. Bryan were elected in November a change in business conditions would ensue which would not be for the better. On the other hand, the election of McKinley would continue the beneficial conditions which developed after his election in 1896."

J. D. Crimins the well-known labor statistician of New York, says:

"To vote for Bryan is, in my judgment, to vote for populism, the destruction of the country's and the workingmen's best interests. The only alternative is to vote for McKinley and Roosevelt. There is no third ticket, no Democratic banner under which sound money Democrats may form and fight.

"Four years ago I voted for Palmer and Buckner. This year I shall cast my ballot for McKinley and Roosevelt. Such I believe to be the present duty of those Democrats who maintained party allegiance and yet supported their principles in 1896.

"A change of 20,000 votes can be made in New York city between now and Nov. 7. That change might decide which of the two great parties shall carry the state.

"The facts of the situation as they appear purely from a business point of view should be prepared concisely and set forth clearly to the workingmen. With capital employed, labor is employed. With capital assured of returns, labor is assured of wages. Mr. Bryan's adherents are not makers of employment, of wealth of prosperity, or of advancement."

Spread Like Wildfire.

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare, a leading druggist, of Belleville, O., writes: "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years. You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickly, rundown man or woman. Price 50 cents. Sold by A. C. Mason, druggist.

To the Deaf.

A rich lady, cured of her deafness in the head by Dr. Nicholson's Artificial Ear drums, gave $10,000 to his institute, so that deaf people unable to procure the ear drums may have them free. Address No. 5095C, The Nicholson Institute, 780 Eighth avenue, New York, U. S. A. jl27

Genesee Pure Food Co., Le Roy, N. Y.:

Gentlemen:—I must say in regard to GRAIN-O that there is nothing better or healthier. We have used it for years. My brother was a great coffee drinker. He was taken sick and the doctor said coffee was the cause of it and told us to use GRAIN-O. We got a package but did not like it at first, but now would not be without it. My brother has been well ever since we started to use it.

Pyny-Pectoral Relieves Right Away and makes a speedy end of coughs and colds.

Catarrh

Its cause exists in the blood, in what causes inflammation of the mucous membrane.

It is therefore impossible to cure it by local applications.

It is positively dangerous to neglect it, because it always affects the stomach and deranges the general health, and is likely to develop into consumption.

It is radically and permanently cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla which removes the cause, cleanses the blood of scrofulous and all other impurities and gives vigor and tone to the whole system.

The voluntary testimonial of R. Long, California Junction, Iowa, is one of thousands equally good. It reads: "I had catarrh in the head three years, lost my appetite and could not sleep. My head pained me and I felt bad all over. I was discouraged. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and now have a good appetite, sleep well, and have no symptoms of catarrh."

Hood's Sarsaparilla

promises to cure and keeps the promise. Accept no substitute.

A Masterpiece.

"Confidentially," said the statesman, "I wrote that plank in the platform."

"I congratulate you," said his friend, heartily. "I read it over three times, and I'm blest if it commits the party to anything!"—Puck.

Great Luck of an Editor.

"For two years all efforts to cure eczema in the palms of my hands failed," writes Editor H. N. Lester of Syracuse, Kan., "then I was wholly cured by Bucklen's Arnica Salve." It's the world's best for eruptions, sores and all skin diseases. Only 25c at A. C. Mason's drug store.

Under Compulsion.

Keep Yourself Strong

And you will ward off colds, pneumonia, fevers and other diseases. You need to have pure, rich blood and good digestion. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the blood rich and pure as no other medicine can do. It tones the stomach, creates an appetite and invigorates the whole system. You will be wise to begin taking it now, for it will keep you strong and well.

Hood's Pills are non irritating. Price 25 cents.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

A single leaf of the orange tree, carefully planted, will often take root and grow.

It has been observed that artesian wells have a daily period of ebb and flow, as well as the ocean tides, only the process is reversed. The time of greatest flow of an artesian well is the period of low tide in the ocean.

There are 400 miles of icebergs, floating ice, plains of ice and all other sorts of Arctic obstructions to traverse between the nearest discovery to the pole and the pole itself. Perhaps some means of overcoming these difficulties may present themselves within the next century as science goes on in its progressive way.

The eruption in 1883 of Krakatua, a volcano on the island of that name in the Strait of Sunda, which connects the Java sea with the Indian ocean between Java and Sumatra, East Indies, was the worst and most destructive eruption ever known, including that of Vesuvius in 79, A. D.

The earth has a shadow, but few ever see it, except in eclipses of the moon. Nevertheless many of us have noticed on fine, cloudless evenings in summer, shortly before sunset, a rosy or pink arc on the horizon opposite the sun, with a bluish-gray segment under it. As the sun sinks the arc rises until it attains the zenith, and even passes it. This is the shadow of the earth.

SAYINGS OF THE SAGE.

A woman can afford to forgive her husband for everything except marrying her.

A woman never forgives a man for his kindness in bringing her husband home drunk.

A baby's smile is the sweetest thing in the world; it is a combination of contentment, idiocy and gums.

A man can't please all women part of the time or one woman all of the time, but he can always smile at all of their babies.

A PURPLE GRACKLE.

BY MAURICE THOMPSON.

THIS summer I have been studying the purple grackle under very favorable circumstances, and (contradictory as it may seem) these same circumstances have been extremely annoying. The trees amid which our summer home is set became the chosen nesting place of 30 grackles, 15 pairs; they were early comers, too, and so got ahead of all the other birds, even the robins.

You may be sure it takes an early bird to beat the robins, who, as a rule, have the choice of nesting places because they are first on the scene. And who does not love a robin sufficiently well to wish them the good fortune to secure their choice of nesting places? As for myself, I would willingly see them ahead of the grackles, and it would please me well if they could replace the grackles entirely, as you will know before you have finished this chronicle of their doings around our summer home.

The first known about their nesting was a morning concert in April. They awoke me at break of day with a sudden swish of wings, like an erratic breeze-gust, followed by short, twanging cries scarcely musical, yet touched with a promise of spring-time freshness. A silent few had been seen coming and going in the pines for a fortnight; but this was the first outright assumption of proprietorship over my premises.

At first I was bellicose, and I began to investigate the propriety of slaughter. These birds are of filthy habits—not to a greater extent than most other large species, perhaps—and they like making a great racket. They scatter egg shells and unhatchable eggs on your lawn; moreover, they attack your small fruit and garden dainties in the bud, as it were. Thirty of them make quite a little army; 30 voices sound like a legion; 15 nests of the ordinary grackle architecture are not ornamental up in your tree-tops. And when comes a heavy rain with wind, these same bulky nests are shaken down on the grass, hideous disfigurements, to be removed at no little trouble.

I knew all this and more: I weighed it against the claim of the grackles and decided to shoot the whole rookery of them. But for some inscrutable reason a dilatory mood delayed the beginning of slaughter and I became interested in the nesting details which were frankly offered to my observation. Two and two, a sheeny male and a dusky female, the whole flock strutted here and yonder in the grounds industriously looking for building materials. From my desk, drawn close to a window, a glance was sufficient to take in the movements of one or two pairs at almost any moment, especially during the early morning hours. They are good workers, male and female sharing the burdens; but the male loses considerable time in going through certain grotesquely common antics for the purpose of displaying his beauty to his wife. He lifts the gay, copper-dashed feathers of his neck and shoulders, slightly spreads his iridescent wings and struts in a close circle around the object of his adoration. She pays him scant attention; but demurely keeps up the search for sticks, stringy grass-roots, leaves and pine-needles for the making of her house.

It is a great rest for the desk-weary eyes of a plodding penman to look out upon a soft green sward dappled with shade and sunshine, where the grackles, robins, doves and golden winged flickers take turns at their restless activities. My working window gives upon a fair garden of native trees with some alien pines 40 years old set here and there. In spring the grass is flecked with violets, claytonias, wake-robins and wild wind-flowers, among which the grackles strut high-headed with a peculiar wagging motion. Their eyes—pale straw color—look glassy white and seem to stare in a spirit of cold atrocity at nothing in particular. They and the robins fight, victory alternating evenly, and at last they agree to share my trees and other out-door belongings. But the grackles prove treacherous, occasionally tearing eggs or young from the sweet singers' nests and even scattering the nests themselves in fragments all about. While this does not happen frequently, it exasperates me on principle. A broken compact under circumstances of such unlimited villainy seems to call for capital punishment.

Still I withhold the stroke. I know it is due; that by all the laws of men these villains should be punished with death and destruction, but for same reason they have interested me; their very villaionousness has staid my hand in the work that it should do.

Early in May a pair of doves built a rickety, uncertain sketch of a nest on a level bough not 25 feet from my window. Two eggs were laid in it. The doves were happy and on the point of beginning incubation, when early one morning along the limb sidewise crept a male grackle. I saw him just before he reached the nest; but by the time I had rushed out to drive him away both eggs were smashed and the flimsy, scaffold-like nest was a little puff of scattered sticks agitating the circumambient foliage. "Chack! Chack!" snapped the grackle, contemptuously, and then he flew away. It was a deed worthy of a jay. I had not expected it of a grackle.

I have not convicted the grackle of stealing fruit. He may taste a berry or a grape. But he has a nasty habit of snipping off flower-buds. I watched three or four in a cherry tree deftly cutting away with their keen mandibles the fruit blossoms that were nearly ready to open. They did not eat them; but I observed that they took them into their mouths, nibbled them and seemed to get from them something that they liked. In the vegetable garden they pluck the lobes of bean and pea as soon as they appear above ground. Many of these they had scattered between the rows, and I do not know that they eat any of them.

It is difficult to understand why a bird so trim, neat and beautiful as the grackle uses mud in the making of its nest. Presumably the object would be to fasten the cup in place, but every displaced nest that I have examined seemed to have fallen wholly on account of the great weight of the mortar when saturated with rain.

The grackles, on the whole, have not permanently won their way with me; the trouble they have given outweighs their beauty, their cheerfulness and their interesting characteristics. Next year they must go elsewhere or be shot. Probably more robins than grackles nested in our trees, and quite as many doves; but it was to the grackles that we had to charge nearly all the filth and litter. We shall welcome dove, robin, catbird, cardinal grosbeak, flicker and brown thrush next spring. The grackles are forewarned. They must not lead their "clanging rookery home," expecting a pleasant greeting from us. Fifteen huge, filthy, mud-daubed nests, cherry trees clipped off their bloom buds, the nests of singing birds destroyed, a vegetable garden maliciously raided time and again, a fair lawn splashed with offensive droppings and such a din every morning at daybreak as only grackles can make amount to a sum of objections quite prohibitory of amicable arrangements. Come all the other birds; but let the grackles beware!—N. Y. Independent.

IF BRYAN IS ELECTED

We Shall Lose Respect For Our Sagacity, Sincerity and Integrity.

By Harry Wallerstein.

"If there is any one," said Bryan in 1896, "who believes that the gold standard is a good thing, I warn him not to vote for me, because I promise him that it will not be maintained in this country longer than I am able to get rid of it."

Bryan's purpose is unchanged. In a recent speech at Topeka, Kas., he said:

"Since the farmer and workman produce merchandise and not money they do not profit by the appreciation of the dollar."

Ask the people who live in Mexico whether they prefer to be paid in their dollar, which intrinsically contains more silver than ours, or in our dollar.

They will tell you that they prefer our dollar.

The Mexican dollar is worth only 50 cents, and that is what our dollar will be worth if Bryan is elected. He will order all payments to be made in silver, the country will be flooded with a depreciated coin; gold will be withdrawn from circulation, wages will remain stationary, while living expenses will be materially higher.

The workman will have less demand for his labor, and will be paid in a dollar whose purchasing power will be cut in half.

Four years ago thousands of workingmen were idle; agriculture and nearly every other line of industry had entered upon a long period of paralysis, bankruptcy and despair. The country was then suffering from the greatest industrial depression it had ever experienced, and the period from 1893 to 1897 was one of "hunger, horror and misery." That terrible time ended with the dawn of the year 1897. Bryanism had been defeated. The silver conspiracy had been thwarted. McKinley had solemnly pledged himself to safeguard the gold standard, and as a result industry revived, confidence was restored, factories were reopened, wages were advanced, and the entire country entered upon a golden era of American enterprise.

Today we see all employed at remunerative wages, the country prosperous, the people contented and happy and our flag respected and honored all over the world. Shall this be changed? Shall we return to the misery of four years ago, and to the industrial depression and low wages prevailing then? It was at that time that Bryan warned the farmers and workingmen that, if silver declined, the products of their labor would likewise decline, and prophesied universal ruin and destruction, if the gold standard would be maintained.

Since then, all products of agriculture and of manufacture have materially advanced, wages have been largely increased, and prosperity has reigned throughout the land.

Our country enjoys today a higher degree of influence and consideration all over the world than it has ever before attained. It means a large and increasing export trade. It means a growing market for the product of our farms and factories. The moment we take the backward step to declare for free silver, we lose the confidence of the rest of the civilized world, and this would be followed by serious loss of commerce and export trade. The South American republics are earnestly striving to get away from their depreciated currency, and to rise to the gold standard. They know by long and bitter experience the curse of the silver dollar. They have looked upon us as the possessors of an ideal government. They have confidence in the wisdom and ability of our people.

Shall we follow the lead of Bryan, declare in favor of the silver standard, and thereby lose the respect for our sagacity, sincerity and integrity?

Bryan's election would bring confusion and distress upon the business interests of the country, especially including the interests of labor.

In the contest for a sound and honest currency, the straightforward common sense and patriotism of the people came out nobly four years ago for the rescue of the country. In the course of a speech at that time Bryan made the dismal prediction: "The gold standard means half time in the factories and it means double time on the farms." How far has this gloomy prophesy been fulfilled? There was then not even half time in the factories. Many wage-earners were idle, their families were hungry.

Today under the gold standard those mills and factories are all in operation on full time, and those wage-earners are all at work at the highest wages they ever received. The gold standard does mean double time for the farmer. The people want more of his grain, his live stock, his wool, and his other products.

The agriculturalist has fewer mortgages on his land, larger herds of cattle, greater crops and prices of his staples are higher.

Was Bryan, is he, a student of financial and industrial conditions and laws? Was he, is he, only guessing? We want not this prophet of ruin and calamity, whose judgment has been so frequently at fault, and is at fault now. We want happiness, not misery. We want full purchasing power for our dollar. We want good wages and constant employment for all. We want an honest dollar and an honest government. We want not the owners of silver mines to become rich, while impoverishing the entire community, and destroying the credit of the nation.

Bryan's policy is "destruction, calamity and repudiation."

McKinley says today: "The nation faces the new century gratefully and hopefully, with increasing love of country, with firm faith in its fine institutions and with high resolve that they shall not perish from the earth." His paramount issue is "The happiness of our homes, the prosperity of our people."

New York, October, 1900.

Bryan Angers Honest Democrats.

The Democratic Honest Money League of America, at a special meeting, heard a number of reports received from throughout the country. All of these were encouraging. Major John Byrne, president of the league, in discussing them, said:

"The honest Democrats all over the country are incensed at Mr. Bryan's latest utterances. He is dragging the great position of the candidacy for the presidency to the lowest level it has ever been brought in this country.

"The man is desperate. His friends claim that he is honest, at least, but this is not honesty."

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern which is not afraid to be generous. The proprietors of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles, and have the satisfaction of knowing it has cured thousands of hopeless cases Asthma, bronchitis, la grippe and all throat, chest and lung diseases are surely cured by it. Call on A. C. Mason, druggist, and get a free trial bottle. Regular size 50c and $1 00. Every bottle guaranteed.

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2.65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, disolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and uselesa materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit. The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save If your druggist can't supply you, it will be fowarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

Mortgagee's Sale.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Daniel Kempton to the Milford Savings Bank, dated October 17, 1877, and recorded with Norfolk deeds, book 494, page 73, and for a breach of the condition thereof, will be sold at public auction upon the premises, on at three o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely: "A certain tract or parcel of land situated in Bellingham in our county of Norfolk, containing about fifty acres of land bounded and described as follows, viz: Beginning at the southeast corner of the premises on the Scott hill road leading from said Bellingham to Woonsocket, at corner of land of Israel B. Salisbury; thence running westerly by land of the heirs of Lebbeus Gaskill and Nahum Cook to land conveyed by the grantor to Otis D. and Warren J. Ballou; thence northerly by said last-named land to land of Nahum Cook; thence easterly by land of Nahum Cook and Mrs. Anson Salisbury to the said road, thence southerly by and with said road to the point of departure; being all the land described in a deed from Elias Kempton and others, dated May 22, 1872, recorded in said registry, book 440, page 119, except one tract sold to Otis D. and Warren J. Ballou."

SATURDAY, THE SEVENTEENTH DAY OF NOVEMBER, 1900,

Terms made known at time of sale or upon application to Jesse A. Taft, Counsellor at Law, Milford, Mass.

PROBATE COURT.

To the heirs-at-law, next-of-kin and all other persons interested in the estate of Hubbard M. Bullock, late of Franklin, in said county, deceased:

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said court for probate by Mira S. Bullock of Franklin, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to her, the executrix therein named, without giving a surety on her official bond.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court, to be held at Dedham, in said county of Norfolk, on the seventh day of November, A. D. 1900, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper published in Franklin, the last publication to be one day at least before said court, and by mailing, postpaid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate seven days at least before said court.

Witness, James H. Flint, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this seventeenth day of October, in the year one thousand nine hundred.

SUPERIOR COURT.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court, next to be holden at Dedham within and for the County of Norfolk on the first Monday of December next.

Respectfully libels and represents Achsah Camp of Bellingham, in said county, that she was lawfully married to Fred Camp, now of parts unknown, at Medway on the twelfth day of December, A. D. 1879, and thereafterwards your libellant and the said Fred Camp lived together as husband and wife in this Commonwealth, to wit., at Medway in said county; that your libellant has always been faithful to her marriage vows and obligations, but the said Fred Camp being wholly regardless of the same at Medway aforesaid on or about the first day of August, 1889, utterly deserted your libellant and has continued such desertion to the date of this libel.

Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Fred Camp.

Dated the sixteenth day of October, A. D. 1900.

ACHSAH CAMP.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
NORFOLK, ss.

SUPERIOR COURT.

On the foregoing libel it is ordered that the libellant give notice to the said Fred Camp, the libellee, to appear before the Justices of this Court, to be holden at Dedham within and for said county, on the first Monday of December next, by causing an attested copy of said libel, and of this order thereon, to be published once in a week for three successive weeks in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper printed at Franklin, in the county of Norfolk, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before the said first Monday of December next, and further, by sending through the mail, as soon as may be, by a registered letter addressed to the last known residence of the said Fred Camp an attested copy of said libel and of this order thereon, that the said Fred Camp may then and there show cause why the prayer of said libel should not be granted.

By the Court,

LOUIS A. COOK, Clerk.

October 22, A. D. 1900.

A true copy of said libel and the order thereon.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

NORFOLK, ss.

To the Honorable the Board of County Commissioners of the County of Norfolk.

Respectfully represent your petitioners being five and more inhabitants of the town of Wrentham, in said county of Norfolk, that common convenience and necessity require that that part of East street, in said Wrentham, which begins at the line separating the towns of Wrentham and Foxborough and runs westerly to a point near the almshouse in said Wrentham, which point is the terminus of the former relocation of the westerly part of said East street as made by the county commissioners of said county of Norfolk, be located anew, the boundary lines thereof established and alterations made in its course and width.

Wherefore your petitioners pray that you will, after giving notice and proceeding in the manner prescribed in laying out highways, order and decree that that part of East street above described be located anew, the boundary thereof be established, that such alterations in its course and width as your Board deems proper be made, and that such further proceedings may be had as the premises as the statute requires.

Dated this eighteenth day of September, A. D. 1900.

Mrs. A. J. Butler of Canton gave a very fine address Sunday evening at the Baptist church on "The Missionary Outlook." Her description of the different mission fields, illustrated by the map, was exceedingly interesting and graphic. The audience gave the closest attention to her impartant discourse.

Franklin workmen are frescoing the Congregationalist church at Wrentham Centre, and the interior, when finished, will present a pleasant and artistic appearance. Some effort has been made to have the clock face gilded if the public in the vicinity feels interest enough to contribute the cash for the outlay.

A number from here are planning to attend the grand operatic entertainment at Woonsocket on Thursday evening, when "Martha" and "Cavalleria Rusticana" will be sung. This is an especially fine opportunity to hear grand opera, and Manager Ogden has arranged a special car after the concert to bring to Franklin all who take in the affair.

There was a decidedly interested audience at the High school on Friday evening to listen to Charles Williams' rendering of many of the strong points of the popular book, "To Have and to Hold." Mr. Williams had his book thoroughly committed, and gave a forceful and intelligent rendition. In many of the scenes he was fully up to the standard of dramatic action.

Publicity is what every business man of experience considers necessary to success. It is the aim of every enterprising merchant, manufacturer, agent or professional man to be so well known that his name will occur to people when they contemplate the purchase of anything in his line. It has been proved again and again that newspaper advertising is the most effective means of achieving publicity. Try the SENTINEL

A number from here are planning to enjoy the grand annual exhibition of chrysanthemums by the Mass. Horticultural society held at Horticultural hall 101 Tremont street, Boston, Nov. 6, 7, 8 and 9, from 2 o'clock Tuesday, the 6th, to 10 p. m. Friday, the 9th, inclusive. Appearances indicate that this show will be of unusual importance and well worthy of the attendance of all persons interested in this magnificent flower, "the golden queen of autumn."

Blanche LeClair, aged 9 years, died at the home of her mother on North Park street Friday evening of rheumatism of the heart. Cyril LeClair, the father of the deceased, died two weeks ago from an attack of typhoid and at present the oldest son is critically ill with the fever in a Boston hospital, while the youngest son is seriously ill with the same disease at home. The funeral of the little girl was held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from St Mary's chapel, where the service for the dead was performed by Rev. Father Lee. The children's sodality attended and the casket was covered with beautiful floral offerings.

Frank Shiner, who has an enviable record as a successful hunter, does not coincide with the views of some men who lately perambulated the woods hereabouts in quest of game, came home tired and empty-handed and then intimated that the woods in this section was a poor place for sportsmen. His dissent from these views of the "other fellows" would appear to have good ground from the fact that he, with dog and gun, took a stroll in the woods in this vicinity last Friday afternoon and a few hours thereafter came back with fifteen as fine-looking partridges as a huntsman ever laid eyes on. And Mr. Shiner insists that the woods are full of 'em.

The rummage sale of St John's guild at the Opera house block, last Saturday afternoon and evening, was a great success The counters were laden with goods of all manner of value, which were offered at merely nominal prices. Large numbers of people filled the store to its utmost capacity and sales were very brisk. A generous sum was added to the funds of the guild. It has been decided to continue the sale on Saturday, Nov. 10, afternoon and evening, when goods will be offered at prices lower than last week. Anyone who may desire to donate goods of any kind for the sale is asked to send them to St. John's rectory during the week, or to the store Saturday forenoon.

We have been having some glorious October weather. All nature has been cleanly washed and the fall colorings in foliage are thus made more attractive and beautiful. At mid day the heat of the sun recalls summer days that are gone and suggest Indian summer. Heavy autumn frosts will soon be here, already the chestnut burrs are wide open and the maple leaf has a more sombre shade. Days and nights are bracing and health-giving; keep out in them; you will be greatly benefited. Enjoy them while they last; it will make the long, dreary winter seem all the shorter. This is just the season of the year to enjoy walking, hiking and driving. If one seeks the open fields at this turn of the season he will find rich reward.

A Perfect Election Day.

The weather clerk prophesied clear weather for today, and for once he was not mistaken, as it proved to be a beautiful fall day. At this both Republicans and Democrats took heart, as it meant a full vote on both sides.

The polls opened at 7 o'clock, Chairman Gallison and Clerk Doe at the ballot box, C.F.Nye and M. J.Costello as checkers, and A. H. Martin, N.C.Nye and John A. O'Sullivan as ballot clerks. Officer Fitzpatrick was present in his official capacity. The balloting continued till about 9 o'clock, when the counters began their work, B. M. Rookwood, J. E. Barber, John Costello and M. F. Conroy. As the polls are to close at 5 o'clock it was expected that the work of counting would be completed about two hours later.

At 10.30 there had been 440 votes cast, which was nearly half of the entire list, and it was expected that about 90 per cent. of the vote, 910, would be polled. It was evident that most of the voters were throwing a straight ballot, with very little "knifing" or altering the tickets. The ballot this year is necessarily a big one, though the voter had an opportunity of voting for the electors as a body or singly.

Very little could be gathered as to the complexion of the voters, and it was evident that the party lines were pretty closely adhered to.

A Trip Abroad,

The Mothers' section of the Alden club met Friday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. E. Waite and listened to an interesting paper by Mrs Rebecca Farnum on her European trip. She entertained those present with an interesting picture talk, describing with much interest and enthusiasm her journey in a "diligence" over the Alps by the Simplon Pass. The time consumed was nine and one half hours. Now a tunnel is being constructed and one can go through the mountains in two hours. Time will be saved, but the beauty and grandeur of the scenery will be lost. On this pass there are nine refuges where travelers can be cared for if overtaken by storm. Pictures of sections of this road, which it took Napoleon six years to build, were shown.

Pictures, with vivid descriptions of Isola Bella and Isola Madra, made the listeners feel as if they themselves were in Lake Maggiore enjoying the beauties of the lakes and the islands. Photograph and word pictures of Milan, with its cathedral, the celebrated "Last Supper" and the "Arch of Peace," besides many of other points of interest, made the afternoon one of pleasure and profit. Mrs. Farnum was the recipient of a hearty vote of thanks at the close of the meeting.

CALDIN'S STUDIO, Depot street.

An Effective Meeting.

The Opera house was completely filled last evening by Republicans and others to listen to the first campaign speech upon the Republican side, arranged by the Republican town committee, most of whom sat upon the stage The Franklin band discoursed army airs previous to the speechmaking and between the addresses and played well. The speakers were appropriately introduced by the chairman of the town committee, F. P Chapman.

The first speaker was E. Otis Thayer of Boston. He commenced by saying he did not consider that votes were made or changed to any extent by rallies, still they were necessities in order to keep the voter up to his duty. He considered this an important crisis in relation to the future of this country. The Democratic party was one of broken promises. The Republicans rejoiced in being the party of expansion, as it indicated progressiveness He closed with a glowing tribute to McKinley, which awakened applause.

He was followed by ex Senator A. L. Harwood of Newton, who covered a good deal of ground and was thoroughly at home in campaigning. He said that election days were important both to the individual and to the nation, and few realized what it had cost to give every man a right to vote It had been a conflict from the days of the Magna Charta to the present time. He did not think that party loyalty was to govern the voting in this election. Three things the voter should keep in mind—the personality of the candidates, the good judgment of the voter and the class of men each candidate would bring about him as counsellors and officeholders.

He referred to McKinley's education, his clear judgment and right acting, his military career, his performance of duty as governor of Ohio, and his service since he became president. Senator Hoar, who disagrees with him on the Philippine question, said he was thoroughly conscientious and lovable. He referred to Bryan's evident lack of fitness for the high office, and scathingly alluded to Croker, Altgeld and others. The Democrats are anti-everything. In regard to the trusts Massachusetts had done more than any Democratic state had ever done in passing the anti-stock-watering bill. It was nonsense to think that the Republican party desired to enslave anybody. That was not their record. During his excoriation of Croker he said, "Do we want such a man as Croker at the head of this nation?" A voice from the audience, full of enthusiasm, shouted back emphatically, "No."

During Mr. Harwood's speech Hon Samuel L. Powers, the candidate for congress, entered upon the stage, and the audience, recognizing him, broke out into applause. This was a graceful tribute to his personality. In speaking he said that this was his third rally that evening, and each one surpassed its predecessor in numbers and enthusiasm. He said the time for talking had passed away; now was the time for action. No people are better fed, clothed or housed than ours. The nation is going forward on correct lines of permanent progress. Protection, one of the issues, had made the country great and would make it greater. An honest currency places us on a par with any nation on the globe. The success of the republic should be above party success. He gave in detail the origin of the Spanish war, of the acquirement of the Philippines by the Paris treaty and of Mr. Bryan's indorsement thereof. He argued that the Democratic assertions of imperialism were unfounded. We must remember the charges come from people who said the freeing of the slaves by Lincoln was unconstitutional and the Florida and Louisiana purchases were unconstitutional

He said he was in favor of granting to them the largest measure of self government of which they were capable. He told of the expansions under Democratic administrations from Jefferson down and scored Aguinaldo as a blackmailer of Spain, but said he could not blackmail the United States. He praised the administration for its admirable success under more arduous difficulties than any administration had to encounter since Lincoln.

He then brilliantly pictured the national mission in civilizing the shores and islands of the Pacific, having civilized the vales and hills and coasts of the Atlantic under the inspiration and guidance of the Republican party, protecting all in their lives, property, religions and happiness, implanting the free school, the American flag and the institutions of the republic.

In closing he made a brilliant defence of the Republican party and of the McKinley administration, eulogizing its success under exceptional difficulties, giving to every citizen these free institutions and making this country one of the grandest in the world. He was liberally applauded and won the hearts of hundreds of constituents.

Gracious! Don't you know?
Why, you must be slow.
Don't you know the reason?
Gee! It's football season!

Death of Mrs. Woolford.

Mrs. Agnes Patrick Woolford, wife of Frank Woolford, died at her home on Main street on Sunday afternoon, at 5 20, after a critical illness of only three days. She has been in a measure an invalid for about twenty years and has suffered a great deal. The immediate cause of death was blood poisoning of the brain. Mrs. Woolford was born in Glasgow, Scotland, and her age was 39 years, 6 months and 7 days. She was married to Mr. Woolford in Walpole twenty-four years ago, and leaves two sons, William F. and George D., and one daughter, Emma C. Woolford.

She was a member of the Congregational church and also belonged to the Alden club, the Grange, the Woman's Relief corps and the Pilgrim Fathers. Her life has been spent in caring for her children, who will feel her loss deeply.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the house, Rev. Dr. Sneath of the Congregational church officiating.

The Returns Tonight.

A paper has been in circulation whereby Mr. Croissant, the ticket agent here, is to furnish the complete returns to the Republicans tonight at the vacant store in Opera House block The returns will also come in by telephone and any subscriber can have them by requesting Mrs Tracy to connect them. There will be no calling of subscribers by the bell, but it will be necessary to keep one's ear to the 'phone continually to get the complete returns. It is expected that by 2 o'clock on Wednesday morning the returns will be definitely known, so that anxious voters may know which way the election has gone.

Dean Dramatics.

The Athletic association at Dean have arranged a most pleasing affair, for which admission will be charged, for Friday evening, when some of the best histrionic talent will produce two sketches, "Per Telephone," and "A Difference in Clocks." Not a little time has been spent upon this production and something especially good is promised. The proceeds are to be devoted to athletics, and the affair ought to be liberally patronized in view of the fact that all of the games, both base and foot ball, are entirely free to the public. Help the association, friends, and enjoy a good entertainment as well.

Local sportsmen say that game will be unusually plentiful this fall, as the breeding season has been an ideal one. Dry weather is the great necessity for all ground nesting birds like partridges and quail, and this season has been better than any for the past ten years But a new law just passed deprives bird shooters of the fifteen days in September in which game birds have been legal targets and does away with the entire month of December, which has hitherto been open season. It imposes a fine of $20 for every one killed or in possession except during October and November. The bill prohibits absolutely the year around the sale or exposure for sale of partridges or woodcocks.

NOTICE.—My wife Mary having left my bed and board without my consent, I hereby notify all persons not to trust her on my account.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

Governor W. Murray Crane has appointed Thursday, Nov. 29, as Thanksgiving day The text of his proclamation, just issued, is as follows:

"Conforming to a venerated custom of the commonwealth at this season of the year, after the harvest has been gathered, I hereby appoint, with the advice and consent of the council, Thursday, Nov. 29, to be a day of Thanksgiving and praise

Massachusetts has abundant cause for gratitude to Almighty God Her institutions of liberty, education and charity have wonderfully prospered; a strong and resolute people, obeying law and loving order, have reared here a great commonwealth, that has ever cherished —and never more ardently than now— those precepts of public and private conduct which promote good citizenship, and those beliefs in spiritual truths which exalt character and preserve society

"In grateful recognition of the Divine beneficence I recommend that on the day named the people of the commonwealth assemble in their usual places of worship and by family firesides to acknowledge anew their dependence upon the Giver of 'every good gift and every perfect gift.'

"Given at the council chamber, in Boston, this thirty-first day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundredth and twenty fifth

W. MURRAY CRANE.

"By his excellency the governor, with the advice and consent of the council.

WILLIAM M. OLIN, Secretary.

"God save the commonwealth of Massachusetts."

A great deal has been written by able writers about golf for the young; yet they all, or nearly all, tell how to play the game, but say nothing about where to play it

There are a few boys fortunate enough to have access to a good links through their parents. But, although these boys may not be numerous, there is no reason why every youth whose parents possess any means whatever should not enjoy this pastime

In the town where I live there are only about eight boys that "chum" together, and yet we hire a links and maintain a club ourselves The "craze" started in the following way: Two boys, arming themselves with spades and tomato cans, started out one September day for a cow pasture. They selected the three most suitable spots and put the cans in the ground. The next morning over half a dozen boys started out for their first golf game, not preceded by caddies with bags of clubs and dozens of balls, but carrying "shinny sticks" in their hands and solid rubber balls in their pockets But these boys soon became fiends, and one by one came into possession of good clubs, until at Christmas all owned at least one.

By this time an interest had been aroused among the older ones, and parties of girls and boys were seen almost daily on the formerly lonely field. At last a club was formed, consisting of six active and two honorary members, paying five and ten cents a month respectively. With these dues the field was hired, and as more holes had been added to the original three we now were the proprietors of a nine hole golf course. At present the club has doubled its membership and is steadily growing.

I am aware that we had many advantages, as we found a field abounding in natural hazards, such as trees, bushes, stone walls and brooks But plenty of the detestable things called bunkers may be made by piling brush, sand or stones in heaps, and there are no fields but what are somewhat irregular. The holes should not be less than 125 yards apart, and can be made by sinking a tin can, about four inches in diameter, in the ground

Franklin boys are not supernatural beings, and "What man has done man can do?" Why are there not more golf links for juveniles? ARTHUR STEWART

Another New Swindle. It appears from the Cincinnati papers that an entirely new and successful swindle is being worked in that city. Five different firms were victimized last week, and though the matter has been referred to the police, the person who is profiting by the scheme is still undetected. Its very simplicity insures success almost every time, the crook managing at the same time to keep himself so well in the background that the police have not even a description of him. The scheme is this: The man first obtains the name and address of some workman employed in a large establishment. He generally selects one who lives quite a distance from his place of employment. The next step is to go to a telephone, call up the establishment and ask the party answering the telephone to either call the workman or take a message to him. In either case the message is that some member of the family has been seriously injured or taken ill suddenly and that the workman is wanted at his home immediately. The result is that the workman hurries home. During his absence another telephone call is sent to the place. The party working the swindle represents himself as the workman and says owing to the serious danger of the wife, mother, child or whoever is supposed to be injured, he must remain home several days. He adds that he must have money and requests his employer to give what is due him on the week's work to a messenger to be sent at once. Of course the firm agrees, thinking its employe is in need, and when a messenger boy calls no question is asked, but the wages due are handed over in an envelope. Instead of the workman sending for it it develops an hour or so after—when the man returns to the establishment—that the boy was sent by some man he does not know, and generally from some down-town store. The swindler gets the money, pays the boy for delivering the message and is well away before the workman has returned from his home, where, of course, the supposed accident or sudden illness has not been heard of.

American Genius. There seems to be something in the American atmosphere which develops genius, without the assistance or consent of any other country. Every visitor to Washington falls in love with the National library the splendid structure which faces the United States capitol, writes Walter Wellman. Not long ago the official architect of the French government was there, and he proceeded to go into raptures over the library. "It is the most magnificent building of its sort in the world," he said, "and I must see the great man who designed it." So he hunted up Paul Pelz—modest, artistic Paul Pelz, whose genius flashed forth in the drawings for the finest building on the American continent. After paying many enthusiastic compliments to Mr. Pelz, the Frenchman asked: "Of course, you were educated abroad?" "No. I was born in Germany," replied Pelz, "but I came here as a boy and studied in this country." "Then you travel much in Europe—every year a few months, perhaps?" "No. I have not been back to Europe since I came over many years ago." "Where, then," asked the astonished stranger, "did you get your inspiration for this great creation?" "I sucked it out of my paws, like the bear," was the reply.

"The manager of an immense business," says a writer in Youth's Companion, "declares that it costs his house $25,000 a year to correct errors in invoices and other papers—mistakes due to poor writing and poor English." If it costs so much to correct the avoidable blunders of one house, think what the aggregate cost of the blundering and bungling of the business establishments of the whole country must amount to!

REBUILDING.

You would like to be as strong as an athlete. You would like to have muscles like his. You would like to have the Strength that knows no weakness. But you are all run down, miserable, can't sleep, no appetite, nervous, ambition gone, no zest for life.

What you need is Smith's Green Mountain Renovator. Why? Simply this. The Greens were a strong people. They believed in the curative and strengthening power of the herbs of the field, and used them. Now the Renovator is made of pure, wholesome herbs, and is redolent of the green fields, fragrant woods and bracing air. It will give you Strength. You will find yourself a new person. This has been the experience of thousands. Try it.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood.

If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Scrofula

This root of many evils—

Tumors, abscesses, cutaneous eruptions, dyspepsia, readiness to catch cold and inability to get rid of it easily, catarrh, and other ailments including the consumptive tendency—

Is removed by Hood's Sarsaparilla so completely that a radical and permanent cure is effected.

This statement is proved by thousands of voluntary testimonials. SILAS VERNOOY, Wawarsing, N. Y., writes. "When our daughter was two years old, she broke out all over her face and head with scrofula sores. Nothing we did for her seemed to do her any good, and we had become almost discouraged when we thought we would try Hood's Sarsaparilla. The first bottle helped her and when she had taken six the sores were all healed and her face was smooth. She has never shown any sign of the scrofula returning."

We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croupy symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug, and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

TEMPERANCE

“DARE TO BE A DANIEL.”

A Sweetheart's Admonition Saves a Young Man in the Hour of Sore Temptation.

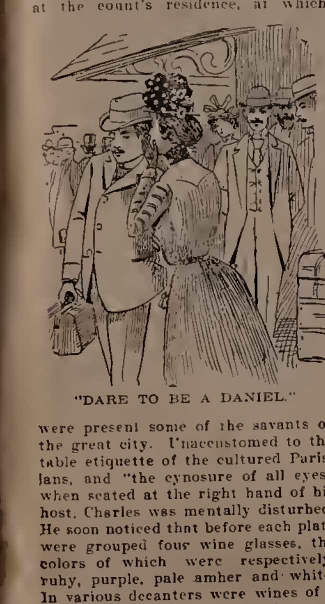
The son of a president of one of our oldest and most prominent eastern colleges was about leaving his native town for Paris to enter upon a special course in surgery. He had just attained his majority, and the simplicity and freshness of his boyhood still lay upon his soul. Many of his comrades had gathered at the depot to wish him bon voyage, among whom was his sweetheart. The last goodbys had been uttered when, obeying an impulse, she sprang to his side upon the platform, and bidding him hold his ear to her lips, whispered: "Charley, dare to be a Daniel!"

"Only that old saw," said he, while a look of disappointment shadowed his face.

"That only, Charley, but it may mean much to you," was her answer.

The bearer of a letter of introduction to a distinguished nobleman and scientist in Paris, the young American was soon received with marked kindness.

In a few days he was the recipient of an invitation to a small banquet at the count's residence, at which were present some of the savants of the great city. Unaccustomed to the table etiquette of the cultured Parisians, and "the cynosure of all eyes" when seated at the right hand of his host, Charles was mentally disturbed. He soon noticed that before each plate were grouped four wine glasses, the colors of which were respectively, ruby, purple, pale amber and white. In various decanters were wines of a corresponding hue, of which each guest indicated to the waiter his or her choice by simply touching a glass. The white ones, alone, and those before Charles were left undisturbed.



"DARE TO BE A DANIEL."

During the progress of the feast the host, filling his ruby tinted glass (an example which his guests followed), proposed a toast, "To the wives, daughters and sweethearts of America," to which he invited a response from his youthful guest, motioning a servant meanwhile to fill his glass with the red wine.

What followed can best be told in the young man's own words: "Mother (he wrote), for a moment I was in an agony of trepidation. I would rather have faced a cannon. All had risen and in the hand of each was the cup of wine which I had been pledged from my chidlhood not to 'touch, taste nor handle.' My head swam. Suddenly I heard the words: 'Dare to be a Daniel!' They shot through my brain like an electric flash. Instantly my resolution was taken. Touching my white glass, a servant filled it with water. Rising, I said as well as I could for the great lump in my throat:

"'I beg leave to say that to the typical wife, daughter and sweetheart of America the purity of this, nature's own beverage, illustrates the lives they aim to lead and the dangers which they seek to avoid. Permit me to use it in their dear name.'

"Following the example of Count B., every white glass was instantly raised and the toast drunk."—Temperance Cause.

A New Treatment.

Another mode of treating the drink habit is said to be in successful operation in Paris, where three physicians—Drs. Rapelier, Thebanet and Broca—announce that they have discovered a new serum. Of 57 cases treated 32 were cured and 15 were improved, only ten failing to show improvement. The serum is obtained from horses that have been dosed with alcohol until their systems are drenched with the poison. When administered to patients the serum revives natural repugnance to alcohol, which continued use has broken down.

They Feel Its Disgrace.

The business of selling liquor in this country is looked down upon, and a stigma rests upon the man who is engaged in the business. The degree of stigma may vary with the intelligence of the community in which a person who is a liquor dealer resides, but the loss of caste is clearly observable and you can't get away from it.—Liquor Trades Review.

No Cause Known for the Act.

A young man, 33 years of age, employed in a hardware store, who had been drinking freely for some time past, went into a hotel bar in an intoxicated condition and that night shot himself. A paper in its report of the affair says: "No cause is known for the act."

ALL MAKE MISTAKES.

THE trim, somewhat stylish, m[illegible]-aged woman tripped into the G st[illegible] real estate man's office, sm[illegible] pleasant[illegible] approached his desk, shifted the [illegible] package she carried to the other arm, [illegible] began:

"I have called Mr. F[illegible], to [illegible]"

"Well," cut in the re[illegible] glancing suspiciously at th[illegible] the middle-aged wom[illegible] I ha[illegible] time to look at it to-[illegible] no, home is comp[illegible]te w[illegible] from the Old F[illegible] bers, at 50 cents per [illegible] weekly, but my w[illegible] for ten or fifteen [illegible] publications of th[illegible] F[illegible] masters, old or young, [illegible] a little bit, anyhow, and I [illegible]

"But," ventured th[illegible] woman, c[illegible]ming to some qu[illegible] "If [illegible] that you misappreh[illegible]

"Well, I really don't feel [illegible] the three volumes of 'Famous W[illegible] tory' to-day, either," interrup[illegible] of the real estate firm [illegible] & Co., "seeing that my wife b[illegible] been [illegible] that highly ornamenta[illegible] work every two [illegible] three years ever since we've been married, so that now we've got a whole attic full of 'em. Nor do I exactly see my way clear to purchasing a handsomely-illustrated copy of 'The War in Cuba,' or 'The War in China,' or 'The War in Guam,' or 'The War in Painted Post,' or the war in anywhere else. I'm a man of peace, first and foremost, and, so long as war doesn't rear her fearsome head right here in Washington, thus tending to depreciate values, I don't care where they scrap. I believe in—"

"I really think," put in the somewhat stylish middle-aged woman, the smile beginning to fade a trifle from her amiable features, "that you should be put right as to the nature of my—"

"Oh, it's not a war book, then, eh?" inquired the G street real estate man. "Well, if it's a new cook book, containing 1,983 salad recipes, together with hints as to how to gild milking stools, I'm afraid I shall be compelled to desist from purchasing it to-day. We're having all of our meals sent in by a caterer now, and the arrangement is entirely satisfactory, thanks, and as for the suggestions in the book bearing upon the best means of converting an ordinary barrel of the common or garden variety into a folding bed or a roll-top desk, we're so stocked up with furniture now that I'm seriously thinking of having a lot of it auctioned off. We don't—"

"I see," interrupted the middle-aged woman, shifting to the other foot and beginning to look somewhat lukewarmly upon the real estate man, "that you are disposed to jest and to—"

"Not at all, not at all, my dear madam," broke in the real estate man, "but, supposing I did feel in a jestful mood, I surely couldn't be made to feel any jestier by a perusal of your 'Spare Weeks With Great Poets,' for I find that as I grow older poetry has an ineffably saddening effect upon me, moving me even unto tears when I read too much of it, and—"

"Please allow me to explain the object of my call upon you," again interrupted the woman, "and to assure you that I am not selling the works of the poets, but—"

"My dear madam, I assure you I apologize for my mistake, but it really makes but little difference whether it is 'Spare Weeks with Great Poets' or 'Half Hours with the Wits;' I am simply overloaded. My wife is the wittiest woman in the world, and she would be highly insulted if I should dare to take such a work into our house. That is one thing that an agent has never been able to sell to her, and should I buy a copy she would take it as a reflection upon her sense of humor, and there would be open rebellion, for which I am sure you would not blame her. No—"

"Just a moment, if you please, sir," again interrupted the comely middle-aged woman, "until I endeavor to make it clear to you that I have no book whatsoever—"

"Oh, it's not a book, then?" said the real estate man, again glancing suspiciously at the small package carried by his visitor. "Well, I've got so many different kinds of fountain pens now that I can't write with that it would be simply a waste of time for you to show me your stock. If it's a new kind of button fastener, I beg of you to excuse me, for I am the inventor of seven different kinds of button fasteners myself, on none of which, however, have I yet had time to secure a patent. If your line is toothpicks that can be converted into nail files, again I will ask you to spare yourself the bother of showing your stock to me, for I haven't any teeth of my own to speak of, and as for my nails, I'm so far advanced in the study of Buddhism now that I'm seriously thinking of imitating the example of some of the Mahatmas by letting my nails grow, so that you'll see—"

The neat-looking middle-aged woman brought her parasol down on the real estate man's desk with a bang just at this moment, and when he looked up from his blotting pad, upon which he had been making geometrical figures, she impaled him with her eye.

"Just be good enough to punish yourself by remaining quiet long enough for me to state to you my errand here," she said, in a clear, distinct tone, never removing her eye from his. "You will understand that I can derive no pleasure or profit whatsoever by talking to or with a born windbag, and if I had known that that's what you were I shouldn't have come down here to your office at all. Now that you're resting your countenance for half a moment or so, I will state to you that, while down at the seashore, I met your wife, who is a very charming and delightful little woman, and a very great deal too good for you. I became so much interested in her that I determined to put all of my Washington property, consisting of several rows of houses in Mt. Pleasant, in your hands as agent upon my return here, and it was upon this errand that I called. However, you have proven yourself to be such a garrulous nonentity that—"

And she swept grandly out of the office, despite the efforts of the apologetic real estate man to block her.

"Well, I'll bet that bluff threw a scare into him, anyhow," said the stylish-looking middle-aged woman to herself as she reached the street, and then she went into an office building further down the block and succeeded in selling four bottles of her patent shoe polish to the typewriter girls.

And the G street real estate man? Oh, he occupied his leisure hours for the next couple of weeks in kicking himself around the block several times daily, and then it suddenly dawned upon him one day that his wife had not been at the sea shore, and could by no possibility have met his charming caller there. Then he indulged in a choice bit of language directed principally at himself, and let the matter drop.

But, just the same, every woman caller receives an exceptional amount of consideration, even though he is rapidly accumulating a great variety of odds and ends for which he has no earthly use. One of these women peddlers might be a profitable customer.—Washington Star.

Artless Thing.

Charming Maiden—Then they went to Woozey's did they? Ah, that's a delightful place. When a friend asks me to go to Woozey's I know he must think an awful lot of me, for they serve the most elaborate and expensive luncheons in the city.

Helpless Youth—Let's go to Woozey's, Miss Quickstep.—Chicago Tribune.

A Modern Merchant.

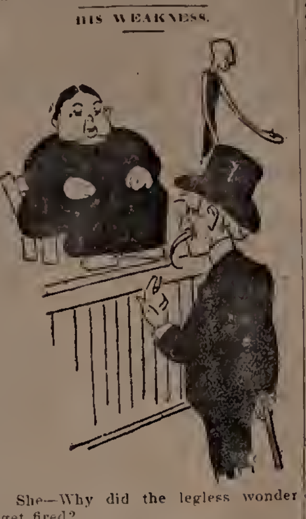
Clerk (to employer)—What shall I mark that new lot of black silk?

Employer—Mark the selling price at three a yard.

Clerk—But it only cost one dollar a yard.

Employer—I don't care what it cost. I am selling off regardless of cost.—Columbus Journal.

HIS WEAKNESS.



She—Why did the legless wonder get fired?

He—'Cause he was kicking for more salary.—Chicago Daily News.

Ordered to Leave.

May—Cholly Chump is of the opinion that Miss Topnotch's father is taking quite too much interest in the war in South Africa.

Mattie—How is that?

May—Why, Cholly called on her the other night and the old gentleman called him a Boer and told him to trek.—Judge.

His Strong Case.

Mr. Hubbsley—I don't see how you can sit there claiming that the baby takes after you.

Mrs. Hubbsley — Why, everybody says she's the very picture of me.

Mr. Hubbsley—That's all right, but here she is nearly nine months old and doesn't say a word. — Chicago Times-Herald.

Reminders.

Crawford—How was it you didn't have any fresh vegetables at the farmhouse where you were boarding?

Crabshaw—I fancy the old farmer was sensitive and didn't like to have any green goods around.—Town Topics.

"Yis'm, an' so I do, but I'm a little shy on the mixin' av 'em, mem."—Chicago Tribune.

The King and His Fool.

"Prithee, your majesty, what is the difference between yourself and Shakespeare?"

"What is it, fool?"

"Because he knew it all and you only think you do."—Indianapolis Sun.

Pretty Tall.

Englishman—You have some pretty high buildings in Chicago, haven't you?

Chicagoan (in London)—Well, I should remark! Why, the tops of them are covered with snow the year around!—N. Y. World.

No Zest to It.

Miss Summit—He is too enormously rich for you, dear.

Miss Palisade—What do you mean?

Miss Summit—Why, with a man like that, there would be no fun in being extravagant.—Town Topics.

Tangled.

"How many fish have you caught?"

"Not one."

"I thought you said you had a fine mess."

"Oh, I was speaking of my line."—Brooklyn Life.

Analogous Accidents.

Phlett—When a man is in love everything about looks different to him.

Brett—Yes; it's the same when he knocks his head against a lamp post.—Tit-Bits.

Thought They Were Invited.

"How did you gather such a large congregation of old and middle-aged people?"

"I advertised a sermon to the young," was the latter's reply.—London King.

On Account of the Family.

"What is meant by a 'family failing,' pa?"

"I never heard of a family failing, my son; it is the head of the family that fails.—Town Topics.

An Explanation.

Weeks—Your wife flares up pretty often, doesn't she?

Meeks—Yes; you see, I married one of my old flames. — Chicago Daily News.

Encouragement.

He—Would you object seriously to my kissing you?

She—Well, you see, I must resist on general principles; but, then, I'm not very strong.—Smart Set.

His Modest Self-Estimate.

She (haughtily)—I wouldn't marry the best man on earth!

He (calmly)—Yes, I know; but how about me?—Puck.

It's Easy To Take

Thin, pale, anæmic girls need a fatty food to enrich their blood, give color to their cheeks and restore their health and strength. It is safe to say that they nearly all reject fat with their food.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME & SODA is exactly what they require; it not only gives them the important element (cod-liver oil) in a palatable and easily digested form, but also the hypophosphites which are so valuable in nervous disorders that usually accompany anæmia.

SCOTT'S EMULSION is a fatty food that is more easily digested than any other form of fat. A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health. You can get it in this way.

We have known persons to gain a pound a day while taking it.

WHAT SHE THINKS.

Opportunities sometimes serve the man, but more often the man must serve the opportunities.

"Incircumscriptibleness," meaning incapable of limitation, has been admitted into the newest dictionary.

It is a foolish woman who packs a bottle of shoeblacking in the same compartment with her best white petticoat.

To the one-adjective woman "grand" is as applicable in describing a glorious sunset as in extolling the merits of a piece of huckleberry pie.

The woman who loves a man does not love him as well as she ought to if she is not willing to give up some pleasures and comforts to help him rise.

After all, it doesn't do to be too hard on Li Hung Chang; he probably has troubles that the world wots not of; more than 1,000 servants are employed in his household.—Philadelphia Times

IN FAR OFF CHINA.

In China a doctor's fee varies from eight cents to a quarter.

There is no word in the Chinese language that conveys an intimation of what we term public opinion; nor is there a synonym for patriotism.

In arithmetic the Chinese were first to invent the decimal system—the way of counting by tens, which has been adopted by all nations except the English.

All buildings belonging to the Chinese government are yellow, and it is a capital offense for any private person to use that color on the exterior of his dwelling or place of business.

Keep Yourself Strong

And you will ward off colds, pneumonia, fevers and other diseases. You need to have pure, rich blood and good digestion. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the blood rich and pure as no other medicine can do. It tones the stomach, creates an appetite and invigorates the whole system. You will be wise to begin taking it now, for it will keep you strong and well.

Hood's Pills are non irritating. Price 25 cents.

A Wearisome Spouse.

Mrs. Henpeck—You are the most unreasonable man!

Henpeck—I?

Mrs. Henpeck—Yes, you! You always agree with me, when you know how I love to argue.—Syracuse Herald.

A Few Words about Pain-Killer

A prominent Montreal clergyman, the Rev. James H. Dixon, Rector St. Judes and Hon. Canon of Christ Church Cathedral, writes:—"Permit me to send you a few lines to strongly recommend Perry Davis' Pain-Killer. I have used it with satisfaction for thirty-five years. It is a preparation which deserves full public confidence."

Pain-Killer A sure cure for Sore Throat, Coughs, Chills, Cramps, &c.

Two Sizes, 25c. and 50c.
There is only one Pain-Killer, Perry Davis.'

FASHIONS IN MEN'S DRESS.

The trend in all things is toward the moderate and unobtrusive. There will be no radical introductions and no color fads.

The high or silk hats, as well as the crush hats, will show a slightly belled crown and rather narrow well-curled brim. The derby will be very small and very much like last spring's model. The soft hats will continue to be popular. They will have wide brims and high crowns, and will be worn with plain ribbon band.

In shoes we will stick to the flat sole, with outswung last, the vamp to have a plain tip, with row of hole ornament on the inner side and another row where the uppers are attached to the vamp. For day wear, black calf with laced uppers. There is no place in the entire bill of correct dress for laced patent leathers.

In gloves our staple colorings will be maintained. The heavy red tan cape, saddler-stitched, will be proper for walking; the smoke pearl, with self backs, for full dress, and the slate and tan chevrettes for afternoon. The gloves will close with the bone or pearl button. To-day the metal clasp is the earmark of the cheap glove. For walking and outing the gloves should be at least a size larger than is usually worn. For dress gloves should fit faultlessly.

There are unmistakable evidences of a return to less color and to more white and black in our dress. The fancy flannels have just about killed color. With shirts screaming to heaven, ties proclaiming every tone in the rainbow and half-hose and hat bands vying with each other in brilliancy, it only needed the colored suit to make men of taste run to cover. Now white negliges, if you please, black belts, quiet ties, black shoes, black hat bands, blue serges, neat black and white and brown suitings—there it is—the pinnacle of fashion, the acme of good form.

In shirts there are likely to be very few changes, certainly none of importance, in either the white or colored. The dress shirt will be made of pure white, plain bosom showing three stud holes. Embroidery or plaits will not be correct. The cuffs will be very slightly rounded and square. The return to square points is not at all assured. I mention it because several very smart custom shirtmakers have brought it out. In colored shirts the percales will show neat combinations in colors and small units and stripes. The striped madras shirtings will be in every treatment, in either blue, ox blood, black or helio in combination with white. The stripes will run up and down the bosom, but some patterns will be made with the cross-stripe treatment

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2.65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 10 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit. The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save. If your druggist can't supply you, it will be fowarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

Planted Pine a Success.

The great bulk of the forest planting has been done in the states west of the Mississippi river. In the eastern states, except in a few instances, the planting has been done on a smaller scale and usually as an experiment. An interesting plantation is that belonging to Isaac Adams, at Moultonboro, N. H., covering altogether about 50 acres, and composed of white pine and Norway pine set out about 25 years ago. The trees have grown admirably, and, so far as showing what planted pine will produce, the experiment is very valuable.—Washington Star.

Population of First-Class Power.

Although Japan is not ranked as a first-class power, she has the population to give her that rank—44,000,000 people. At the present writing Japan takes the same position as the United States against the division of China, but some of the European nations only see in this an expression of Japan's ambition to become later the ruling power in China, which they fear might result in uniting the yellow races against the white in a war for the control of the world.—Little Chronicle.

Golf Playing in Thibet.

The people of Thibet are good golf players in their way. Instead of a club the player swings his leg and strikes the "ball," which is a small round stone, with his instep, knocking it into a hole some distance away. Another way of playing the game is to use a stone weighing about 40 pounds and throw it into the hole with the hands. Some of the men can throw this large stone over 30 feet.—Little Chronicle.

The prince of Wales has lately amused himself by collecting pens of famous writers of the Victorian era. He has one that belonged to Tennyson, one of Browning's, of Hardy's, and 50 or 60 more, including a curious inkstand once the property of Robert Louis Stevenson.

Lord Hopetoun, the new governor general of Australia, is expected to dazzle the colonies with his magnificent entertaining. He took an enormous amount of baggage with him from England, and what he may do is inferred from the fact that when he was governor of one of the colonies a few years ago the sum spent on his table alone was many times that of his official salary.

GOSSIP OF LITTERATEURS.

Richard Henry Stoddard, the blind banker and poet, has given up dictating much of his copy and writes most of it. In spite of his blindness he writes a remarkably clear hand.

Charles Upson Clark, Brooklyn, N. Y., has been commissioned by the Royal Academy of Science, Berlin, to prepare a new edition of Ammianus Marcellinus, the Roman historian of the fourth century. The commission carries a grant of 1,500 marks. Mr. Clark was valedictorian of the class of '97, Yale university.

Literary Paris is greatly agitated over the difficulty of deciding which is the genuine copy of "L'Ami du Peuple," which was stained with the blood of Marat when the revolutionist met his death at the hands of Charlotte Corday. So far seven copies have turned up, all solemnly accredited and all bearing the blood stain.

Several descendants of the poet Longfellow have been enjoying the hospitality of the Ojibway Indians away up at Desbarata, Ont. These Indians are descendants of the Sagamores, so picturesquely treated in "Hiawatha." Miss Longfellow, the poet's daughter, has been formally adopted into the tribe. A select corps of chiefs, braves, squaws and pappooses gave in presence of the visitors and beneath the primeval trees of Desbaratas islands a dramatization of the famous poem. The performers were garbed in buckskin costumes, with headdresses of feathers.

Direct Steamer Service with St. Johns, N. F.

The direct steamer service between Halifax and St. Johns, N. VOL. XXIII. NO. 90. FRANKLIN, MASS., FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1900. SINGLE COPIES 3 CENTS.

A GREAT VICTORY

For Americanism, Protection and Sound Money.

The expected has happened. The American people have repudiated free silver even more emphatically than they did four years ago. Bryan and Bryanism are dead. Republicanism, as indicated by a stand for sound money, home protection and a new colonial policy, has received an emphatic endorsement at the hands of nearly eight million voters. As was to have been expected the gold Democrats returned in large numbers to their original party, though not diminishing the Republican plurality, and an increased number of states have endorsed the principles of the Republican party and the acts of President McKinley.

He is no longer a "dictator," a "czar;" fullest authority has been given him, with the consent and advice of congress, to clarify in the quickest and wisest manner the cloudy and unsettled Philippine condition, and no one doubts but that the desired result will be accomplished. Just how it is to be done no one knows. Mr. Bryan himself, had he been elected, would have been obliged to feel his way carefully, relying upon the good judgment and sound sense of the country to guide him in his acts.

Imperialism never existed, except in the minds of those who would use the word for a campaign cry. Extension, a new colonial policy, were words that the Republican party welcomed, were prepared to stand by and were convinced were measures that would meet with the approval of the people. They did meet with that approval.

The effects of the election were felt instantly and they will be far reaching. Better times are as certain as the law of cause and effect. Already plans are being carried out which had been projected only upon the basis of Republican success. Uncertainty now gives way to certainty. The tariff, the monetary question, etc., will not now embarrass financial operations, and the merchant, the manufacturer and the laborer can face the future without a misgiving.

The election has also proven that the laborer recognizes that his interests are identical with those of his employer. It is essential that the employer should recognize that the laborer is entitled to more consideration than, we fear, he has been receiving. Combinations of capital tend to hardness of heart. This is one of the problems with which the Republicans must speedily grapple, since the voters have elected to leave the matter in their hands rather than trust it to the Democrats for settlement.

Instead of a meagre majority in congress the Republicans will now have a large working majority, and the president's efforts at the extension of good government, a sound currency and adequate protection to American interests will receive fullest support. The party will be responsible for its acts and will be held accountable.

Mr. Bryan has been personally regarded as an honest man. Nevertheless, his policy of raising the standard of free silver in the West, where it was supposed to have somewhat of a hold upon the people, and of practically ignoring it in the East, brought him under the ban of distrust and branded him as one who would trim his sale to catch a wavering breeze from whatever quarter it might blow. This cost him votes.

His alliance with Croker was most unfortunate. The honest people of the country knew that Croker represented all that was base in politics, all that was ignoble in act. Victory for Bryan with Croker as an ally would have been a defeat deplorable indeed. Croker and his horde of henchmen would demand, and would be entitled to, recognition. Bryan could not ignore their demands. Financial theorists of the West would demand recognition and would have it. Altgeld, of brilliancy of mind but oblique of vision, would receive his due. Tillman must have his share. All who would weaken the foundations of government by attacking the supreme court would have sought from Bryan the reward for their labors. Such a condition is past comprehension. It can be viewed only with a shudder.

Croker, who essayed the role of a Warwick, finds that he has simply been the court fool. His claims were baseless and his prophesies idle as the winds. His hold upon New York through Tammany has been one of pure "bluff." Gotham might submit, but the nation will not. A king-maker should have kingly material with which to work. That Bryan was not. The clay crumbled, the statue fell, never to rise again. This does not mean that he will go into obscurity. He is ambitious, a glib talker, has a pleasing personality, and is still the idol of over seven million people.

Twice have the legions of the Democracy, under orders from Bryan, been flung against the bulwarks of Americanism, only to be hurled back overthrown and bewildered. But they will not follow him further with that blind fatuity which has characterized them hitherto. Already they of the old Democracy, who recognize that theories and vagaries have been followed in order that the "hero of the Chicago convention" might attain the goal of his ambition, are getting together to discuss the situation, reunite the scattered elements of the party and prepare to wage again a battle for supremacy.

President McKinley now having no third term in mind, with no occasion to guide his acts by a desire for re-election, will be in a position to give his country his best and most intelligent service, as devoid of partisanship as possible, and with an eye single to his country's good. With the exception of Grant, no president has had eight years' continuous term of office since Jackson, Lincoln's untimely death cutting short his second term. McKinley will not disappoint the country, and it will have made no mistake in giving him a second term.

It has been urged that President McKinley has had no policy. This is true to the extent that he has had no hard and fast plan of his own which must be carried out at any cost. He has recognized the necessity of counsellors among the men of his own party, among whom it is possible to find a difference of opinion. He has avoided the pitfall into which Cleveland fell, and which was in a measure the cause of his failure—that of ignoring the advice or counsel of senators and congressmen—and during the past four years President McKinley's relations with congress have been amicable and harmonious in the extreme.

Landslides are not desirable things. They either indicate wholesale abuse or wholesale distrust, both of which are fatal to party supremacy. With the balance of power nicely adjusted the party in power is certain to guard its acts with caution, ever keeping its eye upon the future, careful both as to its sins of omission and commission. The more enlightened the voter, the more he will demand from the statesmen of the party of his choice. The campaign of education must succeed the campaign of personal abuse, the appeals to class hatred, bigotry or revenge. To this end all honest, intelligent citizens are working.

"Long may our land be bright
With Freedom's holy light;
Protect us by Thy might,
Great God, our King."

ELECTION GLINTS.

Croker was Bryan's "old man of the sea."

George Fred's scalding tears are full of Bryan.

The president will continue to preach patriotism, anti-pessimism, progress and prosperity.

Bryan says "Prosperity did it." That's so, but it was future prosperity as well as past.

The "full dinner pail" was a campaign slogan, and surely the Republicans have got a stomach full this time.

Bryan will not now look forward to March 4th. The American people gave him that order Nov. 6th.

Every town and city in Rhode Island went for McKinley. What's the matter with little Rhody? Nothing.

The new century will start out with a Republican president. That is as it should be, and may it continue.

The American people can always be relied upon to be right. Leaders sometimes go astray; then they fail of a following.

Congress will have more Powers than ever. The 11th Massachusetts congressional district contributes her portion, and it's a good one.

Thousands of anxious hearts in the Philippines will hail the re-election of McKinley with a joy that is unspeakable. It will mean home to them.

Is Lieut. Gov. Bates gubernatorial timber when Crane steps down? His increased vote over Crane indicates the hold he has on the hearts of the Massachusetts Republicans.

Those who object to Hanna will have to admit that he wrought yeoman service for the country and proved himself for the second time a master hand at organization and achievement.

Populism is no longer popular, even in the West. It has gone the way of greenbackism, free tradeism and other idiosyncracies which hold public attention for a moment and then vanish away.

Broad statesmanship demands that candidates for the highest office in the gift of the people should avoid appealing to class hatredism, demagogism, vituperation, repudiation and personal ambition.

If Thayer has won in the Third Massachusetts district it is a magnificent testimonial to his popularity, and indicates the confidence that Republicans and Democrats alike had in their genial representative.

Bryan is reported to have said that this was his last attempt to gain the presidency. Bryan is wiser after election than before. It is not impossible that his native state may send him to the senate, where his ability at speechmaking may have full scope.

Massachusetts has no apologies to make over this election. Up to 1896 a plurality of 83,000 had never been reached in this state, and it is nearly twice as many as the state gave Garfield, three times as large as it gave Harrison, and nearly four times as large as it gave Blaine. High water mark is always a difficult point to maintain.

Roosevelt is the hero of the hour. As a campaigner he outdid Bryan himself, covering more miles, speaking to more people, holding fully as much of the popular interest and winning votes by thousands. Indeed, the eyes of the country were centered upon him equally with Bryan, and if all signs do not fail he will spend the coming four years fitting himself for higher honors. His star is in the ascendancy.

HOW WE GOT THE NEWS.

The counting of the local votes was over before 6 o'clock, and though the Republican vote was smaller than in '96, still there was no occasion for discouragement. Everyone was anxious to hear from neighboring towns, the state and the nation. Through the efforts of interested parties, a room was secured in Opera house block and the returns were taken there by the telegraph messenger, James Leonard, as fast as they were received. The receiving end was in charge of Ticket Agent Croissant, and it is simple justice to say that the returns were never so carefully and intelligently handled in any previous year. He was the right man for the place.

At the Opera house block the returns were read off to a large number, most of whom remained till nearly midnight, when it appeared as if the country had gone safely Republican, when they went home. A few exuberant spirits procured a drum and a following, and went about the streets to let the town know that a victory had been won. Returns were also received by telephone, Mrs. Tracey remaining at the switchboard until morning. The telephone service was satisfactory and more than usually complete.

Republican Jubilation.

Plans are now being formed for a jubilation some night next week, probably Tuesday, when all will be given an opportunity to express their satisfaction at the result of Tuesday's election. The town committee are now working up the affair.

Woonsocket Opera House.

With the Morrison Comedy Co., opening next Monday night at the Opera house for a week's engagement in "The Princess of Patches," comes Sunetaro, the Japanese wonder worker. His act is a novelty of the highest order, and during the week he will introduce novel experiments in Japanese conjuring and curious Hindoo feats as performed by the Fakirs of India. This specialty is the acme of the art that deceives people and makes them laugh. It is in itself a most wonderful and bewildering entertainment. Sunetaro appears at every performance.

NOTICE.—My wife Mary having left my bed and board without my consent, I hereby notify all persons not to trust her on my account.

Are You Going?

Don't forget the entertainment at Dean academy this evening, as it will be well worth the price of admission. The two plays have been given careful rehearsal, and an unusual dramatic triumph is assured. The proceeds are to be devoted to the Athletic association, which is surely worthy of hearty support at the hands of the public.

"Prince Pro Tem."

The lovers of opera, on Friday evening, Nov. 28, at Morse opera house, will have "Prince Pro Tem." Mr. Packard heads the company, which numbers about forty people, including an orchestra. This opera will doubtless prove a happy selection for Manager Partridge as "Prince Pro Tem" has met success both in Boston and on the road. Lovers of light opera should not miss this opportunity to hear Barnet & Thompson's favorite musical fantasie.

A new lot of potted plants, ferns, rubber plants, palms, etc.; cut flowers, roses in large or small quantities; funeral designs well made up. Violets and 100 chrysanthemums. Slade's greenhouse.

Transient and regular patrons will find good service, clean and quick work at Oohee's barber shop, Opera house block.

FRANKLIN NEWS.

An interesting service will be held in the Congregational church on Sunday evening at 6 o'clock. It will be a past presidents' meeting of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor. All those who have acted as presidents in the past will respond in person or by letter. The meeting will be in charge of Mr. Bradley M. Rockwood. All welcome.

People taking boarders should beware of a curly haired individual, between 45 and 50 years of age, calling himself a railroad man. He is about 5 feet, 8 inches in height, hair slightly gray, and when last seen wore a mustache. He has victimized several boarding house keepers in town by taking French leave in the early morning hours, with his grip, leaving nothing behind but a board bill.

A very pretty wedding took place Wednesday morning, at 9 o'clock, at St. Mary's chapel, when Miss Agnes E. Callahan, daughter of Mrs. Timothy Callahan, of Washington street, was united in marriage to James J. O'Connell of Woonsocket. Rev. M. J. Lee performed the ceremony, after which he celebrated a nuptial mass. A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's mother, only the relatives and immediate friends being present. The happy couple left on the 4.25 train amid showers of rice, for Woonsocket, where they will reside in their newly furnished home.

Rev. F. B. Sleeper will give an address before the High school teachers and scholars at the Horace Mann school Monday evening, at 7 o'clock. He will have from the State house in Boston a facsimile of the original Gov. Bradford manuscript brought from Fulham palace, London, three years ago, and delivered by Ambassador Bayard to our state legislature. It is an old volume full of curious spelling and ancient style. Certain remarkable specimens of the style will be put on the blackboard. Those who are interested in the old Pilgrim history and characteristics will be glad to attend. Interesting historic incidents will be given. All the people in town are cordially invited to be present and examine this ancient volume.

Advertising is business news. It tells the things which are of great daily importance. It is of more account to the frugal housewife to know where to get certain necessary commodities at a less price than usual than to know of the troubles in Siam and Alaska.

Good Thing for Ham Orators.

The employment of the phonograph as a mechanical [illegible] for the [illegible] bashful candidates is likely to be an interesting feature of the approaching general election. For some years the talking machine has played an important part in the [illegible] of America, where in many instances the candidate has, from the retirement of his own home, [illegible] himself with treating his political views into the funnel of a phonograph and allowing the machine to [illegible] the rest on tour. In [illegible] case the agent, and under the direction of a popular chairman, the meeting of electors takes place just as if the [illegible] were present in person. [illegible] certain advantages which many unsuccessful candidates will readily appreciate. For the [illegible] candidate the phonograph as a [illegible] work ex[illegible] of political [illegible] is an unmixed blessing. The hostile constituency may roar itself hoarse with [illegible] friendly criticism, it may refer to the candidate in every unpublishable term imaginable, it may even [illegible] throw antiquated vegetables at him, but the machine, deaf, blind and impervious, will go right along, steadily grinding out its proprietor's views on the war or the youthful offenders [illegible] without even pausing to say: "Gentlemen, I am much touched," when a retired egg breaks impotently inside the funnel. By a simple contrivance the phonograph may be made to register the feeling of the audience, so that when the meeting is over the records can be sent back to the candidate, who reproduces the proceedings and perhaps feels gratified that he did not attend in person.

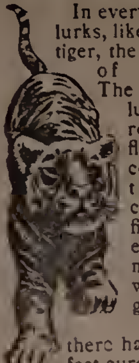
Thirty years ago John Taborn was placed behind the walls of the Ohio penitentiary, where he still remains, holding the record for long sentences. Taborn was sentenced from Delaware county to life for murder in the second degree, and was 22 years of age when he arrived, August 16, 1870. The prisoner was a resident of Cardington, where his mother and sister still reside, and killed a man who was going to a wedding. Taborn's serial number is 8,527, and the number of the last man to arrive is 32,697, showing that 24,170 prisoners have been sent to the institution since he lost his freedom. According to the statutes, a man is eligible to parole who has served 35 years' actual imprisonment, but Taborn prefers to end his days in the penitentiary.

Late reports say there is considerable mining activity in the Black hills, and a number of new mines are being opened up. Comparisons made between the present condition of mining in the Black hills and that of Colorado, Idaho and other western precious metal states are not at all unfavorable to the former. Last year upward of $8,000,000 was taken from Lawrence county mines, one of them being the Homestake. There is said to be not more than one stamp mill standing idle in the county. And yet the Black Hills mining industry can be said to be practically in its infancy, for there are great areas which will ultimately prove of great productiveness that yet remain unnoticed and unexploited.

The neighborhood in Connecticut where the late Collis P. Huntington was born is noted for romantic names. He first saw the light in Poverty Hollow, adjacent to Squabble Hill, Hell street and Skunk's Misery.

New York women are going to saw wood at a church festival, but in all probability their ruling instinct will be too strong to permit them to carry out the "say nothing" end of the popular phrase.

The engagement between the duke of Manchester and a Cincinnati girl has been broken, perhaps because he found that her purse strings were tied in a hard knot.



Crouching

In every cough there lurks, like a crouching tiger, the probabilities of consumption. The throat and lungs become rough and inflamed from coughing and the germs of consumption find an easy entrance. Take no chances with the dangerous foe. For 60 years there has been a perfect cure. What a record! Sixty years of cures.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

soothes and heals the wounded throat and lungs. You escape an attack of consumption with all its terrible suffering and uncertain results.

There is nothing so bad for the throat and lungs as coughing.

A 25c. bottle will cure an ordinary cough; harder coughs will need a 50c. size; the dollar bottle is cheapest in the long run.

"One of my sons was spitting blood with a high fever and was very ill. We could hardly see any signs of life in him. The doctors did him no good. But one bottle of your Cherry Pectoral cured him and saved his life." C. G. ANDERSON, Nov. 19, 1898. Pukwana, S. Dak.

Write the Doctor. If you have any complaint whatever and desire the best medical advice, write the Doctor freely. Address Dr. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass.

INDIVIDUALITIES.

The late Collis P. Huntington was not a bright student in his school days, and was finally expelled from the village school for trouble with the teacher. That was when he was 1[illegible] years of age.

James S. Baker, of Missouri, is the sole survivor of the expedition formed in 1847 for the relief of Gen. Zachary Taylor in the City of Mexico. He rode on horseback from Missouri to Austin, Tex., to enlist in Col. Hayes' regiment.

President Eliot, of Harvard, has declared himself in favor of the shirt-waist man as student. Several members of the faculty complained of the fatigue costumes worn to lectures by students in June, but President Eliot did not sympathize with the complaining faculty.

Gov. Roosevelt, unlike most men who are public speakers, objects to dictating to a stenographer what he intends to say. When he does not speak from notes he writes out with his own hand and with many corrections his whole speech and then has it carefully typewritten.

According to the New York Evening Post, Gen. Miles has received from a private soldier in the Philippines a box of the cigarettes native to those islands. Inclosed was this note: "Dear Sir: When you were riding by in Porto Rico you once overheard me say how much I wanted to smoke, and you immediately had an orderly give me some cigars. I now desire to return the compliment."

In speaking of the late Ballard Smith the Louisville Courier Journal says that when he first sought a position in a newspaper office after graduating from Dartmouth college he entered the sanctum with an air of condescension. He wore a silk tile and a velvet jacket. He said he would like to be dramatic editor, but he was given a place on the local staff. In less than six months he was made city editor.

The Stork's Visits to the White House.

The only child born in the white house to a president of the United States during his term of office is Esther Cleveland, who was born September 9, 1893. Nine other children have been born in the white house: Julia Dent Grant, born in the closing days of her grandfather's second term; two grandchildren of President Tyler; four children of Col. Andrew Jackson Donelson, born during the Jackson administration; Mary Louise Adams, granddaughter of John Quincy Adams, born in 1829; James Madison Randolph, born during the second term of his maternal grandfather.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Don't forget the rummage sale at the Opera house block on Saturday. A larger variety of goods, and prices within reach of all. Sale in charge of St. John's guild.

The amount and importance of the election news entirely overshadows the ordinary local matter, which must give place in this issue to the political news of the week.

The Middlesex and Norfolk Pomona grange will meet in Medfield Wednesday, Nov. 14. Several members of the Franklin grange will attend, going by way of the electrics.

The next regular meeting of the Alden club Monday evening next. Subject, "Current Events," Mrs. May Alden Ward. A large attendance is assured. Open to visitors, gentlemen and ladies.

The Bellingham selectmen have notified the M., A. & W. railway company that certain improvements must be made in the street railroad and that cars must run hourly or legal action will at once be taken.

The Ladies' Benevolent society of the Congregational church will meet in the parlor Wednesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock. Supper will be served at 6.30. Tickets usual price. Social and entertainment in the evening.

The census of 1900 gives Franklin 5,017 as against 4,831 in 1890. While there has been a gain since the last national census, yet there has been a loss since the state census of 1895, which then gave us 5,136.

The improvements at the postoffice are now practically completed and are a credit to Contractor Grant who made them. Patrons of the office should remember to keep to the right in entering or leaving the office.

A large audience accompanied Dr. Sneath on last Sunday evening to Bethlehem. In consequence of the illness of Miss Whiting, Mrs. Jenks most kindly assisted the quartette. On Sunday evening a visit will be made to Nazareth.

Mrs. George R. Winsor is to give a luncheon next Friday afternoon at her home in Unionville in honor of Miss Clara Knott, one of the leading ladies in Andy Mack's "The Rebel" company now playing at the Boston Museum.

Next Monday evening the Farmers' club go down to Sheldonville and meet with Horatio Metcalf, when general as compared with special farming will be considered and incidentally some mistakes that farmers make will be talked over.

The funeral of Mrs. Frank Woolford was held on Wednesday afternoon, many of the relatives and friends being present to pay their last tribute of love and respect to the deceased. Rev. Dr. Sneath officiated, and interment was made in the Union street cemetery.

As Miss Helen Pendleton was driving down Union street on Tuesday afternoon a wheel came off the carriage, precipitating her to the ground and breaking both bones of her leg. The horse proceeded until he struck an electric light post, where he demolished another wheel.

A large, finely framed picture of Charles J. McKenzie, the gift of Mrs. McKenzie, and also one of James M. Freeman, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. F. Baker, have recently been donated to the Benjamin Franklin Savings bank. Both gentlemen were members of the board of trustees.

The Eastern star had a most enjoyable time on Wednesday evening, the occasion being the official visitation of Grand Matron Vincelette and suite of Leominster. Guests were present from Foxboro, Medway and Milford. Refreshments were served and a most fraternal time was the result.

Next Sunday at the Baptist church will be the observance of the annual "Bible day." Rev. F. B. Sleeper will preach in the forenoon on "Unfelt Truth and Religion." In the evening there will be a Sunday school concert. A very fine and interesting program has been arranged with excellent singing.

Nothing Tastes Good

And eating is simply perfunctory—done because it must be.

This is the common complaint of the dyspeptic.

If eating sparingly, leaving much of the light meal provided, would cure dyspepsia, few would suffer from it long.

The only way to cure dyspepsia, which is difficult digestion, is by giving vigor and tone to the stomach and the whole digestive system. It is therefore cured positively and absolutely by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

The testimonial of Frank Fay, 100 N. street, South Boston, Mass., voluntarily given like thousands of others, should lead to a trial of this peculiar medicine. "My niece," he writes, "was a great sufferer from dyspepsia for six years. She tried many medicines in vain. She had no appetite and was troubled with sour stomach and headaches. After taking two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla she was well."

Hood's Sarsaparilla

promises to cure and keeps the promise. Accept no substitute for it.

EVERY SERVANT IS A SPY.

Diplomatic Secrets Are Impossible in Peking and They May Be Purchased in the Streets.

Every servant in a foreign establishment in Peking is a spy and informer of some degree; espionage is a regular business; and the table talk, visiting list, card-tray and scrap-basket, with full accounts of all comings and goings, sayings and doings of any envoy or foreigner in Peking, are regularly offered for purchase by recognized purveyors of such news. One often catches a glimpse of concentrated attention on the face of the turbaned servants standing behind dining-room chairs that convinces one of this feature of capital life. Diplomatic secrets are fairly impossible in such an atmosphere. Every secret convention and concession is soon emblazoned abroad.

Every word the British minister uttered at the tsung-li-yamen was reported to the Russian legation with almost electric promptness, until the envoy threatened to suspend negotiations and withdraw. Wily concessionaries know each night where their rivals are dining and what they have said; whether any peace of written paper has passed and what has gone on at each legation in Peking and each consulate at Tientsin. Every legation keyhole, crack and chink has its eye and ear at critical times, and by a multiplication in imagination one arrives at an idea of what the palace may be like.

EXORBITANT TIPS.

They Prove a Severe Drain on People of Small Means—System Is Altogether Wrong.

The "tipping" question is one to be carefully taken into consideration before ending a round of visits or an itinerary. From time to time discussions have arisen as to the possibility of doing away with the douceur. Some people have steadfastly set their faces against it so far as their own house servants are concerned, but it is obviously impossible to put an end to the practice altogether, because there are some people who would always persist in buying attention and favors, whatever might be the custom, and others who would "tip" from sheer generosity, but we may well pray that some kind of restraint may be laid upon the very rich, who nowadays are so many in number.

The millionaire is no longer a rara avis, and if the very rich set the example of presenting douceurs of such magnitude that the aggregate sum of their tips while visiting here or staying there is duly paragraphed, how many of those of limited income ever hope to win any respect or command any attention? The result of such absolutely indiscreet generosity is to make it almost impossible for those of limited means to go about at all, says the Philadelphia Ledger. How, for example, can women with purses but sparsely lined accept invitations to stay in the same house with the wives and daughters of men who think nothing of giving $5 where the less endowed can give but 50 cents? The system is altogether wrong; and if hostesses allow their servants to receive money from their guests they should take some means of making it known that it will be taken as a personal favor if a certain sum is not exceeded.

A Humane View.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern which is not afraid to be generous. The proprietors of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles, and have the satisfaction of knowing it has cured thousands of hopeless cases. Asthma, bronchitis, la grippe and all throat, chest and lung diseases are surely cured by it. Call on A. C. Mason, druggist, and get a free trial bottle. Regular size 50c and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed.

ANN'S ONLY LOVER.

BY KEZIAH SHELTON.

"IT'S no use talking any more about it, Ann, the roads ain't broke out and can't be to-night; I know, for I'm surveyor of this deestrict. It's drifted dreadful, for the wind has blowed a harrycane from all pints o' the compass ever sence sun-up; and I just warn't a-going to ask no men to shovel out in this weather, for northing less than a sick cow or a collicky hoss!"

"I s'pose anybody's wife could get along without a doctor, till the sun breaks out a path, eh?"

Even as the worm turns, so Mr. Grant's wife was stung into bitterness, as his words recalled his own mutterings at the trouble of going for a doctor, and his evident belief that he should have received the sympathy that was sometimes accorded to the sufferer!

His only satisfactory listeners were the old maids of the neighborhood, and the widows.

Even they would not always agree with Mr. Grant, but it mattered but little to him whether they did or not. He said what he thought without regard to the feelings of others, and in many respects could not be said to have made a model husband, though he provided well for the physical needs of his family when he could do so without inconvenience to himself or his property.

Mr. Grant was ever slow to reply, so it was several seconds at least before he said: "Yes, generally there's somebody that can do well enough for women folks' sickness, but with a good cow, or hoss, it's another thing, and you can't afford to take no resks, it needs a man that knows his business to deal with stock, they cost money!"

"And wives are to be had for the asking, eh?" exclaimed the wife, exasperated, as painful memories came back to her mind.

"Wives? If a man needs a new wife, he'll find an acre full ready and waiting, he needn't run after them, they'll invite him to tea! There, do let's stop quarreling, you're old enough not to be so pesky aggravatin'! Do stop sniveling, Ann; you make me ashamed of ye, a great grown-up girl like you, to bawl so!"

"But—I—want to go—to that party—so much; I'm dying—to see new faces, and hear new things, and have a good time."

"I know why Ann wants to go, broke in Mrs. Grant. "That young dandy cousin of Kate's, that she saw last summer at the picnic, has upset her mind, an' she wants to see him agin. I ain't in no hurry for her to get a stiddy beau, an' I'm glad enough that the snow's so deep that she can't go to that dance."

"You needn't worry. I ain't likely to see a beau, nor be seen by one, as close as you keep me here at home, so there!"

"You needn't begin to worry, Ann, at your age! Ef the good Lord's made anybody for you, fences nor snowbanks ain't a-going to keep him from finding you. 'Tain't the girls that 'go' the most, an' have the most fellers a-hanging round 'em that marries first, nor the best."

"No," chimed in her father, "'tain't no recommendation to a likely man to have it said that the girl he's all took up with has gone buggy riding, and sot up with half the gay boys in the town."

"It won't never be said about me!" said Ann, bitterly. "Louisann Green told Jemima Brown the other day that she didn't know what ther was agin' me, but she did know that I didn't take with the fellers, like the Ellery girls; that there was a light every Sunday night in their parlor, and they warn't no beauties, either."

"I'm glad for once that Louisann Green told the truth; when you're older the sense will come into your head—for you're no fool, an' you'll know then why it's a compliment to you that folks can say such things about you, and prove it, too!"

"No, Ann, I don't feel worried about your being a old maid, you ain't a-going to get left, onless it's best for you. Things come along about as the Lord orders."

"What's that, down by the bend in the Great road? Looks like an ox team; can't be that the lower deestrict is a-trying to break out the road this time o' day, and the wind a-blowin' like Sam Hill! Somebody must a-got storlled and made 'em start to shovel him thru."

"It's the lower deestrict's men and teams, sure enough! I can tell Benn Boss now, by his blue woollen frock, tied round his waist with a red 'comforter' as usual.

"They can't get no further to-night, for that air nex' bank's piled up too high; guess I'll go an' see who's in that red sleigh a-hind the ox teams. They're trying to help somebody through, sure's my name's John M. Grant."

"Hello, Grant! I guess you'll have to do as the Bible says and take this stranger in! Seems to be a sort of you've got to do it whether or no; for here he is, and here's his hoss and sleigh. He was mighty sot on getting to Rakeville to-night, but it can't be did, for I can't get through here to-night, an' the upper deestrict is wuss nor this; this is the biggest snow we've had this many a year."

Thus it came about that the Grants had a guest for the night, and late into the next day, and Ann Grant enjoyed the unexpected pleasure of seeing a new face, and hearing a new voice.

It chanced—or was it ordered?—that his father had been a boyhood friend of Mr. Grant's, a great recommendation to a man of his type, who held to old notions and was afflicted with that idea that men he knew were probably more worthy than those who came to him as strangers!

Late the next afternoon, the "deestrict teams" from the upper district came down, and he prepared to follow them back, hoping to meet with no further delay.

He made his "dinner call" a day or two later on his return trip to Providence. The sleighing was so unusually fine that he would have been a very strange youth indeed if he had not asked Ann to take a snow-ride of a few miles with him in his cutter.

Other sleighrid[illegible] with susp[illegible]ght! [illegible] ved in [illegible] s the wooing that [illegible] not long a doing.

For when the first warm days of March began to touch the forests with that rosy glow so prophetic of spring that it is easy to forget that snow is still with us, it was common talk that, "Louisann Green's a telling all over town, that Ann Grant's not only got her first beau, but it means business, and she's a-going to be married afore any of the other girls who've all had a dozen beaux to her one."

"Just as we told you, Ann, if there's anything made for a girl, she needn't run after it, 'twill come direct—if you'd a-had your way, you'd missed it by a-going to that party. Good luck won't follow if you run agin its grain too much," said Mr. and Mrs. Grant that proud May morning that was to speed Ann toward her city home.—Boston Globe.

FALLING LEAVES.

When Crickets Sing.

When crickets sing and asters bloom in all the woodland ways,
And smoke hangs low, and far away the fields are lost in haze,
When in the corn there is a voice that whispers: "Summer's gone,"
And here and there a red leaf glows, first lights of autumn's dawn,—
Then, soft as milkweed down, on me
Is laid the hand of mystery.

The woodland wavers at my feet, I hear the tall grass sigh,
A low, sweet music of regret runs through the earth and sky.
The creek is caught in a net of mist whose silvery meshes gleam,
And my heart beats low, and I walk as one walks wandering in a dream,
For, soft as milkweed down, on me
Is laid the hand of mystery.

Ah me! My thoughts are one to-day with this new wind that brings
A note of death, a holier word, a song no mortal sings.
I dance a-spring with the falling leaves, with tears to see them fall,
And the flute of the field lark seems to me a far-off spirit call.
For, soft as milkweed down, on me
Is laid the hand of mystery.
—Ingram Crockett, in Youth's Companion.

They Are Back Again.

We are back again with pencils, we are back again with pens, we are chalking up the ciphers on the board,
But we sigh for velvet meadows and the songs of treetop wrens, and we long to wade the swiftly rushing ford.

We are back again with grammars, we are back again with maps, we are busy tracing China's musty wall,
But our thoughts are in the timbers where the bright woodpecker taps, and the saucy blue-wing jaybirds loudly call.

We are back again with lessons, we are back again with slates, we are pouring over half a dozen books;
But we wish that we were fishing with the little fat grub baits in the shadow of the meadow minnow brooks.

We are back again with studies, we are back again with rules, and the multiplication tables we now hear;
But we'll dream of some Utopia where there aren't any schools, and vacation is a dozen months a year.
—Chicago Daily News.

Behind the Outer Man.

You can't make a soldier with only gold braid,
And nobody thinks you can;
Ere the fine-looking suit by the tailor is made
There's much to be done to the man.
You can't make a surgeon with knives and all that,
You can't make a judge with just a silk hat,
You can't make a preacher with robe or cravat,
And nobody thinks you can.

You can't make a monarch with only a throne,
And nobody thinks you can;
Ere the actor may sway in a realm of his own
There's much to be done to the man.
You can't make a gentleman out of an ass,
Or a boor who is bravest in front of his glass,
By filling his pockets with pelf—but alas!
There are people who think you can!
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Times-Herald.

Autumn Vespers.

All gray and quiet ends the heavy day,
In listless languor hangs the smoky air;
Through leafless branches gleams a sullen glare
Flung from the lowering sun—a parting ray.
Worn by the hours of hurry and delay,
Of feverish toil, and soul-tormenting care,
Lord, in this breathless twilight hour, I bear
My weary, aching heart to Thee, and pray.

Lord, show me strength for my infirmity;
In midst of change, let me the changeless know
That toward the Infinite my soul may grow,
And here, in time, hold fast eternity.
Open my eyes the invisible to see—
By faith to look beyond the false and low.
Letting Thy clear light on my darkness glow,
Illume my soul with Thy divinity.
—L. Marion Lockhart, in N. Y. Observer.

Intuition.

"How does it know—this tiny hidden thing—
Within its wilderness of tangled grass,
The hour when summer's languid footsteps pass,
And southward-flying birds are on the wing,
While earth is dumb with August's silencing?
How does it know the time for purplish haze,
Or guess the wondrous transformation scene,
Which sets the field and forest all ablaze?
Yet, in shrill notes, from drowsy ways of green,
Breaking the spell that passing summer sways,
The cricket first proclaims the autumn days.
—Henry Cleveland Wood, in Ainslee's Magazine.

From the Mystery of the Mist.

The Mystery of the mist is calling me
Across the marshes' silvery solitudes,
By phantom inlets and gray bordering woods
To surging silence of a hidden sea.

Swathed in a twilight haze of amethyst,
Beyond the salty sedges lies the verge
Of immemorial oceans' endless surge,
Entranced by the still Mystery of the mist. . . .

If I might disenchant the spellbound space,
To see beyond the veil that may not move
For mortals; if my soul and sense could prove
The beauty of her mist-enfolded face;

Perchance her loving penalty would be
To lay a darkness on my earthly sight,
And lead me forth to lands of other light
Far out beyond these marshes by the sea.
—Katharine Coolidge, in Atlantic.

Miracles.

They say the days of miracles are past,
But I have witnessed miracles to-day;
The world was drear, the sky was overcast,
And all the sweets of life had oozed away,
When lo! she smiled, and, smiling, looked at me—
The birds broke forth in chorus cheerily,
The vines put forth new blossoms and were gay!

I heard men utter words of discontent,
Their faces bore the marks of woes and cares;
Snares tripped my aching feet where'er I went
And gloom was over all mankind's affairs,
When lo! she spoke, and all the world was bright—
I heard glad people sing in pure delight,
And all the ways were free from hidden snares!
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Times-Herald.

THINK IT OVER. There's a reason for those pains in your back and sides, for those dull, dragging aches, that listless, "keep-away-from-me" feeling. The kidneys are to blame. They get sick, can't do their work and the whole system feels the effect, just as a whole town feels the effect of a blockaded sewerage system.

Doan's Kidney Pills

Set matters right quickly and easily. They never fail, even in the most advanced stages of kidney disease.

Mrs. C. V. Pitts, of 21 Broad street, New London, Conn., whose husband conducts a grocery store says:

"Previous to using Doan's Kidney Pills in the winter of 1896 I was greatly inconvenienced by pain and lameness across the small of my back. The treatment cured that particular attack, and I made the facts known to the people of New London through our daily papers. It is over three years since my original statement was given to the public and all I can add to it is that during the time specified I have found that a dose or two of Doan's Kidney Pills prevent recurrences."

Spread Like Wildfire.

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare, a leading druggist, of Belleville, O., writes: "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years. You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickly, rundown man or woman. Price 50 cents. Sold by A. C. Mason, druggist.

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2 65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit. The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save. If your druggist can't supply you, it will be fowarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

Easily Arranged.

"Mr. Jibbs, when will be the best time for me to speak about raising my salary?"

"Oh, one time is as good as another. You won't get any raise."—Chicago Record.

What Would You Give

To be cured of catarrh? If you or your friends have this disease, you know how disagreeable it is. Its symptoms are inflamed eyes, throbbing temples, ringing noises in the ears, headaches, capricious appetite and constant discharge of mucus. Fortunately its cure is not a question of what you will give, but what you will take. If you will take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great constitutional remedy, which thoroughly purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, you may expect to be completely and permanently cured. The good blood which Hood's Sarsaparilla makes, reaching the delicate passages of the mucous membrane, soothes and rebuilds the tissues and ultimately cures all symptoms of catarrh.

SUPERIOR COURT.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court, next to be holden at Dedham within and for the County of Norfolk on the first Monday of December next.

Respectfully represents Achsah Camp of Bellingham, in said county, that she was lawfully married to Fred Camp, now of parts unknown, at Medway on the twelfth day of December, A. D. 1879, and thereafterwards your libellant and the said Fred Camp lived together as husband and wife in this Commonwealth, to wit., at Medway in said county, that your libellant has always been faithful to her marriage vows and obligations, but the said Fred Camp being wholly regardless of the same at Medway aforesaid on or about the first day of August, 1889, utterly deserted your libellant and has continued such desertion to the date of this libel.

Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Fred Camp.

Dated the sixteenth day of October, A. D. 1900.

ACHSAH CAMP.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

NORFOLK, SS.

SUPERIOR COURT.

On the foregoing libel it is ordered that the libelant give notice to the said Fred Camp, the libellee, to appear before the Justices of this Court, to be holden at Dedham within and for said county, on the first Monday of December next, by causing an attested copy of said libel, and of this order thereon, to be published once in a week for three successive weeks in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper printed at Franklin, in the county of Norfolk, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before the said first Monday of December next, and further, by sending through the mail, as soon as may be, by a registered letter addressed to the last known residence of the said Fred Camp an attested copy of said libel and of this order thereon, that the said Fred Camp may then and there show cause why the prayer of said libel should not be granted.

By the Court,
LOUIS A. COOK, Clerk.

Mortgagee's Sale.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Daniel Kempton to the Milford Savings Bank, dated October 17, 1877, and recorded with Norfolk deeds, book 434, page 73, and for a breach of the condition thereof, will be sold at public auction upon the premises, on at three o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely "A certain tract or parcel of land situated in Bellingham in our county of Norfolk, containing about fifty acres of land bounded and described as follows, viz. Beginning at the southeast corner of the premises on the Scott hill road leading from said Bellingham to Woonsocket, at corner of land of Israel B. Salisbury, thence running westerly by land of the heirs of Lebbeus Gaskill and Nahum Cook to land conveyed by the grantor to Otis D. and Warren J. Ballou, thence northerly by said last-named land to land of Nahum Cook; thence easterly by land of Nahum Cook and Mrs. Anson Salisbury to the said road, thence southerly by and with said road to the point of departure; being all the land described in a deed from Elias Kempton and others, dated May 22, 1872, recorded in said registry, book 410, page 119, except one tract sold to Otis D. and Warren J. Ballou."

SATURDAY, THE SEVENTEENTH DAY OF NOVEMBER, 1900,

Terms made known at time of sale or upon application to Jesse A. Taft, Counsellor at Law, Milford, Mass.

PROBATE COURT.

To the heirs-at-law, next-of-kin and all other persons interested in the estate of William Mann, late of Franklin, in said county, deceased.

Whereas, two certain instruments purporting to be the last will and testament, and one codicil, of said deceased has been presented to said court for probate by Willard Everett of Lowell, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to him, the executor therein named, without giving a surety on his official bond.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Dedham, in said county of Norfolk, on the fifth day of December, A. D. 1900, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper published in Franklin, the last publication to be one day at least before said court, and by mailing, postpaid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate seven days at least before said court.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

NORFOLK, SS.

To the Honorable the Board of County Commissioners of the County of Norfolk:

Respectfully represent your petitioners being five and more inhabitants of the town of Wrentham, in said county of Norfolk, that common convenience and necessity require that that part of East street, in said Wrentham, which begins at the line separating the towns of Wrentham and Foxborough and runs westerly to a point near the almshouse in said Wrentham, which point is the terminus of the former relocation of the westerly part of said East street as made by the county commissioners of said county of Norfolk, be located anew, the boundary lines thereof established and alterations made in its course and width.

Wherefore your petitioners pray that you will, after giving notice and proceeding in the manner prescribed in laying out highways, order and decree that that part of East street above described be located anew, the boundary thereof be established, that such alterations in its course and width as your Board deems proper be made, and that such further proceedings may be had in the premises as the statute requires.

Dated this eighteenth day of September, A. D. 1900.

A mission at St. Mary's church will commence next Sunday and continue for two weeks. The first week will be devoted to women and the second to men.

At the Epworth league prayer meeting next Friday evening the pastor, Rev. S. A. Cook, will take charge and speak on "The Epworth League Pledge. Everyone is invited.

A few of the farmers believe in the value of leaves for compost enough to gather loads of them in the village and cart them to the barn cellars, thereby relieving the villagers of a nuisance.

The rummage sale of St. John's Guild closed last Saturday evening after a successful run of two weeks. A number of articles are left, however, and will be offered for sale at extremely cheap rates in a few days.

The parishioners of St. Mary's have nearly completed all arrangements for the coffee party to be held at the Opera house next Friday evening. Many tickets have been sold and the affair is already an assured success.

The Epworth league will hold a social at the residence of Joseph T. Hutchinson, Jr., on Arlington street, tomorrow evening, at 8 o'clock. The meeting will be in charge of the social committee, Miss Lottie Waterman, chairman.

The Masonic fraternity go to Milford on Wednesday evening to enjoy a social evening with brethren there The trip to Milford will be made in the regular trolley car which leaves here at 6.45. The party will return in a special car.

"Prince Pro Tem" will be at the Opera house Nov. 23 This is the same big company that is playing in all large cities. The cast includes fine singers, a witty dialogue, a firstclass orchestra, and gives an entertainment worthy of a large audience.

As E. P. Chapman was moving a carboy of acid the other day the carboy broke in the middle, some of the contents streaming out upon him and his clothes. A hurried bath soon made him none the worse for his accident, though it might have been much more serious.

We noted in Friday's issue that there was to be an entertainment at Dean academy that evening in the interest of the athletic association. We made a slight mistake in the date. It should have been next Friday evening, when all who go will be amply repaid by the treat provided.

The work of grading the cemetery grounds is being carried on and will probably continue until cold weather puts a stop to operations. The lower or western end of the grounds is at present where the workmen are engaged, and the parts already seeded present a much improved appearance.

At the meeting of the selectmen last Friday evening Roswell K. Stevens was appointed chief of the fire department, vice J. B. McKinnon, retired. Complaints had been received by the board that the Sunday law was being violated, and the police officers were instructed to see that the law was enforced.

There will be a special meeting of the Young Men's Christian association this evening, at 7.30 o'clock, at the new rooms of the association in the Morse building opposite the Opera house. Every member should be present. The executive committee will meet at 7 o'clock to arrange for furnishing rooms at once.

Railroad train employes must be thoroughly disgusted with the time-worn custom of wedding parties which leads them to shower the departing pair with rice. On evening trains, which are usually taken by bridal couples, the trainmen see this ceremony gone through with, and it leaves depot platforms and cars literally littered with rice.

An improvement in the Wrentham and Plainville street railway service could be made by changing the time of starting at the ends of the route, instead of consuming the time in slow runs. The patrons of the road would be much better pleased to have the time at the ends of the run than to use it in unnecessary slowness in travel after making a start.

The Republican town committee at its meeting Saturday evening decided that as there was no regular campaign organization nor any marching uniformed body to make a parade, it was impracticable to have the proposed jollification. The members felt no other celebration than a parade would be adequate and so a formal observance was given up by the committee.

Eleven members of the Franklin Social club participated in a cross country run on Sunday afternoon. The route was from the club room in Central square to Diamond Hill, and from thence to the Monument House in Woonsocket. The run was made in two hours and fifteen minutes. First prize was taken by Philip Foran, second by Patrick Neelon and third by Fred Holbrook.

Business men who have done little advertising would be surprised if they could know how large a proportion of newspaper readers are really interested in "ads." People like to learn facts about almost any business, and do not have to be enticed into reading an advertisement that tells something. How to reach the buyers in a community is no problem to experienced advertisers; the reputable newspaper is their efficient medium.

As some of our election figures were compiled shortly after election, the revised figures gave some of the candidates a larger number of votes. This was the case in regard to Congressman elect Powers, who received 21,378, with Baker 10,663 and Storey 2,878. This gave Mr. Powers a plurality of 10,715, which was the second largest plurality given any of the congressional candidates, and is especially gratifying to Mr. Powers and his friends. We are pleased to make this note in the interest of correctness.

The Milford, Attleboro & Woonsocket Street Railway company has presented a petition to the railroad commissioners for authority to increase its capital stock by the amount of $50,000, and to issue bonds for a like amount for the purpose of building extensions of the road, purchasing equipment, constructing power stations and acquiring real estate and other property. The company also petitions for approval of its acquisition of a pleasure resort. The commissioners will give a hearing on the petition at their office in Boston next Monday morning.

Rev. and Mrs. G. W. Miner will be the guests of John B. Anthony and Misses Anthony of 72 Manning street, Providence, during the sessions of the Church congress to be held in that city from Tuesday of this week until Friday night.

A farmer is moved to remark that a short crop is best for the farmer's pocketbook, because, while he has comparatively little to sell, that little nets him more money than the large product at low prices. In fruits this year this has been the case, and all kinds have been abundant and cheap. Apples are offered from $1 50 to $2 a barrel, and pears have been cheap all the fall. It is probable that the production of cider will be large this fall.

It is getting to be the custom for passengers using mileage books to ask conductors how many miles they detach. To obviate this a new mileage book has made its appearance on the Boston and Maine. The feature of the new book is the fact that upon the back cover there are numbers, counting by twenties, to the amount of mileage in the book. The orders are that when a conductor takes a fare be shall punch out a corresponding number from the back. Thus if a passenger goes twenty miles he will punch out twenty, etc. The object of this is that the passenger may readily see the number of miles that have been taken by the conductor.

Fred Clark of Medway was in town yesterday visiting friends, and incidentally relating his experiences in the Philippines. He has just returned from the service of Uncle Sam, broken in health. He does not appear to be very enthusiastic over the situation there, and thinks it will take some time to complete the subjugation of the natives, and guerrilla warfare may continue a long time. It is a hard place for an American, so unused to the climate and conditions, but if a soldier is careful he may be able to escape many of the dangers which menace the health of the foreigner. He doesn't care for any more foreign service.

Any cause which militates against the country press is to be deplored. It has a place and a mission which cannot be supplied by any other agency, and we hold that it is the bounden duty of every community to patronize and sustain the country newspapers. Outside the large cities and railroad towns the people have few opportunities for reading the dailies, and to them the weekly or semi weekly published in their own town ought to be a necessity, and they ought to help the editors and publishers to get out such a sheet as would be both a help and credit to the community and a welcome visitor to the citizens. It is the duty of every citizen to take his home paper and pay for it.—Fourth Estate.

The Monday evening lecture before the Franklin teachers was given this week by the Rev. F. B. Sleeper on "The Mayflower Log, or The Contemporary History of the Pilgrims," written by Gov. Wm. Bradford. Mr. Sleeper had obtained from the State house a fac simile of the original work, and this was eagerly examined at the close of the address. It is an interesting fact that as a result of Senator Hoar's visit to Fulham palace, where the original volume was kept, and his suggestion to the bishop of London that America was its most appropriate abiding place, this precious document was brought across the Atlantic by Ambassador Bayard and presented three years ago to the commonwealth of Massachusetts.

There are young men in every town who seem to consider themselves of superior importance when they pass along the streets puffing a cigar or a cigarette and using language unfit for ordinary conversation. Young ladies who claim respectability are often seen in company with such fellows, and do not seem to feel that they are lowering themselves in public estimation by keeping such company. Good habits should be one criterion for young ladies to consider among their main acquaintances. When a young man cannot be in public without habitually punctuating his sentences with profanity and vulgarity he ought to go away into some secluded locality and stay there until he can learn to be decent in word and act.—Exchange.

The annual "Bible Day" of the Baptist denomination was well observed last Sunday by the Baptist church in this village. In the forenoon Rev. F. B. Sleeper gave an impressive discourse on the danger of ignoring the Bible as God's Word, or admiring the scriptures rather than living according to their truth, of forcing contrary human opinion into divine revelation, and of restlessly looking for some higher philosophy to supersede the Bible. In the evening there was a large attendance at the Sunday school concert. The printed program was furnished for the occasion by the American Baptist Publication society. There was excellent singing, fine recitations, responsive readings and a short address by the pastor. A collection of a little more than $10.00 was taken for the work of the Publication society in sending out Bible and Christian literature.

Ordered to Close.

At the last meeting of the selectmen an order was promulgated authorizing the clerk to notify a number of the places doing business in town that the Sunday law must be obeyed and the stores must be closed. This order included principally the confectionery and fruit stores, not affecting the drug stores, stationery stores or restaurants.

We have no desire to interfere with the legitimate business of any merchant in town, but when it becomes the general rule for stores to keep open all day Sunday with the same freedom as upon any other day the question arises, where shall the line be drawn? All of the grocery stores keep candy and cigars. Why not permit them to keep open, as well as confectionery and stationery stores? No doubt the state law permits the sale of medicines and papers and tobacco, but the law is quite likely to be abused, and goods of every name and nature come to be sold regardless of time or place. It is difficult to draw the line, but it is safe to say the accommodation to the public in the matter of Sunday selling is made subservient to mere money getting. If unrestricted selling is permitted one class of merchants, why not others? If the proprietors of prohibited establishments and others would but look at the matter fairly they would see that the less stores open in Franklin upon the Sabbath day the better it will be for the good name of the town and incidentally for the proprietors themselves.

Secured at Last.

For more than six weeks the young men, and some of the older ones, have been in quest of rooms suitable for the Young Men's Christian association, which has been recently formed here; but though a number of locations were considered there seemed to be some drawback that prevented their being just the thing. As time went on some of the members began to fear that the winter would get around before the association would find a home, but within the last few days things have taken a change, and through the persistent efforts of John E. Barber, chairman of the special room committee, a most desirable suite of rooms has been obtained in the Morse building, and at the present time is rapidly being put in readiness for the association. The suite consists of a reception and social room, reading room and gymnasium, and it is hoped a class room for educational work will be added in the near future.

The rooms are to be put in the best condition and furnished in an attractive and homelike manner, thus providing a most desirable place for the young men of our town. At the present time the membership numbers over eighty and additions are being made daily. The finance committee has already bonafide pledges for nearly $400, and they are very hard at work trying to, at least, double this amount, as it is the intention of those in charge to have the association's home one that any young man may well be proud of. If you have not already contributed, be sure to do so, as it is an opportunity to help on a good work and encourage the young men. It is expected the rooms will be fully equipped and opened before the end of the month.

Let the Good Work Go On.

In the district court on Saturday Nathan A. Daniels retracted his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty to the charge of keeping intoxicating liquors with intent to sell. He was fined $50. This is the third of the four persons raided recently by Deputy Sheriff Fitzpatrick to plead guilty and pay the fines imposed Officer Fitzpatrick feels confident of eventually convicting McParland, whose case comes up Saturday. Not a little credit is due this officer not only for the successful raids, but also to the fact that the evidence was so strong against these parties by reason of his skillful management that the defendants did not even contest and pleaded guilty and paid. Many are not aware of the peculiar feature of the law, which provides that if convictions are found and fines paid in the district court the fines are paid over to the town, but if an appeal is taken to the supreme court at Dedham the fines thus imposed go to the county and not to the town.

The old hearse is for sale. It rests in a building in the Union street cemetery, and the building is wanted for other purposes. It was bought by the town about 40 years ago and for many years has been superseded by a more modern and more fashionable carriage. An old citizen recalls the first time it was used for a funeral, one of the wheel boxes became heated, the wheel refused to turn and extra horse power was required to drag the vehicle to the burial ground It did duty many years after that, the the only one in town, and in it many of Franklin's respected citizens took their last earthly journey.

A new lot of potted plants, ferns, rubber plants, palms, etc.; cut flowers, roses in large or small quantities; funeral designs well made up. Violets and 100 chrysanthemums. Slade's greenhouse.

Looking Backward.

When Henry Bailey of the state board of education gave a talk in the High school building recently he illustrated his subject by setting down on the blackboard twenty five numbers, commencing with one and counting up to twenty five. He set down opposite each number one article of common use, not luxuries, but necessaries. So common, and seemingly necessary were these articles, so unreal seemed any life without them, that it was almost impossible to believe that they had all been invented within the memory of some who were listening to the speaker's voice. We remember yet with what delight our childish minds took in the wonders of the Arabian Nights, but the real things that have grown up before our eyes, and become part of our civilization, puts them completely in the backgrond. Sitting in the bright electric glare of these closing days of the nineteenth century, and looking backward on all that was won for us by the light of the tallow dips of its early years, we may form some estimate of what we owe to the opening years of the twentieth. For the world's work is all of one piece, and we should be unworthy legatees of all the past did we not ask ourselves "What must we do?" The work of those who preceded us is perfected in us.

Great as has been the advance along material lines, along social and political lines, the development of religious thought has kept even pace with them all. Reforms work from the inside out, never from the outside in. Within the church have arisen men, pure and spiritual in their lives, who, with prophetic vision, have caught glimpses of something above and beyond the thought of their time, and possessing the reformer's spirit, as well as this prophetic instinct, they have not only risen themselves to a broader air, a clearer view, but they have been able to mould and influence the religious thought of the age along the lines of their own development.

To consider the work of these men, and its influence upon the development of the religious thought of the nineteenth century is instructive and inspiring. The possibility of doing this in the company of one whose patient research, whose historical knowledge, makes him a reliable guide is within our reach. A course of talks dealing with this subject solely from a historical standpoint, with no partisan or sectarian end in view, is being given at the vesper services of the Universalist church, by the pastor. All who heard the talk on the great German theologian and philosopher, Schleiermacher, must have felt it a privilege to study the character of this great Moravian preacher in the company of one who had evidently imbibed so much of the life and spirit of his subject.

To study the progress of any great reform is to become imbued with the spirit of that reform. Do we ever stop to think how much inspiration would have been lost to the world had the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, that Westminster abbey of the New Testament, never been written? Yet "these all died in faith, not having received the promises, God having provided some better thing for us that they without us should not be made perfect." That is, their work needed the co-operation of other generations to make it perfect. So the work of the great reformers of any age is perfected in their successors. Let us attend these lectures and learn what has been done for us that we may take up the work and make it perfect.

"Ben Hur," which opens at the new Colonial theatre in Boston the second week in December, ran for twenty-four weeks in New York last season. The receipts aggregated nearly half a million dollars, and fully 475,000 people witnessed it. September 3d last it began a five weeks' engagement in New York. During that time over $75,000 were added to its New York receipts. Oct. 8 "Ben Hur" began an engagement in Philadelphia, where it is drawing the largest attendance and receipts ever known in that city.

Gentlemen:—I must say in regard to GRAIN-O that there is nothing better or healthier. We have used it for years. My brother was a great coffee drinker. He was taken sick and the doctor said coffee was the cause of it and told us to use GRAIN O. We got a package but did not like it at first, but now would not be without it. My brother has been well ever since we started to use it.

Advertising is business news. It tells the things which are of great daily importance. It is of more account to the frugal housewife to know where to get certain necessary commodities at a less price than usual than to know of the troubles in Siam and Alaska.

Sleepy People Make Sleepy Towns.

The editor of the East Hartford Enterprise, in criticising his own town in certain matters, utters some expressions which might fit some other places. He says in substance:

"Talk baby show and the whole town will turn out and the women folks will be delighted; talk baseball and all business men are interested; talk horse and immediately the alleged business men are up to their eyes in it; but talk sense and that which stands for the town's natural interests and growth and all our business men have engagements elsewhere. The town is here and the people are sleeping in it, and that is about all. Once in a while they open their eyes long enough to kick and then fall back upon the pillow and snooze again.

"Prince Pro Tem."

On Friday, Nov. 23, at the Morse opera house, the attraction will be the exceedingly popular musical fantasie, "Prince Pro Tem," with its wealth of beautiful scenery, its bevy of pretty girls, its opulence of costly raiment, its unctious comedy and other features. Those who evince a partiality for comedy of a refined order, for tuneful, prettily-conceived music and delightful scenes, find a surfeit of all these features in this clever opera. It is to be given here but one night so be sure and engage your seats in advance.

Nothing has been heard from the petition for a rural mail delivery route in this section, but it is supposed the postal authorities will consider the matter in due time. Some inquiries have been made, which might indicate that the subject is under investigation. The signatures for the petition were easily obtained, the people living on the proposed route being generally ready to accept such a convenience. But as large bodies, and especially governmental bodies, move slowly, some time will probably go by before anything definite is known.

The Companion for the Rest of 1900.

Every issue of the Youth's Companion for the nine weeks of November and December will be enlarged and the holiday numbers will be double the usual size, with richly decorated covers. From now until the end of the year the Companion will be crowded with articles and stories sufficiently varied to please every taste in both old and young—men and women, boys and girls.

Among the contributions announced for early issues are "How I Acted the Missionary," by Sir Henry Stanley; "With the Pretoria Guard," by Rider Haggard; "A Historic Game of Football," by Walter Camp; "Horse Sense," by Frank R. Stockton; "Pulpit Eloquence, by Dean Farrar; "Days of Long Ago," by Ian Maclaren; and "A Baritone Among Famous People," by Victor Maurel; in addition to which there will be serial and short stories by Margaret Deland, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward, Bliss Perry, Charles W. Chestnutt and other writers of delightful fiction.

Those who subscribe now for 1901 will receive the Companion for the remaining weeks of 1900 free from the time of subscription, in addition to the "Puritan Girl" calendar for 1901, lithographed in twelve colors from exquisite designs painted expressly for the Companion.

Illustrated announcement of the volume for 1901 will be sent free to any address, with sample copies of the paper. The Youths' Companion, Boston, Mass.

An Old and Large Carpet House.

An idea of the magnitude of the business of the John H. Pray & Sons company may be gathered from a list of some of the contracts taken this fall, among them being the furnishing of the new Colonial theatre, the Hollis Street Theatre, the Berkeley Hotel, the Rhode Island state house, Providence, and the new Hotel Lenox, corner of Exeter and Boylston streets, Boston. The last named contract was for about $100,000, and the entire furnishing of carpets, upholstery and furniture has been undertaken by Messrs. Pray & Co. The company has special facilities for handling large contracts, as it always carries an extensive stock of the most desirable goods, which are at all times available for prompt delivery.

Their Work Is Injurious.

It is a mistake to defy a [illegible] need. Mental work performed [illegible] because [illegible] use is not a man's best, because [illegible] concentration is imperfect while [illegible] of the body is in revolt [illegible] physical authority. It would pay [illegible] in the quality of his work and the facility with which he does it to get up and take a short walk to relieve muscular irritability and insistence. The same thing is true of other bodily necessities. Refused satisfaction, they continue to intrude upon consciousness with more or less acuteness, disturbing the power of concentration and causing friction. And though habitual neglect finally [illegible] consciousness, there is always a dim sense of wrong. At length instinct and normal function become so perverted by neglect and caprice that they no longer suffice to keep the body in health and the brain must stop other work to devise artificial means and expedients to take the place of natural [illegible]. Then we have a state of [illegible]ism and the work of regeneration and return to health [illegible] painful comparatively few regain the straight and narrow path of compliance with nature's [illegible]. If people respected the body and obeyed its laws and knew the inevitable penalties which follow disobedience chronic disease would be less common. Habit becomes law to the body to a very great extent and bad habits pervert the action of beneficial physical laws. It is impossible to keep the organs tuned up to normal standards of function if we persistently ignore their promptings and turn our backs on their necessities. The man or woman who would have healthy regular, painless organs must earn their gratitude by recognizing their just claims and conceding them fair treatment. Delicate appetites, desires and instincts can be made more robust and hardier by intelligent cultivation.

A returned traveler from Porto Rico notes that the shopkeepers of San Juan are taking kindly to English. A placard in a leading cafe notifies patrons that they may obtain "soda wat" and "shaked milk;" a grocer advertises that he has "a constant stock of groceries" and makes a "great especialty of French and Spanish preserves," and a real estate broker has an "ause to let." Many stores, hotels and casinos have taken names connected with the American occupation of the island, such as "Twenty-fifth of July," "Uncle Sam's House," etc.

The qualifications of some men who hold public office in Bucks county, Pa., are not considered, judging from several amusing returns made. Among the causes of death, for example, reported to the clerk of the orphans' court were "hart parlias," "paraliya," "hart truble," "newmonia," "quinzie," "hooping cough" and "tumer." Another person was reported as having died of "live cupiat," which was translated into meaning "liver complaint." Another man is reported to have died of "fusion of the brain."

There is such a thing as too much realism. They are trying to have a "David Harum day" at Tully Lake Park, near Syracuse, where the famous "boss trade" scene is to be read by a professional impersonator. But the farmers in that region who were buncoed by the real David, says the Troy (N. Y.) Times, and who have never seen the humor nor the merit in the book, are vigorously protesting, and the chances are the day will not be held.

The pictures are most artistic in the style of Chinese landscape gardening, and already between 9,000,000 and 10,000,000 stamps have been used.—Good Literature.

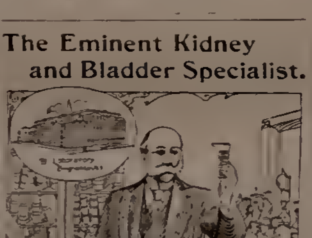
The Eminent Kidney and Bladder Specialist.



The Discoverer of Swamp-Root at Work in His Laboratory.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell. Then the richness of the blood—the albumen—leaks out and the sufferer has Bright's Disease, the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root the new discovery is the true specific for kidney, bladder and urinary troubles. It has cured thousands of apparently hopeless cases, after all other efforts have failed. At druggists in fifty-cent and dollar sizes. A sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling about Swamp-Root and its wonderful cures. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. and mention this paper.

A SPLENDID EXHIBIT TO BE MADE AT BUFFALO'S GREAT EXPOSITION.

Opportunities Will Be Offered For the Study of Object Lessons In Many Important Arts and Sciences.

Thousands of men, representing every degree of skill, are fast bringing into existence the great Pan-American Exposition, which shall next year turn the footsteps of half the nation toward Buffalo. Never was an Exposition projected amid such promising and favorable surroundings and conditions. With the best known natural wonder of the world the stupendous and majestic falls of Niagara—within half an hour's ride of the Exposition grounds and the greatest electric power plants in the world using the power of this famous cataracts, truly magnets of irresistible force, to help draw the crowds from all directions, Buffalo looks to an unparalleled success in next year's enterprise.

In six important particulars the Pan-American Exposition will outrival all former undertakings of this description. These are in the electrical effects, in the hydraulic and fountain effects, in horticultural and floral decorations, in the variety and splendor of its statuary, in color decorations and in the court settings. The highest skill has been employed in developing these features, and no pains will be spared to bring them to a degree of perfection never before achieved.

A large number of the most noted sculptors of America are engaged upon the models for the magnificent decorative display of original sculpture. About 125 groups of statuary will be employed in the ornamentation of buildings and grounds, aside from numberless small sculptures, such as beads, floral pieces, medallions, arabesques and work in relief upon all buildings and architectural works.

Among the 20 or more great buildings which will shelter the multitude of exhibits to be brought together for the entertainment and education of the public next year the Agriculture building ranks among the largest. This is situated on the north side of the Mall, opposite the Manufactures building and east of the huge Electric Tower, which is to be the centerpiece of electric illumination.

The Agriculture building is 500 feet long by 150 wide. It is very ornamental in its exterior aspect, having broad, high entrances richly adorned with appropriate plastic work. The southern facade is characterized by an open loggia which forms an attractive resting place or promenade from which the crowds upon the Mall may be observed. The roof of red tile, with broad overhanging eaves, will harmonize with the softer tints of the exterior walls. The broad cornice is to be particularly rich in its decorative detail.

The exhibit in the Agriculture building will embrace every possible phase of agricultural work, showing the advantages of different processes and methods of work and the products of the garden and field in their great variety, produced under all sorts of conditions.

The superintendent of this division is Mr. Frank A. Converse of Woodville, N. Y., a stock grower and farmer of thorough experience in Exposition work, who has been prominent in farmers' institute work on behalf of the New York state department of agriculture. Mr. Converse is receiving the cooperation of many prominent associations and individuals, and his correspondence at this early date indicates a most comprehensive exhibit of scientific farming in all its branches.

Under the classification of agricultural systems will be shown methods of fertilization, including the use of cover crops, commercial fertilizers, crop rotation, systems of soiling, with bulletins, statistics, addresses and exhibitions of crops raised by the use of particular fertilizers.

Under the classification of farm management and processes the different systems will be illustrated with the view of assisting farmers to determine whether it is best to keep a variety of stock or a particular breed and, if but one kind, which shall be favored.

The question of farm help and the different specialties in the way of fruit, grain and truck farming will be treated exhaustively. The experience of a large number of farmers under many conditions of the soil, climate, etc., will be brought together for the information of all who wish to learn.

Under the classification of agricultural statistics will be presented reports from different states and provinces issued by the departments of agriculture, experimental stations, various horticultural, live stock and dairying associations, showing the aggregate of crops and products of all kinds.

Under the head of cereals will be exhibits from different states and localities, wheat, rye, oats, barley, corn, buckwheat and rice. The exhibits will be arranged to prove which crop is best fitted for each state or locality. These exhibits will show the many varieties of cereals in their highest stage of development.

Apple Growers Much Interested.

Missouri apples are to have a prominent place at the Pan-American Exposition. Apple growers in many states are making plans to be well represented. By means of cold storage arrangements it is hoped to have a continuous and complete display of fruits throughout the Exposition season.

Preparing the Kansas Exhibit.

Kansas is preparing a grand display of fruits and other products for the Pan-American Exposition. Kansas is popularly looked upon only as a great corn state, but her possibilities in all round farming, stock raising and fruit and vegetable growing are to be shown by means of splendid object lessons in her exhibits at Buffalo next year.

Eruptions

Dry, moist, scaly tetter, all forms of eczema or salt rheum, pimples and other cutaneous eruptions proceed from humors, either inherited, or acquired through defective digestion and assimilation.

To treat these eruptions with drying medicines is dangerous.

The thing to do is to help the system discharge the humors, and to strengthen the digestive and assimilative functions against their return.

Hood's Sarsaparilla can be confidently relied upon to do that, according to thousands of voluntary testimonials.

It effects radical and permanent cures.

"I was troubled with [illegible] for some time, but have had no return of the disease since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla." J. G. HINES, Franks, Ills.

"I was troubled with pimples on my face and back and chafed skin on my body. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me of both troubles." MISS ALVINA WOLTER, Box 212, Algona, Wis.

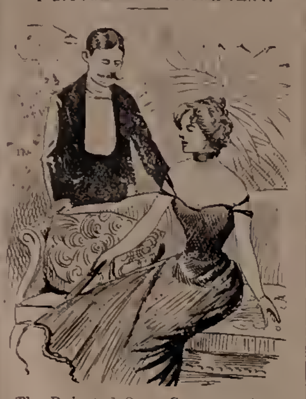
A LITTLE ENCOURAGEMENT.



The Rejected One—Can you give me no hope? At some future time, perhaps—

She—Well, come to me again in ten years, and if I should be still unmarried I'll—I'll think of it.—Judy.

Reformer.

"You say that you are a reformer?"

"Yes."

"But you don't keep people from working all day and sleeping all night talking about the world going wrong and inventing social experiments."

"No. That's the habit I'm trying to reform."—Washington Star.

No Chance to Escape.

Newlywed—What is the right thing to do when your wife asks you for money and you haven't got it?

Oletimer—Oh! there is no right thing to do under those circumstances! Anything you do will be wrong!—Puck.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

Mr. H. H. Black, the well-known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan Co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have the attacks been that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croupy symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug, and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

A BEER WATER BABY.

BY ELLA JEFFERISS.

WE HAD had our bath and were lounging round the tent watching the little Devonshire natives bathing, swimming far out to sea, diving off the smacks, and coming in at intervals to lie drying in the sun until they were burnt that beautiful brown that distinguished the Beer boys from the London visitors. Most of the small boys were in a state of absolute nudity. The girls, however, threw a sop to Mrs. Grundy by wearing bathing garments of some description—as a rule a cast off frock or petticoat which hung on to some part of the body, but as a rule came off in the water and had to be adjusted periodically. A nymph of five or six, with brown shapely limbs and bleached wet hair in a tangle over the blue eyes and freckled face, came stumbling barefoot over the pebbles toward us. She was clad in a shred of what courtesy would be called a bathing towel and was dragging after her a wet bathing dress. She stopped unabashed in front of my brothers and myself, demanding:

"Does you know where my clo'es is?"

"No; where did you leave them?"

She waved comprehensively round the extensive sea-scape, and sat down on the pebbles in a friendly manner.

"Suppose you wrap yourself in this bathing cloak," we said, rolling her in a big white cloak, which pleased her immensely.

"Now what clothes are there?"

"My fraak, shimmy, petticut and hoouts!" she said, decisively.

When I had come back from a search behind the rocks with the said "fraak, shimmy, petticut and hoouts," I found her vigorously rubbing her yellow mop with the wet old dishcloth she used for a towel, and interrogating my brothers in a businesslike way.

"Where be your house to?" she was asking as I came up.

"London."

"Be there sea there?"

"No; but there's a big river."

"Does you hafe in it?"

"No, it's too dirty."

"I has a w'ite fraak for Sunday, an' a red ribbon."

She dived into the pocket of the dress I had brought and produced some crumpled red ribbon, holding it up shyly and proudly above her head.

"She gave me ut!" pointing along the beach to where the French lady, whose dresses were a marvel to the quiet little village, was sitting with her poodle, and we recognized the ribbon as a cast-off top-knot of Pom-Pom's—Daisy then eyed us judicially for a minute.

"Be your house in London, too?" she asked me.

"Yes, we all live together."

"You don't, ut's a story," she said incredulously. "How would there be 'nuff to eat for those mans" (my brothers) "an' you an' the other lady?"

We turned the tables and found that Daisy had four sisters and a baby brother, and that her father was a fisherman and his "bott" was the one with the blue line round it.

"Then you have plenty of fish to eat?" I said, for raw onions and toffee were what Daisy generally made her lunch of on the beach.

"We has dog fish. The mack'rils an' dabs an' haddocks goes to Exeter. Has you a w'ite fraak for Sundays?

"Well, no. I haven't a Sunday frock at all here?"

She then eyed our black and red bathing dresses spread out to dry, and after looking at the old tweed rag that did duty for herself, said defiantly: "I have a bafing dress 's well as you!" Then she glared at it and spurned it with her shapely little brown foot.

"Well, we are going to dinner, now. What time do you have dinner, Daisy?"

"We doesn't have dinner, we has pitatus. I had some this morning."

"You seem to live on this beach?"

"Es. I be goin' to bathe again now." And she got into the old frock, put her three articles of raiment close up to our tent, and staggered over the pebbles down to the waves again. After that we always looked out for Daisy, and whoever was not on the beach we might be certain of finding her. She was the most ragged, the most neglected, and the most unkempt child in Beer, but the most charming, and she was hail-fellow-well-met with all visitors. She was delightfully lacking in self-consciousness or a sense of her "place" as a ragged little girl, and she would have requested the duke of Cambridge or the lord chancellor, had they wandered on the Beer beach, to "do up her fraack" with the utmost sang-froid. She bathed about 20 times a day, and she had only to ask the first person she encountered to get any small toilet office performed. We, however, were the most favored of her courtiers, perhaps because we possessed a certain dignity in her eyes through being the owners of the one and only bell tent; and she always honored us by spreading her dress and remnant of a towel close to ours. Once she favored me by requesting the loan of my comb. I hurriedly changed the subject. One day I was sitting reading, when she came to me with the complaint that "those mans" (my brothers) had gone off with her "fraack." She had hung it on the bows of their boat while she bathed, and meanwhile they had gone out with the boat and the unnoticed russet frock to sea. I had a pencil and paper and she requested me to write a letter for her.

"All right. What shall I say?"

That had not occurred to her, but after much pondering she dictated, to my utter mystification:

"Daisy Westlaake and Bob Hammett goes out courtin' every night an' day. So no more at present."

She scrutinized it carefully, and kept it in her fist, and then:

"Would the sky be pratty if it was brown?"

"No, I don't think so."

"Why?"

"Oh, because it wouldn't."

"But why wouldn't it?"

"Run away and bathe, Daisy!"

My brothers taught her to swim and float, and I have never seen a child so absolutely fearless of the water, almost too fearless, indeed, but these brown Devonshire water babies never seemed to come to any harm from that sea that had known them and their mothers from infancy. When the day came at last that I had to put off from Beer in the little boat that was to take me to Seaton and the unwelcome "London train," Daisy, clothed in naught but her innocence and a mop of bleached hair was rowing lustily in an anchored boat, and shouting orders in broad Devon to half a dozen other babies in the thwarts, and as I saw her for the last time I somehow felt that this wild, fearless little child of nature would in the future be something more than a fisherman's wife cleaning dog fish and making pillow lace.—Madame.

CHOICE BITS OF VERSE.

The Man and His Coat.

How custom makes us tremble!
We assume that we are brave,
But we're each and all afraid of fashion's test.
It is useless to dissemble—
You are Mrs. Grundy's slave
Completely, though the fact is not confessed
You talk of reformation;
And you say you'll overturn
Our social system everytime you vote.
But a sad, perspiring nation
Breathlessly has paused to learn—
Have you nerve enough to go without a coat?

It is not a thing of beauty;
It is wrinkled in the back.
And has buttons which are not the slightest use.
But you think it is your duty.
Though the thirsty pavements crack,
To wear it and avoid the mob's abuse.
You may proudly face the firing,
You may scorn the foeman's blade
Which is murderously pointed at your throat;
But when weary and perspiring,
Are you wise and unafraid?
Have you nerve enough to go without a coat?
—Washington Star.

Happiness.

"I am so tired of Duty's face," I cried,
"Her changeless front, unsmiling and stern-eyed,
Dismays my spirit and repels my heart.
Release me from her thrall, bid her depart
From the circumference of my circle, and
Let happiness, the bright-browed angel, stand
Within her niche, my life to glorify."
Lo! simultaneous with my bitter cry
Departed Duty, the austere of look.
And straightway in the spot that she forsook
There stood an angel of such glorious guise.
I could not see her face with mortal eyes,
But in my heart there surged a rapture sweet,
And down I flung me prostrate at her feet.
"Thou art that long-desired Happiness Whose smiling eyes have come my life to bless,"
I murmured as I kissed her garment's hem.
She lifted me, and raised her diadem,
That I the glory of her glance might bear.
I looked, and, lo, 'twas Duty standing there!
—Susie M. Best, in S. S. Times.

Steer by the Star.

Night on the sea, and one lone ship
In the midst of the darkness there,
A trackless waste spread all about
And the blackness everywhere.
But gleaming in the sky above
Are seen the beacons of the night,
Set there to guide that lonely ship
Across the trackless sea aright.

The waves roll high and toss the ship,
A plaything on their turbid crest;
The sea lifts up its eager arms
And opens wide its heaving breast,
But safely still the vessel rides,
For one there is who guides aright,
Because his eyes are fixed upon
Those faithful beacons of the night.

No vessel sailing o'er life's sea
But safely may the harbor find
If the Great Beacon of the sky
Be ever kept in sight and mind.
The light, at times, may shine but dim;
The way seem dark, the harbor far,
But he cannot get off the course
Who guides his vessel by the Star.
—Arthur J. Burdick, in Los Angeles Herald.

If I Wait.

I do not hear the message that
The robin hears in spring,
Which brings him homeward from afar
On swiftly flying wing;
But still I know he's coming, and
Will find his nest and mate,
In the tree which now is leafless—
So I wait.

I cannot feel the shiver that
The startled leaflet feels,
As autumn's breath, frost laden, through
Its vivid greenness steals;
And yet the change is coming, though
To me it may seem late;
And the green leaves will turn crimson
While I wait.

I cannot grasp the meaning of
Earth's happiness, and pain;
Yet both I know await me if
Life's best I would attain;
Each step I trust leads onward, and God's universe is great;
To find no incompleteness
If I wait.
—Helen M. Richardson, in Ladies' World.

HONOR'S BOARDERS.

"I WISH you would take them, Honor." The voice was the peevish, fretful one of the farmer's wife, who had added to her burdens by taking summer boarders. "Every room in my house is full, or I would be too glad to send them back to the city."

"But our house is not fine enough for city people," said Honor Eastman, looking deprecatingly at the blue cornflower pattern on the wall, and then through the open window toward the river that, winding its way between green banks, separated her farm from that of her neighbors.

"Nonsense," said the other, energetically. "You know you've got one of the finest places in Michigan, Honor, and they'll pay well and not be much bother."

Met thus with the convincing logic of experience, Honor laid aside her scruples and followed the example of her neighbors, who opened their home to the city folk that overrun the Michigan side of the lake all the summer long. She did it hesitatingly, regretting the invasion of the privacy of her home, and looking wistfully at her flower beds, brilliant with the many-hued marigolds and petunias and hollyhocks. "I hope they won't pick them all," she said to herself, and then chided her own selfishness.

Mrs. Harrington came with her small children and large trunks filled with pretty gowns that gave Honor the first pang of envy she had ever felt. Then her husband came out on Sunday, accompanied by a tall, handsome man, whom the children called "Uncle Tom," and Mrs. Harrington introduced as "My brother, Dr. Thomas Haddon."

"Uncle Tom" was a favorite with his small nephew and namesake, and that afternoon, when Honor went into the parlor to carry away her favorite book of poems from the marble top table, she saw through the window that young gentleman perched on the porch balustrade looking down admiringly at his uncle in the rustic chair enjoying his after-dinner cigar.

"It's jolly here, Uncle Tom," said the boy. "We have pie for breakfast and cake every meal, and there's an organ instead of a piano, and the cook comes in and says: 'Honor, do you want the eggs biled or scrambled for breakfast?' and never says 'Yes, ma'am,' or 'Miss,' like mamma's."

The gentleman laughed, and Honor escaped undetected as a listener, but her pride was hurt. She had thought her guests must see that she understood their standard of living. The cottage organ represented the profits of the berry crop, and her friends had praised her playing until Honor esteemed herself a musician.

The next morning there was no pie for breakfast, even the cake was reserved for the evening meal, and when the children teased for hymns Honor excused herself on the plea of much housework.

And so things went along for the remainder of the summer. Honor was making an effort to follow city ways without just knowing how, and she felt her lack of knowledge on these points quite keenly. She was of a retiring disposition, and one who did not like to be thought eccentric in any way, even though it was only to the extent of serving pie for breakfast, an eccentricity which the small nephew appreciated quite as much as though he had been born and raised on the farm. There were a few comments on the change that was noticeable to all, and then the matter was forgotten again by all save the nephew, to whom Honor relented sufficiently to supply pie between meals.

In the fall, when the Harringtons had gone back to the city, Honor found she had saved quite a sum above the expenses of the summer. It was lonely at the farmhouse without the children, and Honor could not think of Mrs. Harrington's beautiful manners and tasteful dress without a feeling of secret envy. An idea came to her, but it was too daring to be realized. "At my time of life, too," she said to herself. "Why, I'm nearly 30." But the face that looked back from the mirror was youthful and bright. "I believe I'll do it, there's nothing to hinder," she said, and the brown eyes in the mirror looked back with approving assurance.

There was much wonder and much comment in the rural neighborhood when it was learned that Honor Eastman had gone to Chicago to stay all winter. But Honor had left no explanation of why she went, and the letters she received were addressed in the care of a prominent woman's club.

All through the winter the wonder of Honor's prolonged visit to Chicago did not cease, and all through the winter Honor was acquiring those points of city etiquette that would enable her to appear better before her summer boarders.

In the early spring, almost as soon as the robin redbreasts came, Honor was back at the farm, taking up the lines of her duty where she had laid them down in the autumn.

When Mrs. Harrington wrote asking if she would take the family again for the summer Honor was glad, and they came when the strawberries were ripest and best.

Dr. Hadden came the following Sunday, and, in the afternoon, as he lay stretched in the hammock lazily watching the curling smoke of a cigar as it lost itself in the leafy canopy above him, Mrs. Harrington interrupted his reveries:

"I do not understand it," she said. "Everything seems unchanged, but there is a difference. It is more as I would do things myself. The meals are the same, but so nicely served. Honor's dresses are as simple, but her manners are those of the self-possessed woman of the world. And the daintiness of everything—you noticed the flowers on the table?"

"Pooh!" said her brother, looking at his handsome, elegant sister admiringly, "it's only your good influence, Alice."

Nevertheless, some weeks later Dr. Haddon declared that Sunday trips to the country were too brief, that he needed a rest and was not going back to the city for a month.

And Master Tom, if he thought that his uncle would devote all his time to him, mending his fishing lines and finding where the finest peaches and grapes grew, was doomed to disappointment. It even went so far that that young gentleman was forgotten or left out in the afternoon row on the river, for Dr. Haddon, discovering Honor's love of books, declared that there was no place so favorable for the enjoyment of one's favorite author as in a boat, resting in the shade of vine-laden branches overhanging the banks. The quick, unobtrusive young woman who could manage her house and farm equally well, and whose [illegible] cious and [illegible] of [illegible] woman of culture, [illegible] his [illegible] always [illegible] to love.

"Uncle Tom," said the young gentleman's namesake one evening, just before the Harringtons were to return to town, "I wish we could live here every summer, can't you?"

"Perhaps you may [illegible] visit her every summer," said his uncle, taking Honor's hand and turning to his sister for congratulations.

"Hurrah for my Aunt Honor," said Master Tom.—Chicago Tribune.

Help... Nature

Babies and children need proper food, rarely ever medicine. If they do not thrive on their food something is wrong. They need a little help to get their digestive machinery working properly.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL
WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME & SODA

will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from one-fourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.

The Chicago department store is popularly supposed to carry "everything," but it may surprise some members of the retail trade elsewhere to learn that the frog department is quite an important one in the western metropolis. More than 200,000 frogs, we are told, are sold in Chicago each week, and of these a great portion is retailed by the department stores.

FOR THE GRANGERS.

A Headquarters For Patrons of Husbandry at the Buffalo Exposition.

The Executive Committee of the New York State Grange visited Buffalo recently to make such arrangements as might be possible for a Headquarters for the Order upon the Pan-American Exposition Grounds, the New York State Grange feeling itself to be occupying in a measure the position of host toward the members of the Grange throughout the United States who might visit the Exposition. In addition to this the New York State Grange alone comprises a membership of 60,000, so that the convenience and comfort of the members of the Order in the State of New York alone were deemed worthy of careful attention on the part of the Executive Committee of the Grange.

The Director General stated to the Executive Committee that an effort would be made on his part to bring about some arrangement that might be satisfactory to the Grange, so that it may be taken for granted that a Headquarters for the National Grange upon the Exposition grounds will be provided for in some manner. This will be very pleasant news to all members of the Grange.

Exhibit of Fences.

A display of interest to every progressive farmer at the Pan-American Exposition will be the variety and methods of farm fencing. Barring the old stump fencing of pioneer days and the stone walls of New England, a great variety of fences will be shown.

In tubers and root crops will be displays of beets, turnips, carrots, peanuts, potatoes, sugar beets, parsnips, onions, etc. In October a special potato display will be made showing the products of many states in comparison with one another. Farmers who are interested in the production of sugar beets will have an invaluable opportunity to learn about the wonderful development of this particular vegetable. A special display will be made of sugar beets, showing all varieties and making clear to every one the conditions under which they thrive best, including both soil and atmosphere. The necessity of abundant sunshine in the maturing of sugar beets and the absence of it at the proper season have been the causes of serious loss and discouragement to growers.

The value of various byproducts for food for live stock will be shown in exhibits of gluten meal, linseed meal, cottonseed meal, hominy meal and other prepared foods.

The display of grasses and forage will include all varieties, the purpose being to show the ones best adapted for farm uses with reference to particular soils and conditions. The proper mixture of seed for permanent pastures, meadows, lawns, etc., will be explained.

The display of vegetable fibers will include flax, jute, hemp, cotton and their different products. The fibers of animal origin will include hides, hair, wool, silk and the processes of preparing them for market.

Among the nonedible products of animal origin to be exhibited are glue, gelatin, stearin, wax, candles, bone and horn products, fertilizers, etc.

The question of fertilizers is always an important one to those who seek to obtain the best results from the soil. In the treatment of this subject the Division of Agriculture will endeavor to show the relative value of the natural fertilizers, both crude and compounded. It will bring to the information of all the sources and value of nitrogen compounds, guano, offal, phosphatic rocks, potash, nitrates, etc.

As a sort of catch all for many things impossible to classify satisfactorily the superintendent has set apart a separate class. MARK BENNITT.

Those who live long are nearly always small eaters. This will be of small consolation to those who can't get enough to eat.

Broken Bric-A Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2 65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit. The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save. If your druggist can't supply you, it will be forwarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

$1.00 Per Year. 10c. Per Copy.

Here are a few of the noteworthy features.

"KIM." A Great Novel of Life in India.

By RUDYARD KIPLING.

It is the latest, longest and most important product of Mr. Kipling's genius, the most noteworthy contribution to modern fiction. This author returns to the field of his earliest triumphs and writes of that mysterious country with all his extraordinary power of description. It is a masterpiece of literature.

"WITHIN THE GATES." A Drama of The Seen and Unseen.

By ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS WARD.

This is the author's latest discussion of the great problem of death and the resurrection and carries the problem beyond the grave. It is certain to arouse as much comment as her earliest work on this subject.

"More Dolly Dialogues," by Anthony Hope. "The Newest Science," by great writers. "The Jimmie Stories," by Robert Barr. "Wall Street Stories," by Edwin Lefevre. "Stories of Animals," by W. D. Hulbert. "Next to the Ground," by Martha McCulloch Williams. "Great Character Sketches." "Dramatic Episodes in American History." "Unpublished Chapters of History." "Memories of a Great Actress." Short Fiction by such well-known writers as Robert Barr, Jack London, Sarah Orne Jewett, Josephine Dodge Daskam, Hamlin Garland, W. A. Frazer, Wm. M. Raine, Will Payne, Charles Warren, J. Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern which is not afraid to be generous. The proprietors of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles, and have the satisfaction of knowing it has cured thousands of hopeless cases. Asthma, bronchitis, la grippe and all throat, chest and lung diseases are surely cured by it. Call on A. C. Mason, druggist, and get a free trial bottle. Regular size 50c and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed.

What Would You Give

To be cured of catarrh? If you or your friends have this disease, you know how disagreeable it is. Its symptoms are inflamed eyes, throbbing temples, ringing noises in the ears, headaches, capricious appetite and constant discharge of mucus. Fortunately its cure is not a question of what you will give, but what you will take. If you will take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great constitutional remedy, which thoroughly purifies, enriches and vitalizes the blood, you may expect to be completely and permanently cured. The good blood which Hood's Sarsaparilla makes, reaching the delicate passages of the mucous membrane, soothes and rebuilds the tissues and ultimately cures all symptoms of catarrh.

Rich, warm, healthy blood is given by Hood's Sarsaparilla and thus coughs, colds and pneumonia are prevented. Take it now.

The Rev. James F. Albion, of Malden, who has been heard here with so much pleasure and interest before, will preach at the Universalist church next Sunday morning and afternoon.

Now that the winter evenings are coming on, wouldn't it be well to remember that your church has fully as great a demand upon you as your lodge? There is a thought there for you.

Little Rachel Smith, aged 9 years, died at the home of her parents on Lincoln street on Wedesday, a victim of scarlet fever. A sister of the deceased is seriously ill with diphtheria.

It is expected that extra men will be put at work on the highways from now until December for the cleaning of gutters and other repairs, preparatory to the season of snow and ice.

Mrs. Nellie Noyes' dancing class held a social in Foresters' hall Monday evening, which was well patronized. Miss Bertha Razee and Mrs. Mabel Tracey furnished music for the dancing.

Rev. Robert W. Drawbridge will be installed over the village church, Medway, on next Wednesday evening. Dr. Sneath will have a part in the services, extending the right hand of fellowship.

Don't forget the recital to be given in Odd Fellows' Hall next Friday evening for the benefit of the First M. E. church. For further particulars and hand bills, see announcement in another column.

The Rev. S. U. Shearman, D. D., rector of St. John's church, Jamaica Plain, Boston, will exchange with Rev. G. W. Miner next Sunday, Nov. 18. Dr. Shearman will conduct services at Medway, at 10.30 a. m., and at Franklin at 3 p. m.

George E. Duffy, the new superintendent of the Charles River company, has moved his household goods from Franklin to the residence recently vacated by Charles McDougall in North Bellingham.

The Farmers' club meets with Daniel Brown in Wrentham on Monday evening, Dec. 3, and it is expected that there will be a large attendance to enjoy the hospitality of that genial straw goods manufacturer.

Joseph G. Hills has been very sick the past week, the indications pointing to heart trouble, as he was unable to lie down and suffered much pain. He is 78 years of age and a well-known and lifelong resident.

Norfolk lodge, N. E. O. P., had Deputy Grand Warden A. J. Crowell of Roxbury as an official visitor Wednesday evening. There was a good attendance and all did ample justice to a well prepared oyster supper.

One of our popular young men, fond of hunting, is planning a trip to Maine, and when asked if he expected to see any moose replied, "I don't know about the moose, but no doubt I shall see a number vamoose."

The Piacere club of Woonsocket, which gave such a fine entertainment here last winter, is to come again to the Opera house on Friday evening, Dec. 7. They should have a good house, as they are excellent musicians.

The new mill at South Franklin is ready, or nearly ready, for operations. The water power is liable to be short in a dry season, but with steam to help, the factory can be run through the year if business conditions warrant.

Report comes from Dr. C. B. Hussey, who is studying at St. Thomas hospital in London, that he is enjoying his work very much, and is getting a vast amount of valuable information, scarcely to be obtained elsewhere. He will not return till spring.

The household goods of John H. Barnstead, who leaves for Colorado on Saturday, will be sold at auction by D. W. Corson & Co. in Opera house block this evening. Mr. Barnstead, who has been in the Waterman laundry for the past three years, will engage in the same line of business for himself in Colorado.

If the weather conditions are favorable the Franklin Social club will make its second cross country run next Sunday afternoon. Dedham will be the objective point, and the members are getting in trim for the fifteen-mile tramp.

The Jolly club is making elaborate preparations for its first annual concert and ball, which will be given in the Opera house on the evening preceding Thanksgiving, Wednesday, Nov. 28. Fales' orchestra of West Medway will furnish the music.

A number from here are planning to attend the great football game between the Phillips Andover team and a team from the Walpole athletic association, composed partially of crack players from the colleges, on Thanksgiving forenoon at Walpole. A hot game is assured.

Ex Liquor Officer Nickerson has been appointed one of the keepers at the Dedham jail. He has had many years' experience in handling criminals, and his fitness for a responsible position like this is everywhere acknowledged. His friends rejoice with him in his appointment.

A young man, married last year, dropped into the sanctum the other day to say: "It used to be that I was devoted to baseball and football and basket ball, and now I give all my spare time to baby's bawl." Then with an apprehensive look on his face he rushed from the office.

Miss Daisy G. Griffin, for the past nine years organist at St. Mary's church, with her mother, who is an invalid, and her aunt, Miss Glynn, left Wednesday for Roxbury, where they will take up their residence. They leave a large circle of friends here, who wish them continued happiness and prosperity in their new home.

Some of the prominent townsmen are now discussing the feasability of erecting a new town hall, either on the site of the present antiquated structure on Central street or on the lot owned by J. J. McCarthy at Main and School streets. The talk may lead to some action being taken at the annual town meeting next March.

R. Stevens, Mr. Ferrer, Mrs. C. W. Shattuck and Mrs. Otis Corbin of Norfolk lodge, N. E. O. P., were guests of Neponset lodge, Norwood, last night, and report a most delightful time. They visited the bowling alley of the lodge and were highly enthusiastic in regard to it. The lodge here may have one later.

The Epworth league passed a very pleasant social time at the residence of J. T. Hutchinson, Jr., on Arlington street, last Wednesday evening. A most enjoyable report of the recent League convention, at South Framingham, was given by Miss Emma C. Enegren, delegate from the local chapter, after which games were indulged in and dainty refreshments served.

A contest between the selectmen and the tree warden of Sharon has been exciting interest, as it is the first wrestle between these two powers yet to come into court. The selectmen granted permission to the Medfield Electric Light and Power company to attach fixtures to trees, and the warden claimed the select men were usurping powers which belong to him alone. The case will be heard at Dedham next week.

Edward E. Whiting, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester M. Whiting, left yesterday for Philadelphia, where he has contracted to go to San Domingo for a Quaker City firm getting out mahogany and cedar. He has been in South America for the past three years for a Boston firm, getting out similar woods and exploring the forests of that country. He reads and speaks Spanish fluently, and enjoys his work exceedingly.

Massachusetts is a good state to live in after all. Twenty-one persons 100 years old or more died here last year. Sixteen of the 21 were women—three of the 16 never having been married. Eight of the 21 were born in Ireland, three in Canada and three in other foreign countries—leaving seven native born, six of whom were of Massachusetts nativity. The oldest was two months over 106—a woman and native of Boston, Mrs. Mary R. Bradford.

Look out for counterfeit money just now, especially if you are in the habit of handling ten dollar bills. There is a new counterfeit ten dollar silver certificate afloat, and it has been passed in Worcester and towns surrounding. Of course it won't skip here, so it is well to look sharp. It is of inferior workmanship and can be detected without much trouble, is a photographic print, without the silk fibre and bears the portrait of Thomas A. Hendricks.

Post office department officials express their belief that the postmaster general will recommend to congress a reduction in the rate on registered mail. The growth of this branch of the service has during the last year been phenomenal. It is profitable, and so a further stimulus to its increase is desirable. The annual rate of increase has been about four per cent., but this year the increase is expected to reach nine per cent. In hte larger offices the growth of business is even more rapid.

Judge O. T. Doe, Bradley M. Rockwood and Nathan C. Nye left on Wednesday evening for Old Point Comfort, Va., for a ten days' trip. They will stop for a time at the swell hotel there, The Hygeia, take a run over to Hampton and see the Indian and colored students, go to the Soldiers' home, the bustling shipping port of Newport News, and then up to Richmond, which is a city full of historic associations and sights. From there side trips will be made as their fancy suggests. They are assured a most delightful trip in the sunny South-land, and will escape the decidedly unpleasant weather we have been experiencing.

A large and successful advertiser says that when he first went into business he regarded newspaper advertising as an expense which was important, but not essential to success, but a little experience taught him to view regular and systematic advertising in the most widely circulated newspapers as an investment or as a necessary part of the capital put into his establishment. "Like any other safe investment," he says, "the newspaper ad. brings in profits, and without it an enterprise falls short of its possibilities."

Joseph E. Clark returned from New York Tuesday with an experience of travel on the sound in winter which he promises he will not repeat. He left New York city Sunday night and found very rough travelling outside the harbor. About everything on the boat was wet with salt water and the same liquid was in many parts of the steamer. The passengers put on the life preservers and for some time were under the expectation that they would have to swim ashore if they ever reached it alive.

Franklin electrics had a lively experience on Wednesday. Near Crooks' corner a Mr. Trask of Bellingham, being somewhat deaf, drove upon the track in front of a car going into Woonsocket, his democrat wagon being wrecked, while he and the horse escaped. While he stood there afterwards viewing the wreck, a car to Franklin came along, and had it not been for quick work on the part of Motorman Ross he would have been run over, as the car was but a few feet away from him. Deaf people should exercise unusual care.

The ladies' society of the Congregational church provided a most appetizing supper on Wednesday evening, calling out a large number to enjoy the feast. After the supper there was an entertainment, consisting of music by Misses Talcott and Smith, readings by Misses Rockwood and Ferrer and Mr. Cosseboom, duet by Mr. and Mrs. W. S Johnson, conundrums, etc. One of the pleasures of the evening was the experiences related by Edward E. Whiting in his search for wood in South America, his encounters with Indians, insurgents, etc. He also had some South American hats and shoes which excited a good deal of interest. On the whole the evening was a decided success.

Tuesday evening's meeting of the Y. M. C. A. was held in the new rooms, and a very enthusiastic meeting it was. The attendance was the largest of any meeting yet held and all present were very high in their praise of the new quarters, all expressing themselves as entirely satisfied with them. Committees were instructed to attend to furnishing and equipping them at once. The subject of a woman's auxiliary was brought up and the executive committee requested to call the ladies together at an early date to consider the formation of an auxiliary as soon as possible. The reports from the different committees showed the interest our young men are taking in the work, and everything indicates that Franklin is to have a large and prosperous association in full working order in the very near future.

Dramatics at Dean Tonight.

As we have before noted, the Dean Athletic association has provided a highly entertaining affair in the chapel this evening, to which a small admission will be charged. The two pieces are "Per Telephone" and "A Difference in Clocks." The Dean orchestra will furnish music and a thoroughly enjoyable entertainment is promised. Come out and help the association, for you will get your money's worth.

Look Out For Burglars.

Burglars entered the Bresnahan grocery store sometime Wednesday night, by cutting out a pane of glass in the rear of the store. They took a number of articles, but did not attempt much of a haul. They also tried the back doors of other establishments, but these offered more resistance and they gave it up.

How Sharper Than a Serpent's Tooth.

Tuesday morning the district court heard a case in which a cow was the central figure. A Wrentham woman and the owner of a cow went to Rehoboth to live with her son, and took her cow along to furnish milk and cream. Afterwards she returned to Wrentham without the cow, but later sent for the animal and it was brought home. But the son alleges that he bought the cow during the time, paying no money, but turning the price on an old account. So he took an officer and went to Wrentham, secured the cow and returned home. Then he was called upon as defendant in a case of cow larceny, and that was the occasion of the hearing. The judge continued the matter one week.

In November

is the best time to sit for portraits for Christmas. Don't wait till the rush of December. Latest and best in portraiture now and always at CALKIN'S STUDIO, Depot street.

Y. M. C. A. Membership.

Within the last few days the question of membership in the association has been frequently inquired about, and that all may understand it we insert the following:

Any man of good character, regardless of religious belief or church attendance, is cordially invited to become a member of the Young Men's Christian association of Franklin, it being simply necessary to fill out an application blank and pay the fee. A membership ticket will be immediately issued, with the understanding that should the references prove unsatisfactory the amount paid will be refunded and the ticket surrendered.

The organization is for the men of our town and it is desired that all shall enjoy its benefits. We today number over ninety—and hope before the week ends to have reached the one hundred mark. Remember YOU are invited to become a member. Limited membership $2.00 per year, unlimited $5.00.

The committee on membership are Elmer M. Fisher, chairman; C. Ray Whitney, Will F. Ray, Floyd D. Hosie, Gilbert A. Greenwood.

If you have not already made application to become a member, it is hoped you will do so at once. It is expected the rooms will be opened at a very early date.

CHAS. L. STEWART, Sec'y.

Fraternal Amenities.

About forty of the Masonic fraternity went to Milford on Wednesday evening to participate in one of the largest gatherings of Masons ever held there, when more than 300 of the craft assembled to witness the official visitation of R. W. Jarvis Woolford, D. D. G. M., of the twentieth Masonic district, to Montgomery lodge. He was accompanied by his suite and a large honorary suite of past masters. After the formal duties of the district deputy and suite, work on the master Mason's degree was exemplified and rendered more impressive by the presence of the Weber quartet of Boston.

Following the lodge room exercises a fine turkey supper was had in the banquet hall, being thoroughly enjoyed. Montgomery lodge is the parent lodge of a number of lodges, and distinguished as one of the historic lodges of the state. [illegible] degree work and its hospitality. Visitors were present not only from many lodges in the state, but from Woonsocket. It was a notable Masonic occasion of much interest to the local craft.

Journey to Nazareth.

On last Sabbath evening Rev. Mr. Sneath and his audience journeyed to Nazareth. The company went from Jerusalem on horse back and camel-back, and dwelt in tents by the way. Having reached Nazareth, they visited the different places of interest. Among them were the traditional fountain of the virgin, the workshop of Joseph, the home of Joseph and Mary, the Mount of Precipitation, the synagogue, the bake-ovens and the view from the eminence in the rear of the town. This view is declared by travelers to be the finest in the world. Glimpses were also given into a Nazareth home and carpenter shop, both of which are declared to be essentially the same as in the days of Jesus. As all known Nazareth history clusters around Christ, Mr. Sneath emphasized the events in connection with the places visited. On next Sabbath evening the sea of Galilee and the sacred places about it will be visited. The quartet will sing the selection "Blue Galilee."

A Good Time Promised.

A most enjoyable musical entertainment has been arranged to be given in Odd Fellows' hall on Friday evening, Nov. 23, which will include the following artists: Samuel J. McWatters, professor of oratory and music at the Boston university, and an accomplished musician; Waldo Everett, graduate of Emerson School of Oratory, whose friends here will be glad to give him a welcome; Nathan D. Prince of Danielson, Conn., an artist of exceptional ability upon the banjo. These will be assisted by local talent and an evening of rare enjoyment is promised. The affair is under the management of the Epworth league.

What to Eat and Where to Get It.

We have provided some choice morsels for you this week. Fowls and chicks from 12 1-2 to 20c; fine homemade and bag sausage, hams 11 and 12c; smoked shoulders 9c; beef liver; pigs' liver 15c; fresh laid eggs, etc. In canned goods we have canned asparagus only 25c; veal loaf, a dainty, 25c; maple syrup 25c; our cheese embraces the best in town, old cheese, sage cheese and plain cheese; then we have all the vegetables, such as spinach, lettuce, cauliflower, squash, cabbage, onions, celery, etc. Try our butter and tea—the best.

Alden Club Meeting.

On Monday evening a large audience of Alden club ladies and many guests greeted Mrs. May Alden Ward. In her lecture on "Current Events" she confined her attention entirely to China and her wars, telling how they came about and how they resulted, giving the present outlook for China. She said she believed it would be a long time before the existing troubles would be settled because of the many complications. In this busy age there are many who are unable to keep informed on all these subjects. This lecture was a revelation and a great source of information.

After the lecture an informal reception was given Mrs. Ward.

Woonsocket Opera House.

"Our New Minister," Denman Thompson and George W. Ryder's comedy drama, comes to the Woonsocket Opera House next Monday evening, Nov. 19. It is built on similar lines to "The Old Homestead" and deals in a novel and original way with the everyday life of a small rural community. Every character in "Our New Minister" is said to be a distinctive type of the New-England Yankee, whose quaintness of speech and rustic innocence are as picturesque as they are humorous and decisive. Seats on sale Nov. 17.

The Rays' big eastern "A Hot Old Time" will be the attraction Wednesday, Nov. 21. It is a farce comedy with original production in New York two years ago and has been steadily increasing in favor ever since. This season it has broken all records. Clean wit, lively action and an ingenious plot as well as a strong cast are features that have carried it to exceptional prosperity. Seats go on sale Monday, Nov 19.

"Prince Pro Tem."

The pleasant comments which have reached music lovers concerning "Prince Pro Tem," the opera to be sung at the Opera house on Friday evening, Nov. 23, have given an unusual impetus to the sale of seats, and indications are that this company of favorite singers will be greeted by a crowded house upon this presentation in this town. "Prince Pro Tem" tells an amusing story, whimsical in construction and conceit, and embellished in a gorgeous and pictorial manner. Tickets go on sale tomorrow at Dana's.

"Quo Vadis."

"Quo Vadis" has been read by many millions and the dramatic adaptation of it will be presented for the first time at Morse Opera house on Monday, Nov. 26. The actors are breathing exponents of the wonderful types of character, and the play is sufficiently strong in dramatic situation to escape being sombre or at any time monotonous. Its human interest holds the auditor spellbound, filled as it is with the deep religious fervor of the Christian martyrs. There is a most excellent company, beautiful and appropriate scenery and wardrobes and a first-class performance can be looked for.

Personal Magnetism.

There is something about one's personality which even the photograph [illegible] [illegible], [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible], which the sculptor cannot chisel. This subtle something which every one feels, but which no one can describe, which no biographer ever put down in a book, has a great deal to do with one's success in life. It is this indescribable quality, says a writer in Success, which some persons have in a remarkable degree, which sets an audience wild at the mention of the name of a Blaine or a Lincoln—which makes people applaud beyond the bounds of enthusiasm. It was this peculiar atmosphere which made Clay the idol of his constituents. Although, perhaps, Calhoun was a greater man, he never aroused any such enthusiasm as "the mill-boy of the slashes." Webster and Sumner were great men, but they did not arouse a tithe of the spontaneous enthusiasm evoked by men like Blaine and Clay. A historian says that, in measuring Kossuth's influence over the masses, "we must first reckon with the orator's physical bulk, and then carry the measuring line above his atmosphere." If we had discernment fine enough, we could not only measure the personal atmosphere of individuals, but could make more accurate estimates concerning the future possibilities of schoolmates and young friends. We are often misled as to the position they are going to occupy from the fact that we are apt to take account merely of their ability, and do not reckon this personal atmosphere or magnetic power as a part of their success-capital. Yet this individual atmosphere has quite as much to do with one's advancement as brain-power or education. Indeed, we constantly see men of mediocre ability, but with fine personal presence, superb manner, and magnetic qualities, being rapidly advanced over the heads of those who are infinitely their superiors in mental endowments. A good illustration of the influence of personal atmosphere is found in the orator who carries his audience with him like a whirlwind while he is delivering his speech, and yet so little of this personal element adheres to his cold words in print that those who read them are scarcely moved at all. The influence of such speakers depends almost wholly upon their presence—the atmosphere that emanates from them. They are much larger than anything they say or do.

Population of Our Cities.

St. Louis, Boston and Baltimore were close competitors in the census of 1890 ranking in the order named, with a total respectively of 451,770, 448,477 and 434,439. None of the three has changed its boundaries during the last ten years, and the comparison to be made in the present census will, therefore, be exact in this respect. At the beginning of the century St. Louis had a population of less than 1,[illegible], and in 1810, one year after incorporation, only 1,4[illegible]. Baltimore in that year was a city of [illegible] inhabitants, and Boston's population was 33,250. In 1840, when St. Louis had reached a total of only 16,469, the population of Baltimore was 102,313 and of Boston, 93,383. In [illegible] the population of the three cities was: Baltimore, 212,418; Boston, 177,840; St. Louis, 160,773. The closest rivals of St. Louis are [illegible] growing cities, but the margin in favor of the metropolis of the Mississippi is not likely to be reversed unless, temporarily, by wholesale annexations.

One of the largest recent predictions about the United States is that of the London Times to the effect that, through improved machinery, this country will eventually control the export cotton goods market.

American cities are growing faster than any other on earth. The census has clinched this fact and it leaves no room for disappointment.

THROAT REST

You can cough yourself into bronchitis, pneumonia, and consumption.

Bandaging and bundling your throat will do no good.

You must give your throat and lungs rest and allow the cough wounds to heal.

There is nothing so bad for a cough as coughing. Stop it by using

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Even the cough of early consumption is cured. And, later on, when the disease is firmly fixed, you can bring rest and comfort in every case.

A 25 cent bottle will cure new coughs and colds; the 50 cent size is better for settled coughs of bronchitis and weak lungs; the one dollar size is more economical for chronic cases and consumption. It's the size you should keep on hand.

"All families ought to be on the watch for sudden attacks of croup or acute lung troubles. Every country home in the land should keep Cherry Pectoral constantly on hand to provide against an emergency."
JOSIAH G. WILLIS, M.D.,
Dec. 14, 1898. Holland, Mich.

COURT MOURNING.

Period of Grief in Various Countries Depends Entirely on Rank of Deceased.

Now that so many countries are plunged into grief over the loss of King Humbert of Italy and the duke of Saxe-Coburg, mourning such as prescribed by the courts is being worn.

In England it is customary to mourn for our king or queen three months; for a son or daughter of our sovereign, such as is the case now for the duke of Saxe-Coburg, it is to be six weeks; for a brother or a sister of a sovereign, only three weeks; for an uncle, aunt, nephew or niece, the court goes into mourning for two weeks; while from three to ten days is usual for a cousin, according to the relationship. The royal regulation for the first period is a black dress, white gloves, black or white shoes, feather and fans, white pearls, diamonds or plain gold and silver ornaments may be worn, says the London Times. For the men, black court dress with black swords and buckles.

At the end of that period, which is generally a third of the whole, according to the rank of royalty being mourned for, the costume is changed, the ladies then wearing black dresses with colored ribbons, flowers, feathers, and ornaments, while the men remain as before until the court goes out of mourning. For the military and other royal servants a black crape band is fixed to the left arm for the time specified, while at night the handle of the sword is also to be enveloped in crape.

In different countries different mourning colors are used, but all over Europe black is universal.

MOUNT ARARAT ASCENDED.

The Task Was Recently Accomplished by a Party of Russian Scientists.

The Ararat mountains in Armenia comprise two peaks situated seven miles apart. They are known as Great and Little Ararat, and are respectively 17,260 and 14,320 feet above the plain. They partially belong to three countries, Russia, Turkey and Persia. The mountains are covered on the tops with perpetual snow, ice and glaciers. The summit of Great Ararat was reached in 1829 by Prof. Parrot, says the Scientific American, and on September 2, 1900, a member of the Russian Geographical society named Peoggenpohl ascended the peak with a considerable party. The difficulties of the ascent are very great and his successful expedition will be welcome news in geographical circles. Ascents are rare, having been made in 1834, 1843, 1845, 18[illegible] and 1856. Little Ararat is even more difficult to climb, as its declivities are greater and steeper, its form being almost conical. It is believed to be the spot where the ark rested, but there is a tradition that Mount Judi in southern Armenia was the spot. The mountain is of volcanic origin and was in eruption in 1785, and in 1840 there was a vast discharge of sulphurous vapors from its sides, and a tremendous earthquake shook the surrounding country. There is considerable literature devoted to the mountain.

Typewriting experts instead of handwriting experts were introduced in a recent trial in New York.

THE LATEST FURNITURE FADS

Dining tables with two adjustable tops, a round one for state occasions and a square one for everyday use, is the proper thing, and is comparatively reasonable too.

From its four corners claw feet extend diagonally out to the edge, carved in the wood.

A new-shaped chiffonier is conspicuous in golden oak and mahogany. In shape it is not unlike the old-fashioned square double-doored wardrobe, sans mirror, only on a smaller, squattier scale. Inside it is the personification of convenience, having multitudinous shelves and cubby holes of all kinds.

Wanted His Wardrobe.

Irate Father (of pretty girl)—What! is it possible you are here again after the treatment you received last night?

Young Man—Yes, sir. When you kicked me downstairs and set the dog on me the animal tore a large piece from my trousers.

Irate Father—Well, isn't that enough? What more do you want?

Young Man—If it isn't too much trouble, sir, I would like that piece of cloth.—Chicago Democrat.

He Didn't Blame the Woman.

A man went wrong one day,
And didn't blame the woman;
He didn't whine and say
He was tempted by the woman:
Men praised him then, but oh,
The women—high and low—
How they abused him, though!
Because he didn't go
And blame it on the woman.

The Stimulus of Pure Blood

That is what is required by every organ of the body, for the proper performance of its functions.

It perfects all the vital processes.

It prevents biliousness, dyspepsia, constipation, kidney complaint, rheumatism, catarrh, nervousness, weakness, faintness, pimples, blotches, and all cutaneous eruptions.

It is assured by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla which acts directly and peculiarly on the blood.

This statement is proved by thousands of unsolicited testimonials.

W. P. KEETON, Woodstock, Ala., writes: "When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla my blood was impure and I had not been feeling well for some time. I was bothered very much with that tired feeling. When I had taken the medicine a few days I began to feel better, and after taking two bottles I felt like another person. That tired feeling was gone and I could do my work."

Fed by Ants.

It is certain that ants intentionally sanction the residence of certain insects in their nests. This is the case, for instance, with the curious blind beetle, claviger, which is absolutely dependent upon ants, as Mulley first pointed out. It seems to have even lost the power of feeding itself, at any rate it is habitually fed by the ants, who supply it with nourishment as they do one another.—Science.

Direct Steamer Service with St. Johns, N.F.

The direct steamer service between Halifax and St. Johns, N. F., which was inaugurated last winter by the Newfoundland railway in connection with the Plant line from Boston, will be resumed on Nov. 13th. Passengers and freight leaving Boston on steamship Halifax every Saturday noon reach St. Johns the following Thursday morning without transfer, except going from one steamer to the other at the Plant wharf at Halifax. This enables the through rate to be made cheaper than any other way. Full particulars of J. A. Flanders, N. E. agent, 290 Washington street, or E. H. Downing, agent, 20 Atlantic avenue, Lewis wharf, Boston.

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2.65 a gallon, while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or nitric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit. The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising, which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save. If your druggist can't supply you, it will be forwarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

THE ELECTRICAL WORLD.

A novel type of trolley is used on the Dublin United Tramways. It is of the swivelling arm type, placed at the side of the car so as to be out of the way of the passengers, who ride on the top of the cars. The trolley wheel is small and is contained in a casting. There is a kind of double swivel joint which assists in keeping the trolley on the wire.

Every department of the new United States mint, now building at Philadelphia, will be dependent to a very great extent on electricity for power. All the presses and milling machines are to be operated by this power. There will be 14 motors of 45 horse-power, 30 of five horse-power, six of 25 horse-power, and a large number of smaller motors.

Ice has proved successful as an insulator on Mont Blanc. A double line of ordinary galvanized iron wire was laid on the ground between the Grands Mulets at the top of the mountain and the Petits Mulets at the base. Each line was 5,500 feet long. Messages were sent without trouble and the loss of electricity, as measured by the instruments, was very slight.

A group of apartment houses in Utica, N. Y., is provided throughout with electrical cooking utensils, consisting of three round platters, or "stoves," an oven and a broiler. When not needed they can be stowed away, leaving no outward trace of the use to which the room is put. The air is not vitiated, and the apartment is kept much cooler. The same apartments are provided with electric curling-tongs heaters, which are much appreciated.

Alluded to the Size.

They sat on the rustic seat. He held her hand.

"This reminds me of playing poker,' he giggled, softly.

"In what way?" she inquired.

"Holding a big hand."

He was only joking, but the neighbors will tell you that she takes those delightful moonlight rambles with another fellow.—Chicago Daily News.

Gentle Reminder.

Mrs. Newed—To-morrow will be your birthday, dear, and I'm going to stop in at the jeweler's and buy a nice present for you.

Mr. Newed—All right; but don't forget that I still owe him for the Christmas gift you bought me and select something cheap. — Chicago Daily News.

At Newport.

Miss Blugore—May Enchance says she hears there's a Russian count coming here this summer.

Miss Hyupp—Of course, then, she's just crazy to learn the Russian language.

Miss Blugore—O! She says she knows already how to say "yes," and that's enough.—Philadelphia Press.

Discreet Young Gentleman.

Governess—Who was the wisest man?

Little Dick—Solomon.

Governess—Correct; name the wisest woman.

Little Dick (after meditation)—Well, if I say you, ma will get angry; and if I say ma, you will get so.—Tit-Bits.

TOLD OF THE CHINESE.

There is a saying that a Chinese soldier is "eleven-tenths thief."

Chinese regiments are recruited in the same manner as British regiments.

A Chinese regiment presents a gay appearance to the foreign observer. Nearly every man bears a banner.

The railway from Tientsin to Peking, a distance of about 70 miles, was the first constructed in China.

It is not an uncommon sight to see a Chinese soldier with a fan and an umbrella strapped across his back.

The Boxers' signs are so complete and so admirably arranged that individual Boxers are able to communicate with one another at a considerable distance, even in the middle of a surging crowd.

The society of Boxers is composed of lodges, each of which has a president, whose power for good and evil is considerable. Every president has under him two or more vice presidents, who are bound to obey his every command or else suffer a horrible death.

The horseshoe in China, as well as in other countries, is looked upon as a harbinger of good luck. For that reason Chinese mandarins, when buried, have horseshoe graves, and they believe that the bigger the horseshoe grave the better the luck of the departed. As a result, the mandarins outvie each other in the size of these horseshoe graves.

Then They Separated.

The two men had talked for a time in the train.

"Are you going to hear Barkins lecture to-night?" said one.

"Yes," returned the other.

"Take my advice and don't. I hear that he is an awful bore."

"I must go," said the other. "I'm Barkins."—Tit-Bits.

LEGALITIES OF INSURANCE.

A person insured against accident as a barber and restaurant keeper and who was injured while hunting rabbits is held, in Wildey Casualty company vs. Sheppard (Kan.), 47 L. R. A. 650, to be entitled to insurance in the class in which he was insured, where the hunting was not his occupation, but was a mere incident.

Certificates of membership and the application thereof which provide against liability in case of death by suicide are held, in McCoy vs. Northwestern Mutual Relief association (Wis.), 47 L. R. A. 681, to constitute a contract between the parties which will prevail over by-laws of the association that do not authorize such limitation upon the liability.

An insurance agent having authority to solicit insurance to accept risks, agree upon and settle the terms of insurance, and to issue and renew policies is held in McCabe vs. Aetna Insurance company (N. D.), 47 L. R. A. 641, to have authority to make a preliminary parol contract which will be binding upon his principal for the renewal of a policy that is about to expire.

A foreign insurance company with a name similar to that of a domestic corporation is held in people ex rel. Van Cleave (Ill.), 47 L. R. A. 795, to be entitled to a license to do business in the state without regard to such similarity, as a provision of the state statute empowering the superintendent of insurance to reject any name or title applied for by any company if it is too similar to one already appropriated is limited to domestic corporations.

IN THE ANIMAL KINGDOM.

Whitebait are the young of herrings, sardines and ling.

The so-called shipworm, which bores holes in the wood of ships, is in reality a form of shellfish.

The skin of Elephant Charlie, killed in Crystal palace, London, weighed a ton—just one-fourth of the weight of the beast in life.

A bull moose came out of the Maine woods recently and took a stroll through the streets of Bangor. Small boys threw stones at him and he trotted away.

Naturalists have discovered that if the voice of an elephant were as loud in proportion to size as that of a nightingale his trumpeting could be heard around the world.

The zoological park established in Washington is becoming an important institution. Already the collection of animals includes several species never before brought into captivity.

Rats are fine swimmers. They are nearly as much at home in a swollen stream as they are in the placid cellar of a well-stocked mansion. In fact, the whole rodent family, including mice, squirrels and other species, learn to make themselves at home in the water when necessity requires it.

NOVELTIES OF INVENTION.

A patent has just been secured for a boot which is fastened at the back instead of at the front.

A pneumatic rocking-chair has just been patented. The air-cushions attached to the rockers are very similar to ordinary cycle tires.

A New Jersey woman has invented a rapid clothes sprinkler, consisting of two sections of tin, which fit tightly together and the surfaces of which are perforated with small holes. This is left resting in a bowl of water while ironing is going on. When it is desired to sprinkle the clothes the sprinkler is seized and shook over them.

The Lesser Evil.

Bramble—Why do you play poker with Shortleigh? He can't afford to pay if he loses, and besides he doesn't play fair.

Thorne—I know it, but I might as well let him win my money as to lend it to him.—N. Y. Journal.

Spread Like Wildfire.

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare, a leading druggist, of Belleville, O., writes: "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years. You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickly, rundown man or woman. Price 50 cents. Sold by A. C. Mason, druggist.

Welcomed.

"Do you think an honest man is out of place in politics?"

"Certainly not," answered Senator Sorghum. "We want more of 'em. Those are the people who are willin' to walk right up to the polls and vote and not charge you a cent."—Washington Star.

A LASTING EFFECT.

This Evidence Should Prove Every Claim.

Relief from the pains and aches of a bad back is always welcome to every backache sufferer, but to cure a lame, weak or aching back is what's wanted. Cure it so it will stay cured. It can be done. Here's the strongest evidence to prove it.

Mr. H. P. Smith, blacksmith, of Elm street, Amesbury, Mass., says: "Mrs. Smith, from a cold which settled in her loins, suffered so severely from backache that she was unable to attend to the ordinary household duties, often finding it impossible to even make a bed for three months. I had read a great many statements of residents of Amesbury who positively declared that Doan's Kidney Pills had cured them of backache and other symptoms of kidney complaint. This led me to make some inquiries, and as a result Mrs. Smith took a thorough course of the treatment. It cured her. It is so long ago that I am confident the results are permanent. We never lose an opportunity of advising others who suffer from either weakened or over-excited kidneys to procure Doan's Kidney Pills, and we know of scores in and around Amesbury who have taken our advice and were not only surprised but gratified at the benefits received."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers; price 50 cents a box. Mailed on receipt of price by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S.

FASHION'S MIRROR.

Silk and wool mixtures will be favored this fall, and silk will drop into the background, say Paris authorities.

Quite the newest thing is the delicate lingerie neckwear for the shirt waists of fine flannel now being shown for early fall.

Persian and other oriental embroidery designs are the newest idea in shirt waist decoration, embroidered bands being inserted diagonally at the front.

With thankfulness it is noted that the hideous and vulgar green veiling is rapidly disappearing; brilliant blue of the shade called "royal" is taking its place.

The earliest importations of autumn dress goods showed smooth finished surfaces, but now there is an incoming wave of zibeline goods with very rough hairy surfaces. Many of these materials show pronounced white hairs on dark backgrounds.

Fasten your gold ribbon belts with white taffeta ribbon bows in front, ribbon to be of two inch width and bowed up with ends, having jingling gilt ornaments on the bottom if possible. Two and three such bows are used, according to the width of the belt, and they are placed one above the other.

FOR TEACHER AND PUPIL.

Prince Arthur of Connaught has entered the Royal Military college at Sandhurst, and will pursue the usual military studies.

Hawaii has closed its last school for teaching the native languge. Hereafter young Hawaiians will be taught to talk English.

The English language has been partially introduced into the law courts of Iceland at Reykjavik, all notes being taken in this language.

The board of education of St. Paul has decided to maintain night schools during the coming winter for the benefit of those unable to attend during the day.

Dorman B. Eaton, of New York, the great civil service reformer, left $100,000 each to Columbia and Harvard universities to found professorships of the science of government.

Frederick W. Atkinson, superintendent of education in the Philippines, late principal of the high school at Springfield, Mass., is 55 years old and a graduate of Harvard. He is six feet four inches tall, as broad proportionally, and possesses immense physical strength.

DAVID CITY, NEB., April 1, 1900.
Genesee Pure Food Co., Le Roy, N. Y.:

Gentlemen:—I must say in regard to GRAIN-O that there is nothing better or healthier. We have used it for years. My brother was a great coffee drinker. He was taken sick and the doctor said coffee was the cause of it and told us to use GRAIN O. We got a package but did not like it at first, but now would not be without it. My brother has been well ever since we started to use it.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS

NORFOLK, ss.

At a Probate Court held at Dedham in and for said county of Norfolk, on the seventh day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred.

On the petition of Simon Spellowski of Norfolk, in said county, praying that his name may be changed to that of Simon Brown, public notice having been given, according to the order of court, that all persons might appear and show cause, if any they had, why the same should not be granted, and it appearing that the reason given therefor is sufficient and consistent with the public interest, and being satisfactory to the court and no objection being made

It is decreed that his name be changed, as prayed for, to that of Simon Brown, which name he shall hereafter bear, and which shall be his legal name, and that he give public notice of said change by publishing this decree once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper published in Franklin, and make return to this court under oath that such notice has been given.

The Norfolk and Franklin boundary line was perambulated Saturday as the law requires.

Mrs. A. M. Medley of Springfield spent the Sabbath with her daughter, Mrs H. S. Ward.

Engineer James Joyce has moved from Milliken avenue to a house recently purchased by him on Peck street.

Meeting of the Ladies' Social circle of the Universalist church next Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Lovell Metcalf.

Experts say that turkeys are going to be unusually scarce, so you will oblige your marketman by placing your order early.

Supt. Blanchard had to keep the electric light service on most all of Monday, owing to the unusual darkness. It was appreciated.

Ten persons rose for prayer at the evening service of the Baptist church Sunday evening. The revival spirit is increasing.

Scalloped and stewed oysters at Universalist church Wednesday evening, at 6.30 o'clock. Entertainment after supper. Come!

Mrs. C. L. Stewart assisted the Y. M. C. A. in special services in Milford last week and on Sunday Her work there is especially appreciated.

The little daughter of Electrician E.L. Blanchard is ill with scarlet fever. His little boy, who has been ill with the same disease, is convalescent.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Stearns of "Norumbega," Camden, Me., and Miss Katherine Kingston of Bar Harbor, are guests of Mrs. Annie Kingston Ballard.

An oyster supper has been arranged for at the Universalist church tomorrow evening, after which an entertainment will be enjoyed. A good time is promised.

Oliver Jordan is the new outside man at the electric light station, taking Lennie Minot's place, who has secured a position as substitute mail carrier in Boston.

A number from here are going over to West Medway this evening to enjoy the second entertainment in the lecture course, the Weber quartet and Miss James, reader.

The fences in front of E. F. Ware's houses on Main street have been taken down, bowing to the march of improvement in this line about town. There are others.

The Flax Fibre company of Millis, which did its experimenting here, are putting the finishing touches to the machinery and began getting out their samples yesterday.

J. A. Barnstead leaves tomorrow with his wife and two children for Colorado Springs, Col., where he will engage in the laundry business, having purchased a laundry in connection with a friend.

How much a line of well painted houses adds to the looks of the street. This is especially noticeable of the newly painted Ray houses on Dean avenue and Emmons street. Let the good work go on.

Next week is Thanksgiving, and we trust that all having guests or going elsewhere to enjoy the day will kindly send word to this office so that it may be duly chronicled. We shall appreciate the favor.

A general renovation of guide boards is one of the affairs now occupying the attention of the selectmen and street superintendent. Posts have been prepared and the contract to supply the signs is under consideration.

The agent of the commissioners of state and military aid is expected here next Friday, at 10 a. m., for the purpose of a special examination of the recipients of aid, and all such are expected to appear unless unable from sickness to do so

During the year ending In August there were 13 deaths in the Masonic lodges of the 20th Masonic district of Massachusetts, and six of these occurred in Excelsior lodge of Franklin, comprising about one eighth of the Masons in the district.

The Mothers' section met with Mrs. Eva Sherman on Friday afternoon and discussed some every day questions in regard to child training. The class were pleased to have with them their complimentary member, Mrs. Margaret Ray, whose words of advice were pleasing and practical.

Hosie Bros. have just put into their store a new apparatus for utilizing the waste heat that usually goes up the chimney from a furnace or steam heater. All of the smoke passes through this before going up chimney, and the heat is given out in passing. It appears to be a practical thing.

Fourteen million pieces of mail matter could not be delivered last year because of illegible direction. All of it went to the dead letter office. A neat card printed in the corner of your envelopes will insure its return to you without the delay of the dead letter office. Let us print them for you.

Dr. Ambrose J. Gallison gave an informal and very entertaining talk on his recent trip to Europe at the Monday evening teachers' meeting. His description of diamond cutting in Amsterdam was particularly instructive and the views and souvenirs of many foreign cities were greatly enjoyed.

It is expected that the McParland liquor case will finally be tried next Saturday. Thomas Grover of Canton will represent the defendant, and Henry E. Ruggles the state. There are four complaints against McParland, three for violating the express law and one for illegal keeping of liquor.

The will of William Mann, filed in Dedham registry for probate, contains bequests of $100 each to the Congregational Missionary society, to the American Tract society and the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions. The will was executed July 15, 1897, and Willard Everett is named as its executor.

Before Associate Judge Ruggles in the district court this morning Anthony Ross, a youth, was convicted on the charge of the larceny of lumber from the yard at Singleton's mill and a fine of $10 was imposed. Another young man was before the court on the charge of intoxication, and it being his second offense he was fined $10.

Word received from A. L. Pierce, superintendent of the Wallingford, Ct., municipal electric lighting plant, states that for the month of October the company paid all operating expenses, bond interest, charged off five per cent. for depreciation, and made five per cent. on money invested, which is not a bad showing for a municipal plant.

Three hundred people attended the coffee party given under the auspices of St. Mary's parish at the Opera house Friday evening and the affair was successful in all respects. Local talent contributed their share in providing a fine musical and literary entertainment, which lasted an hour. Dancing followed, an intermission being taken for supper. Fales' orchestra of West Medway furnished excellent music.

On last Sabbath evening a very large audience was present at the Congregational church. Dr. Sneath led the company to the sea of Galilee and the places of interest by the sea. Miss Whiting, accompanied by the other voices of the quartet, sang most effectively "Blue Galilee." Mrs. Wallace rendered in a very impressive manner "The Man of Sorrows." The highest appreciation of these journeys is being expressed by those who attend them.

If a newspaper is not to publish the news what on earth is it for? Every issue of every newspaper in the world contains something distasteful to somebody, while the other fellow thinks it is just the thing. Just so, if you sit down at your neighbor's table, you invariably find something not to your liking, but you don't smash the dishes, throw the good wife out of the house, and "raise Cain" generally, simply because you see something you don't like.

There was the same observance of the Sunday closing law in town last Sunday as on the preceding Sunday. The confectionery and fruit stands were closed, while the druggists, news dealers and restaurant keepers transacted business as usual. Fruit was the only luxury one could not obtain, as the dealers who are allowed to keep open sell tobacco, cigars, confectionery and soft drinks, which constitute for the most part the stock in trade of those who closed their stores.

The great football game between the Phillips Andover eleven and the Walpole Athletic association, to be played in Walpole on the morning of Thanksgiving day, is already exciting comment, and doubtless a number will go from here, as it will be the "scrappiest" game of the season in this section. Among those who will play in the Walpole team will be Allen, an ex-Yale player; Kendall. an ex-captain at Dartmouth; Spear and Campbell, old Harvard players; Beiler, a former crack player at Williams; Morse, of the Institute of Technology. Last year Walpole played Phillips, the game resulting in a tie, and each side this year proposes to take the game.

The executive committee of the Y. M. C. A. are busy at work furnishing and equipping the rooms of the Association. It is their intention to make them attractive in every way, so that it will be the one place in town for our young men through the coming winter. In order to fully carry out the plans of the committee and have the rooms free from debt, about two hundred dollars more is needed, and any who have not contributed are invited to do so at once. Quite a number have sent in their subscription unsolicited and if the committee have not called on you, it would very much encourage them to receive your check for any sum you may feel disposed to give and you can rest assured it will be put to good use. Let them hear from you.

Recital in Odd Fellows' Hall.

The following attractive program will be presented at the recital in Odd Fellows' hall, next Friday evening, given under the auspices of the Epworth league, for the benefit of the Methodist church. It will be a rich treat for music lovers and those who enjoy hearing a good reader, all taking part being thorough artists in their respective lines:

Piano Solo	Selected	Mr. Kirkham.
Baritone Solo	"Night of Nights,"	Prof. McWatters.
Reading	"The Deacon's New Year,"	Mr. Everett.
Banjo	"Tripping Through the Meadow,"	Mr. Prince.
Reading	Extract from "Snowbound,"	Mr. Everett.
Baritone Solo	"Here and There,"	Prof. McWatters.
Banjo	a. "Last Rose of Summer," b. "The Dickey Galop,"	Mr. Prince.
Reading	"How Jimmy Tended the Baby,"	Mr. Everett.
Banjo	"Fair Harvard and Variations,"	Mr. Prince.
Baritone Solo	"Again I String My Lute,"	Prof. McWatters.
Reading	"Casey at the Bat,"	Mr. Everett.
Banjo	a. "Shepherd Boy," b. "Chinese Serenade,"	Mr. Prince.

A Two Weeks' Mission.

Rev. Father Cullen and Rev. Father Hespelein, two missionaries of the Redemptorist order, began a two weeks' mission at St. Mary's chapel at the 10 45 mass Sunday morning, when Rev. Father Cullen delivered the opening sermon. At 3 p. m. Rev. Father Hespelein gave an instructive talk to the children of the parish. The evening services began with the reciting of the rosary, Father Hespelein afterward delivering a sermon on "The Soul's Salvation." The devotions ended with the benediction of the blessed sacrament.

The mission this week is for the women of the parish and the chapel is crowded morning and night. The masses are celebrated at 5 and 8 a. m., one of the missionaries delivering brief instructions at each. In the evening the services include the reciting of the rosary, brief instructions, a sermon and benediction of the blessed sacrament.

Be Thoughtful.

The next time you get aboard an electric car remember the conductor has his hands and his head full all the time; he must collect fares with reasonable accuracy and give transfer tickets; he must notice when a passenger wishes to alight and when also that passenger is safely on terra firma; he must signal for each start when the incoming passengers get aboard; he must answer the questions of strangers and others; he must take care of the maimed, the halt, and the blind, and he must be watchful lest those who have drunk unwisely deep come to harm; the strain seems to be incessant; he must keep his temper and be civil; to be sure he is not a Chesterfield in grace and urbanity but he means no offence when he shouts, "Step lively, Lady, step lively!" He is merely trying to contribute something to the rapidity of movement which the modern urban demands as a right.

Y. M. C. A. Tickets.

The Secretary is now prepared to furnish membership tickets to all who may desire them, and will be at the rooms of the Association every evening this week, except Thursday evening, from 7 to 8 o'clock for this purpose. All are invited to call and secure their tickets at once as this will materially assist the executive committee in completing the equipment of the rooms. The gymnasium outfit has been ordered and is expected this week and the other furnishings will be secured as fast as possible, so it is expected the rooms will be open very soon.

CHAS. L. STEWART, Sec'y.

Oyster Supper.

Wednesday evening, at 6.30 o'clock, at the Universalist church, an oyster supper will be served under the auspices of the Y. P. C. U. Oysters scalloped and stewed may be obtained. A good entertainment will follow the supper. The admission for the whole affair is only twenty cents. Come and bring your friends.

Full of Truth.

Rev. James M. Albion of Malden occupied the Universalist pulpit in exchange with Rev. Dr. Hodge on Sunday, preaching a most interesting and intensely practical sermon, taking for his central thought, "A Teachable Spirit" He said: A famous person has said that life is not simply a drifting; this is a school. Christ was called the Master, and He spoke of His followers as disciples. We should have a teachable spirit; be open minded. We should avoid bigotry, whether in religion, politics, or anything else, for bigotry is possible in many things. We are related beings to the stars.

The great physician, the eminent sculptor the divine artist knows vastly more than about his art alone Shakespeare knew the country as well as London, he knew men and things in a wonderfully broad way; he had a passion for humanity. Such students of humanity were Scott, Dickens, Emerson, Gœthe. The merchant who knows only his business is narrow, and is missing one of the great objects of life. Women sometimes lead lives devoted entirely to society, vapid, shallow and unsatisfactory. Sometimes the home gets all the attention. They do not allow a speck of dust anywhere, but too often they allow dust to gather upon the mind and heart.

We must not close the mind and heart to the enrichments which God has provided. We must be hospitable to new truth, with our eyes turned toward the future as well as to the past. We are changing physically, mentally and morally continually. While we reverence the past, we must not idolize it. We must learn to be tolerant. We must be able to see good in the socialist, in Christian science. We must be ready to learn from an enemy.

True teachableness is humble. Beecher was willing to learn from whatever source knowledge was to be derived, hence his wonderful hold upon his listeners. One of the foes of a teachable spirit is pride. Shame is a good thing; shamelessness is not. When we realize that we do not "know it all," we are in a position to learn. Another foe is egotism. We should not be dogmatic. Lincoln was willing to admit he was wrong and to change, when conditions had changed. Wendell Phillips could change with changing conditions. The underlying facts of nature and humanity are always true. He who will not change is holding back progress. A bigot knows that he alone is right, when he alone may be wrong. It is easier to teach an ignoramus than a bigot. Like the pupil of the eye the bigot contracts in the presence of light.

Conservatism is another foe to teachableness; so also is indifference, that lukewarm, flabby unconcern which is so deadening, so chilling, so depressing. Court rather the fever of effort than the paralysis of indifference. Good will eventually conquer evil. We should be on guard lest we entertain angels unawares, and we know not that they are angels till they have taken their flight.

At the vesper service at 5 o'clock he spoke to a deeply interested audience upon "The Twentieth Century Church." He deplored the fact that we are not growing up a church-going people, that is, the Protestant portion, but he felt that the new century was to bring about a change. It is in the air. Phillips Brooks recognized it, and the signs of the times indicate it.

The twentieth century church will take hold upon the verities of life; it will have a deeper consciousness of God as a vital reality. The nation or people that would destroy God is drifting into anarchy. That has been tried and it has proven so. The man who loses faith in God will lose faith in everything else. Faith is everything, even in the business world. The world's credit is based upon faith. We are occupying ourselves with the material things of this world. Politics are not conducted on principle, as in the days of Washington, of Webster, of Lincoln, but the material side is pushed to the fore.

Without a consciousness of God men's hearts grow barren. They blunt their better natures with unfit books, unhealthy theatre attractions. The new church will have a simpler religion, a simpler creed; the pulpit will be more fearless, the pew will not put its thumbscrews upon the pulpit. It will not be a perfect church because man is imperfect. It will be no better than its members, because they can only live out what is in the heart. Truth is immortal, but it is useless unless it is incarnated into action. The new church will be founded upon the best of the old, and that which is based on truth will live and actuate its followers.

The Way It Works.

An editor in Pennsylvania asks for proposals from the merchants of the town to furnish him a pair of socks, a bushel of potatoes and five yards of calico, contract to be awarded to the lowest bidder. He says this is the way they do business with him when they want two dollars' worth of job work, and this is about the way of it it in most places.

An Old Resident Gone.

Joseph G. Hills died at his residence on Friday from heart trouble, after a brief illness, although he has been some what out of health for a couple of years. His death was very sudden and unexpected, for at the time of his death he was conversing with those about him and feeling as well as during the past few days. He was sitting in his chair when he suddenly threw up his hands and was dead.

He was born here in September, 1822, and spent the major portion of his life here, receiving his education at the Mount school, where he was a classmate of Sanford Hills, G. I. Partridge, Alfred Metcalf, Charles Thompson and others of our more aged residents more than seventy years ago He was engaged at one time in the straw goods jobbing trade, the rest of the time having been spent upon the farm. He was twice married, the first time to Miss Ellen Perkins of Dover, N H., one son, Albert, being born to them. He died at the age of sixteen. He was again married to Miss Mary Gilmore, three children being the result of that union, Mrs. Jennie G. Woodbury Hills. Mrs Carrie Hosmer of Newark, N. J., and Frank S Hills, who has been at work in Newark of late.

The funeral was solemnized at the house this afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. Dr Sneath of the Congregational church officiating.

Winter Nights' Entertainment.

Music lovers and those interested in eloquent platform lectures are promised a rare treat in the series of entertainments which are being arranged for by the young gentlemen and young ladies of the Congregational church, the initial entertainment of the course to be given in about three weeks.

It is a recognized fact that only a strictly high-class course will appeal to the people of Franklin and vicinity, therefore the talent that has been selected is of the best in their line to be found upon the platform today. Those who have interested themselves in the course are Addison M. Thayer, W. S. Johnson, W. C. Sherman, C. B. Johnson, Miss Grace Whiting, Miss Mabel Ray and Miss Laura Blake.

Mr. Thayer's extensive acquaintance with the best talent, his thorough knowledge of the desires of our people, coupled with the enthusiasm with which he has entered upon this affair, insure four magnificent entertainments, to be given at a popular price.

Especial effort has been made to arrange dates which do not conflict with the open meetings of the Alden club, the West Medway course or the week of prayer, and a glance at the attractions will at once indicate their merit. The tickets for the course are to be sold for $1.00, four entertainments; single admission 35 cents. Further particulars as to sale of seats, description of entertainers, etc., will be given later.

Friday, Dec 14—The Harvard Quartette of Boston and Lillian Pierce Hennigar, reciter.

Friday, Jan. 25—Col. L. F. Copeland of Pennsylvania, the king of platform lecturers.

Tuesday, Feb. 19—The Lyceum Stars of Boston, with Curtis Morse, impersonator.

Tuesday, March 19—The Imperial Band bell ringers and their carillon of 110 bells.

A Wonderful Presentation.

To those who have read the novel "Quo Vadis" and to those who have not read it there will be almost an equal amount of interest at the forthcoming production at the Opera house on Tuesday evening next. The plot deals with a Christian maiden who is triumphant in her faith, and who, in the simplicity of her religion, converts her pagan persecutor to the true cross. Nero, the Roman butcher, is a prominent character in the play. The management promise special scenery for every act, the entire original cast, and an absolutely perfect performance of one of the greatest plays the stage has ever seen.

We have the exalted enthusiasm of the Christian martyrs, their inspired and steadfast faith. We see the torture of the martyrs and the cruelty of the imperial court, and the doom in the arena. A vast amount of money has been spent on the production, the scenery and costumes being not only historically correct but alike beautiful and appropriate. The company is a most excellent one throughout, and without a poor or ordinary actor in it.

A Successful Affair.

There was a good-sized audience at Dean academy on Friday evening to witness the benefit performance in aid of the athletic association. Two plays were presented in a most finished manner. The stage setting was charming in the extreme, unusual taste being displayed in the arrangement. The audience was very appreciative, applauding vigorously the excellent work of the participants. Remarkably good music was furnished by the Dean orchestra, proving one of the features of the presentation. The two plays were "Per Telephone" and "A Difference in Clocks." Following is the cast:

"PER TELEPHONE."

Guy Harling,	Glenn S. Echols
Ned Austin,	George C. Phipps
Nan Cuzzin,	Maude L. Barron
Mary Halcome,	Edna P. Andrus
Nora, (servant)	Nellie Wilder

"A DIFFERENCE IN CLOCKS"

Miss Marie,	Miss Florence Elwood
Joshua Stebbins,	Ellis W. Jones

"Prince Pro Tem."

That delightful and popular musical fantasie, "Prince Pro Tem," comes to the Morse Opera house next Friday evening. It has met with great favor from Boston play goers, the opera being full of bright dialogue, plenty of diverting incidents and an abundance of pleasing music. The songs so numerous and of so catchy a nature would of themselves carry to success a much inferior opera. That Mr. Packard has got together an organization fully qualified to do justice to both author and composer is a testimonial to his managerial ability and good judgment, and that they work together in perfect harmony for the success of the opera is an evidence of his tact and discipline. The parts are so well balanced one against another that undue prominence is scarcely attainable, and while many individual hits are made they are not achieved at the expense of others. Everywhere the opera has been presented the audiences have shown every evidence of enjoyment, keeping up a running accompaniment of applause and laughter and calling for the repetition of the many songs and choruses to an extent that has deferred the final fall of the curtain to a late hour nightly.

"No establishment can long continue to do business on the strength of former prominence," says a persistent newspaper advertiser. "In every growing community the population is constantly changing, old citizens dying or retiring to private life, while new men are coming to the front. The public has a short memory. With new establishments as well as old showing daily enterprise, people cannot keep in mind business houses that have ceased to advertise."

Walker F. Cutting of Baldwinsville Mass., is not a man to be worried by trifles. He was riding homeward on a Boston and Maine express train the other evening, and the night being hot went out on the rear platform. His hat was blown off and in attempting to recover it he lost his balance and fell from the train, which was traveling 40 miles an hour. A passenger saw him fall, but before the engineer could be notified the train had reached Baldwinsville. The engine was at once detached and sent down the road to bring in the body. The crew shortly saw Cutting walking quietly along the track, still smoking the cigar which was between his teeth when he tumbled off. He was uninjured. He had recovered his hat, too.

From the army recruiting stations in Chicago there has been gathered a formidable addition to the slang of the day. Strictly speaking, "shavetail" is a "griffin" or "coyote" or "rooster," but frequently is called a "piebiter," and perhaps is known even more widely as a "ringtailed snorter." All these are terms of reproach addressed to the "rookie," or military recruit, in the United States.

A San Francisco schoolmistress recently married in defiance of the rule of the board of education that declares: "Whenever a female teacher marries her position in the department thereby becomes vacant." This teacher, however, refused to be removed. Accordingly she engaged an attorney, had the case argued before the city's highest legal authority and won it.

Attention is called by the Boston Evening Transcript to the fact that the modern rapid transit systems in our large cities are potent factors in checking the growth of centers of dense population. The low fare for long distances permits persons of moderate means to live in the suburban or semisuburban sections.

Newport, O., has furnished the champion eater. He is Jack Barre, and at a recent sitting he ate and drank six bowls of chicken soup, two spring chickens, two loaves of bread, six raw onions, four quarts of beer and three pounds of fish. He has challenged any one in the three cities who prides himself on his appetite.

Stop Wasting Your Strength.

Stop Making Yourself Weaker Every Day.

There is a Help—A Sure Help.

If you sow the seeds of wasted strength, you will reap a harvest of sickness that will follow you all your days. You can renew your life and strength by purifying your blood with SMITH'S GREEN MOUNTAIN RENOVATOR. Sow the seeds of strength with it, and you will be well and vigorous all your years. Don't be weak and sickly and unable to cope with life. Remember this remedy is made in Vermont, of pure, wholesome herbs, and is redolent of the green fields, fragrant woods and bracing air. It will give you STRENGTH.

"After twenty years of suffering with salt rheum, resulting in loss of flesh, nervous depression, loss of appetite and strength, six bottles of your grand blood Renovator has put me on my feet. I was badly broken out on shoulders, face, legs; tried physicians and many patent medicines but to no avail. Your Renovator has made a new man of me, and I cannot say enough in its praise as a great blood and nerve invigorator."

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

Statesmen, diplomats, travellers, trappers, Indian fighters, cow punchers and self-made men and women of many vocations will contribute to the entertainment of young and old in Companion homes. Theodore Roosevelt will write upon "The Essence of Heroism." The secretary of the treasury will answer the question, "What is Money." Frank T Bullen, the old sailor who spins fascinating yarns of life at sea, will contribute a story. W. D. Howells will describe the relations between "Young Contributors and Editors." Paul Leicester Ford will write about "The Man of the Dictionary"—Noah Webster. There is not space here to begin to tell of the good things already provided for readers of the new volume of the Youth's Companion—interesting, instructive, inspiring—from the pens of famous men and women. Illustrated announcement of the 1901 volume and sample copies of the paper sent free to any address. All new subscribers who send in their subscriptions now will receive not only the 52 issues of the Companion for 1901, but also all the issues for the remaining weeks of 1900 free from the time of subscription, besides the beautiful "Puritan Girl" calendar for 1901 lithographed in 12 colors and gold. MONUMENT ON A MOUNTAIN.

The Difficulty of Getting Heavy Stones for the Work to Lookout Mount's Crest.

A serious problem confronts the engineers in charge of the erection of the great New York peace memorial on the summit of Lookout mountain. The question is how to get the material for the monument to the top of the mountain, 2,000 feet above the surrounding country. The railroad which has been running to the top of the mountain as a freight line has been discontinued, and the rails will be sold for old iron.

It is unsafe even if it were in operation, the trestles and cross-ties being worn and rotten, says the Philadelphia Record. The track in its present condition will only safely stand a load of 30,000 pounds, the engineers say, while one of the stones to be used in the monument will weigh nearly 60,000 pounds, and many of them 50,000 pounds. There is no roadway near the spot where the monument is being erected, it being high above all the surrounding country. In case no other means can be devised to handle the material and move it to the top a road four miles in length will be constructed especially for the purpose.

Active Only at Night.

Surgeon McKenna, who has passed the last six months on the island of Mindanao, does not hesitate to maintain that the number of quadrupeds and insects enjoying existence in the moonlight of the tropics exceeds that of their daylight rivals; so much so, indeed, that whole species and groups or species are represented only by nocturnal creatures. Forests that remained as still as the grave under the glare of the vertical sun are all in an uproar within an hour after sunset.

One of the Trophies of War.

Capt. Lans, of the German navy, who took such a prominent part in the capture of the Taku forts, writes home that the Germans captured at that place 17 guns of various caliber and much ammunition. "These," declares Capt. Lans, "are the guns which have killed and wounded so many of my brave fellows, and which alas! like almost all the enemy's guns and ammunition, come from our native country. The guns are all modern quick firers from Krupp's."

wasted muscles and decaying bones.

What havoc!

Scrofula, let alone, is capable of all that, and more.

It is commonly marked by bunches in the neck, inflammations in the eyes, dyspepsia, catarrh, and general debility.

It is always radically and permanently cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I was a sufferer from scrofula from birth. My eyes were so affected that I was almost blind for days at a time. My neck began to swell so that I could not breathe freely. Medicines failed to do me any good until I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. Today I have excellent health." MISS KETTIE MCGUIRE, Silver Creek, Ky.

"I was troubled with scrofula and came near losing my eyesight. For four months I could not see to do anything. After taking two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla I could see to walk around the house and when I had taken eight bottles I could see as well as I ever could." SUSIE A. HAIRSTON, Withers, N. C.

Hood's Sarsaparilla expels all humors, cures all eruptions, and builds up the whole system.

Getting Thin

is all right, if you are too fat; and all wrong, if too thin already.

Fat, enough for your habit, is healthy, a little more, or less, is no great harm. Too fat, consult a doctor; too thin, persistently thin, no matter what cause, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil.

There are many causes of getting too thin; they all come under these two heads: overwork and under-digestion.

Stop over-work, if you can; but, whether you can or not, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, to balance yourself with your work. You can't live on it—true—but, by it, you can. There's a limit, however; you'll pay for it.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the readiest cure for "can't eat," unless it comes of your doing no work--you can't long be well and strong, without some sort of activity.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

PURSUED BY BRITISH

DURING the revolutionary war many deeds of valor were performed by people whose names have never been heard of by the present generation, but whose daring acts did much to foster the cause of liberty. The Hillards were a well-known family in the vicinity of Philadelphia, and while they had never been discovered in direct communication with the continental army it was fairly understood among the British troops that they were using their influence to aid the colonists.

"I should like nothing better," an English officer was saying, "than to capture one of that family, march him to headquarters and make him give an account of himself."

"Perhaps," a fellow officer returned, "you would not enjoy the capture of the young daughter of the household, who, it is said, is afraid of nothing this side of the sea. It is said that she is one of the most expert horsewomen in the colonies, and is often scouring the country at daybreak and does not return till dark."

Jane Hillard, a beautiful girl of 15, was standing at her horse's side, patting its glossy neck, while her mother was saying:

"I like not the thought of your going so far from home when the country round is infested with British soldiers."

"Why, mother," laughed the girl, as she sprang into the saddle, "I know every inch of the ground, as well as I know our own dooryard. And what can happen to me? There is no horse so fleet as mine, and I promise to take good care of myself." And giving the mare a touch with her whip, she went flying down the driveway toward the public road.

Jane rode along the smooth highway, every now and then looking over her shoulder to see whether any had noticed her during her swift trip. And at last, when she came to a large clump of elder bushes, she reigned in the mare, raised herself in the saddle and gazed in all directions. Seeing no one, she gave three short whistles, which were at once answered. She then started the horse, and in a moment had reached a thick underbrush a few rods off the public road. A young man came forward, raised his cap respectfully and said:

"Good day, Mistress Hillard. You are prompt in keeping an appointment."

"Good day, sir," she answered quickly. "I am glad I have not kept you waiting."

"I am trusting you with a most important message, which must be in the hands of Gen. Washington within 12 hours. If it is discovered, it means death to me and confusion to our troops. You are in great danger carrying it."

Jane placed the precious message within her riding cap, and had gone but a short distance when, on looking over her shoulder, great was her consternation to discover in the distance a party of English officers.

Jane Hillard was a brave girl, but her heart sank as she thought of the important letter intrusted to her, all that it meant to the continental army if it were discovered, and what would be her probable fate if she were made a prisoner of war. She put the spurs to her horse, and then began a ride which was an important one for the cause of liberty. On they went, the girl urging the mare over the uneven road, well knowing that one misstep meant certain capture and probable death, while the redcoats followed with wonderful speed.

"We are gaining!" cried one. "I'll wager that at the next turn of the road we shall catch her."

The men fairly flew over the road to the point beyond the bend where they expected to capture Mistress Hillard, and great was their surprise to discover that she was beyond their reach, but that she had completely disappeared! The men who had regarded the race as simply a joke to frighten the girl now vowed to find her and take her before the commandant.

"We'll ride right to her father's door, and the one who finds her and brings her before the officer of the day shall receive a liberal reward."

Jane Hillard spoke truly when she said she knew the country around, and when she saw the British were in pursuit of her she decided upon a desperate move. At a point hidden from the highway she vaulted her horse over the hedge, turned down the edge of a creek, and by the time her disappearance was discovered she was carefully skirting her way through her father's orchard. In a few moments she was galloping over the grass at the edge of the driveway, and soon arrived at the Hillard homestead.

No one was in sight, and the girl hastily sprang from her saddle, opened the door, and, leading her horse into the kitchen, securely fastened a great bar across the entrance. With great caution she led the mare through the living room, down the hall and the length of the state parlor into a little bedroom. She closed every door behind her, and she took the horse into the sleeping room she quite filled the space between the enormous bed and the old-fashioned dressing table.

"There!" she whispered, unfastening the saddle girth. "The redcoats won't get us this time, my girl."

In the meantime the officers rode up the lane to Hillard mansion, carefully looking for tracks in the dust, and one man knocked at the kitchen door so loudly with his riding whip that Mrs. Hillard hastily answered the summons, coming out of the cellar, where she had been assisting the maids in skimming the cream.

"We are looking," said the man, "for a maiden who rides about the country on a bay mare. She is, I believe, your daughter, madam."

"My daughter!" stammered Mrs. Hillard. "What can you possibly want of her?"

"We believe," went on the officer, "that she is carrying treasonable messages to the continental army."

"Why, sirs," cried the mother, "you are greatly mistaken. Jane is but a child, and she knows no more of the ways of war than yonder lamb."

"Well, madam," said the first speaker, "if you will assure me that she is doing no mischief, and promise me that she holds no communication with the continentals, we will bid you good afternoon."

There was great consternation in the household when Jane led her horse out of the best bedroom and told the story of her flight and her manner of escape.

Late that night, when all the household was asleep, a little figure stole out, and in a few seconds placed in the hands of the waiting messenger, a packet, which was in the possession of Gen. Washington before dawn. And that day the continental army gained a great victory.

Several months afterward Gen. Washington took dinner with the Hillard family, making the journey out of Philadelphia to personally thank the young girl who had risked so much for the cause so dear to her heart, her astonished family then hearing of it for the first time. The commander in chief of the army also wrote Jane Hillard a letter, which he signed, "Your faithful friend, G. Washington."—Troy Northern Budget.

FROM THE FIELD OF BATTLE.

A complete set of Mafeking siege postage stamps has been sold at a London auction for $180 and two sets of Mafeking paper money for $110.

The granite monument to be erected at Samoa by the officers of the American and British warships engaged in the harbor during the recent trouble is a joint memorial to the sailors slain in the engagements. One tablet will bear the names of the British, the other of the American dead, and both will be surmounted by the flags intertwined.

Apropos of British reports that Boers fired on hospitals and bearing parties, Surgeon Perry, of the United States marine hospital service, suggests that hospital tents be indicated by more than the Red Cross flag, which is indistinguishable unless there is sufficient wind to hold it out. He believes that the tents should be of green canvas or of green and white, and that noncombatants, presumably hospital men and surgeons, should wear red jackets.

The "Pom-Pom" gun, which has played such a prominent part in the South African war on the sides of both belligerents, has not proved a very great success with the British forces. Owing to the rough nature of the country over which the guns were dragged, and the pace at which the army traveled, the guns were thrown out of gear. Several experiments were tried to overcome this difficulty, but without success. This is said to be the reason why the Boers carried their guns about in the ambulance wagons, since, as these latter were fitted with springs, the guns were not thrown out of adjustment.

ALLY SLOPER'S PHILOSOPHY.

How strange it is that when a building catches a light the fire burns up but the house burns down.

I have been trying to puzzle out how it can be to a man's credit that he never has credit. Funny, isn't it?

Nothing is more ridiculous than for a clever man to complain of another's stupidity, for if we were all clever there would not be anybody left to listen to our good stories.

There is a legend to the effect that the ant is industrious, but the ant most frequently met with in towns, that is to say the tru ant, most certainly is not a type of industry.

There are two occasions when it is advisable for a man to hold his tongue; one is when he does not know anything respecting the subject of conversation, and the other is when he does and the rest of the company don't.

The usual method of commencing an epitaph is terribly inaccurate. It generally begins "Here lies John Jones," while as a matter of fact it ought to be "Here lie Tom Smith and Will Brown, respecting the late John Jones;" and then could follow those virtues which he was supposed to be possessed of.

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2.65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit. The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save. If your druggist can't supply you, it will be forwarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

Mr. H. H. Black, the well-known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan Co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have the attacks been that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croupy symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug, and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

WRENTHAM.

Daniel S. Farrington entertained the Kipling club Saturday night. Each guest on arriving handed in a card. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Grover Cleveland, Oom Paul Kruger, Miss Helen Gould, Jack Gardner, Willie K. Vanderbilt, Potter Palmer, Rudyard Kipling and Mrs. May Gill. The guests sat down to an elaborate dinner, consisting of oyster soup, broiled chicken, salads, frozen pudding and milk. After dinner the names of twenty-one famous persons were guessed, and Miss Mary Stone won the first ladies' prize and Charles Ruggles the gentlemen's, the former a box of stationery, the latter a bank. Later on whist was enjoyed. Mrs. C. S. Ruggles won the ladies' first prize, a silver shoe horn, and Frank J. Ruggles a silver pen holder. The consolation prizes were taken by Hiram A. Cowell, who won a lobster, and Mrs. M. A. Smith a ghost, marked respectively, "You're a lobster," and "You didn't have the ghost of a chance." Mrs. Farrington was the recipient of many handsome prizes, among them being several pairs of doves of great value.——The parts for the I. O. O. F. entertainment have been assigned and the play is said to be a remarkably amusing one.——The auction sale of the grocery stock of F. P. Reading commenced Monday night and will be held each evening until closed out.——The library is to be open Sunday afternoon and evening.

ACTORS AND MUSICIANS.

John Drew has discarded his mustache for the sake of looking youthful in "Richard Carvel."

Miss Effie Steward, the well-known dramatic soprano of New York, is now appearing in opera in San Francisco. Following her season there she will make a tour of the United States in concert.

Byron in the theater would be decidedly a novelty to our generation. Yet Sir Henry Irving is to risk the experiment. At the final curtain call of his Lyceum season he announced for the coming winter season the production of "Manfred."

The Russians have a veteran actress of whom they are very proud. Mme. Orlav, in spite of her being 95 years of age, recently appeared on the stage in a performance specially given in aid of a charitable institution. Mme. Orlav has the distinction of having been the first actress to play Lady Macbeth and Ophelia in the Russian tongue.

With the exception of Paderewski, most of the foreign musicians who came to America last year will be back again by December, and there will be some new to these shores. Kubelic, the youngster who plays Paganini and who has been the musical rage of London, will be among these. Another violinist to whom some interest attaches and who has been engaged for one of the Chicago orchestra concerts is Fritz Kriesler, an Austrian. He is 25 years of age and toured this country with Rosenthal when he was 14. His first Berlin concert last winter was a pronounced success and he has been the soloist of most of the prominent orchestras of Germany. Ernest von Dohnanyi, the Hungarian pianist, who is another Chicago orchestra engagement, appeared last spring with the Boston symphony orchestra.

Just Like a Man.

Mrs. Growells—Oh, dear, I feel miserable again this morning.

Mr. Growells—I'm glad to hear it, dear.

Mrs. Growells—What! Glad to hear that I feel miserable?

Mr. Growells—Yes; for a woman is never happy unless she is miserable.—Chicago Daily News.

No Hope.

Mrs. Spinks—I can't pay you. I have not a cent. Perhaps my husband will have some money when he gets home. I believe he's gone to a horse race.

Grocer (weeping)—Alas! madam, you are mistaken. It was not a horse race he went to. It was a church fair.—N. Y. Weekly.

Strong Imagination.

She—Mr. Jingle's writings show a great deal of imagination, don't you think?

He—Yes, they show that he imagines he can write poetry.—Philadelphia Press.

Best He Could Do.

Hix—What seems to be the trouble?

Dix—Got rheumatism in my right leg.

Hix—Doing anything for it?

Dix—Yes; limping.—Chicago Daily News.

THE RAILWAYS.

Railroad building in the United States last year assumed its old-time proportions, more than 3,500 miles having been constructed for that period. Illinois supplied 311 miles of the total.

The superintendent of the Pennsylvania railroad has a telephone in his private car. Whenever he wishes to communicate with any place upon the line, the car is stopped and a lineman makes connection with the wires along the track.

On the Lehigh Valley railroad a system of lettering its locomotives has been adopted which shall readily indicate the pulling capacity of each class. This, says the Railway and Engineering Review, should be of considerable assistance to yardmasters and others concerned in making up trains.

The first four weeks after the opening of the electric railroad at Cairo, Egypt, no less than 80 persons were killed. Since that time the weekly average of victims is seven or eight. This high rate of casualties is due in part to defective eyesight—eye diseases prevailing in Egypt.

According to a story from London the new underground railway there is proving a tonic for the appetite and enervated and debilitated people are now patronizing the road as a means of regaining lost health. The alleged tonic effects of the ride are ascribed to the ozone generated by the electricity.

Mexico has certainly the most luxurious, if not the most comfortable railways in the world. The rails of the Mexican Gulf railway are laid on sleepers of mahogany, and the bridges are built of white marble. On the west coast of Mexico there is another line which has sleepers of ebony and ballast of silver ore drawn from old mines beside the track. The reason for this apparent extravagance is that the engineers had no other materials on the route, and found it cheaper to use these than to import the ordinary plant.

USELESS INFORMATION.

An aeronaut recently created a sensation by attaching a bicycle to a parachute and making a descent from a balloon while seated on the machine.

Mrs. Jane Lindsay now holds the feminine championship for long distance riding. She has ridden 1,500 miles on the Merrick road, Long Island, in 165 hours 30 minutes. She now announces her intention of riding 2,000 miles to break the record.

A North side commuter tells this among other stories of his recent trip across the water: While in England he attended a country fair, where a showman was exhibiting a dwarf. A bucolic spectator denounced the show as a humbug, saying: "Why, your dwarf is nearly as big as I am, and I'm not a small man." "That's just it," blandly said the showman, "it's the biggest dwarf in the world."

Six years ago there were only five clubs in the United States Golf association. Now there are 25 associate and 225 allied clubs on the roll. There are now in existence about 20 state or other branch leagues subordinate to the United States Golf association and that in many instances a golf club is content to remain only a member of its local organization is shown by the record in Newman's Official Golf Guide for 1900 which gives a list of nearly 900 regularly organized clubs. New York heads the list, with 153. The same authority estimates that there are at least 200,000 golfers in the United States.

His Idea of Courage.

"Women often show more true fortitude than men," remarked the thoughtful man. "They are the brave ones, after all."

"You are right," answered Mr. Meekton, "perfectly right. Why, I once knew a woman who stood up in a debate and told Henrietta she was mistaken!"—Washington Star.

Wayside Communings.

Saymold Storey—I reck'n I'd better go an' warsh my face afore we tackle the next house.

Goodman Gonrong—Wat fur?

Saymold Storey—To disguise m'self. I've been there so often fur cold victuals the woman knows me.—Chicago Tribune.

HARD ON HERDERS.

Persecution of Some Sheepmen on the Western Ranges.

Even the Government Takes a Hand in the Oppression—Particulars of the Business of Raising Sheep.

The question is often asked: What will be the outcome of this seemingly ceaseless strife between the cattlemen and the sheepmen? The eastern man believes sheep rearing will eventually be given over to the farmers, leaving the cattle to roam the unoccupied public domain. The idea does not prevail in the plateau regions of the west, writes Capt. James H. McClintock, in Ainslee's. Where there are sheep the cattle must depart. Sheep may exist in propinquity with cattle, but the reverse is not possible. As before told, cattle are stationary, while sheep are necessarily nomadic. When feed is short the sheepman moves his flock to grass. The cattle owner, with his wild and scattered property, may not do this. He thrives or he "goes broke" in a single locality. The cattleman is handicapped at every point of the struggle. His crop matures more slowly. To secure the best results he must wait three or four years till his product is ripened by age. In not over one year out of four will cattle accumulate any respectable amount of fat on the western ranges. The price of the product depends much on the condition of the corn market, for range beef rarely if ever goes to the block direct. A single dry season means also no fat or growth for cattle, and means also no increase for the succeeding year. The tales of cattle barons and of enormous profits in the cattle business belong to the early days, when the plains were covered with knee-deep grass, with water in every gully. At present there is more money in the fattening of steers than there is in the rearing of them on the range. Under favorable conditions there is money in the cattle business, but favorable conditions are rarely present. The plateau region is now in its fourth successive year of drought. Thus it comes that the cattleman is no longer so determined to defend the heath he very reasonably holds his own.

The sheep owner, to begin with, is at considerable expense, for he has to maintain a man with every 2,000 head of his woollies. But he shears once or twice a year, and at the present prices for wool an average half-bred merino will bring him annually from that source alone $1.20. The increase of his flocks is fully 40 per cent. per annum. He need not wait several years, like his enemy, the cattleman, for entrance to market. His wethers at the present rates bring him $3.50 lean, and five dollars when in good condition, but spring lambs, four months old, are rated in the eastern markets at even a greater price per head than is paid for matured muttons. It is a business of quick returns and ample profits. To be sure, a change in tariff would markedly influence the wool quotations, but were the value of the wool almost to be destroyed, the sheepmen would still be on an equality with the cattle baron. The tendency is emphatically toward the rearing of cattle in compounds, such as are found on the great Maxwell grant of northern New Mexico, while the southwest ranges are being given over to the sheep. A few thousand head are annually fattened for exceptionally choice mutton on the alfalfa pastures of Arizona and south central California, but the owners prefer the lush spring grasses of the plains. The result is the same and the cost is far less.

It cannot be denied that the life of the sheep owner is far from a happy one. He is damned and persecuted on every side, and even the United States government takes a hand in the persecution. The main trouble is with the forestry division of the interior department. It is generally conceded that sheep have an injurious effect on the western water supply. Of course, rain falls upon the sheep as upon the just and unjust—but the forestry expert generally insists, (a) That sheep eat out all underbrush and even young trees, destroying the natural checks to too rapid evaporation, the conservators of the snowfall, and even threatening the future of the forests, deprived of their young growth; (b) that sheep pack the soil and clear away the grasses, thereby creating conditions that deprive the soil of porosity and render the run-off too rapid for the public weal; (c) that sheep herders, with their campfires, are a perpetual menace to the forests and are a prolific cause of destructive fires. Sheep owners deny these allegations specifically and entirely, yet the ideas are adhered to by the men who lead scientific thought in this direction. Even now a commission of eminent scientific experts is poking around in the mountains of Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona, attempting to get at the truth of the matter. The sheepmen's associations are welcoming them with effusion, and have contributed liberally toward their proper entertainment and education.

Should Have Waited Longer.

"I presume," said the Sweet Young Thing, "that you would call that man who waited 30 years to get to marry the woman he loved foolish."

"Me? No. Of course he would have shown more sense if he had waited another 30 years," said the Savage Bachelor.—Indianapolis Press.

Worrented.

"Got any fresh hen's eggs?" asked the storekeeper at Hkup's Corner.

"Yep," replied the farmer. "Here's 11 or eight, laid by the freshest hen in the business." Philadelphia North American.

FUN WITH THE LITTLE FOLKS.

"Daddy," asked little Jack, "where does a snake begin when he wants to wag his tail?"

"Dad," asked little Freddy, "how is it the baby fish don't get drowned before they learn to swim?"

Mamma—"What are you playing with, darling?" Darling—"With a caterpillar and two little kittenpillars, mother, dear!"

Granddad—"What makes you look so unhappy, Willie?" "'Cause nobody never calls me good unless I'm doing something I don't want to do."

Mother—"It was very cruel of you to cut the poor little worm in two, Molly!" Molly—"But, mummy, he looked so lonely all by himself, so I jus' cut him in two for company!"

Young Hopeful (to his big sister)—"I say, Nell, pass me the butter." Nell (in a tone of sisterly reproof)—"If what, Johnny?" Johnny (goaded to desperation by the delay)—"If you can reach it."

"Mother, will you please tell Reggie to be quiet?" "But he is quiet, dear." "Yes, mummy, but every time I hit him on the head with dad's walking stick he screams; an' I must hit him, 'cause it's the game!"

Reggie—"Mummy, dear, this is Tommy Jones." Mother (rather surprised)—"Yes, dear; but I've seen Tommy before." Reggie—"But you said yesterday I was the naughtiest boy you ever saw, so I brought Tommy."

Little Janet noticed that all the others helped themselves to mustard, but none was given to her. So, when no one was looking she spread some on her bread and took a big mouthful. Her hand immediately went up to her burnt mouth, but too proud to cry out she only put the bread away, remarking, in a voice that showed tears were near the surface: "I think I'll wait till that jelly gets cold."

FIGURES AND FACTS.

Two thousand gallons of air are a grown-up person's allowance for 24 hours.

New York city consumes 5,200,000 tons of ice a year, of which 4,500,000 tons is natural ice.

The assessed value of all property in California is $1,218,228,558. The value of railroad property is $47,711,755.

The weight of all the air on the globe would be 11 2-3 trillion pounds, if no deduction had to be made for space filled by mountains and land above sea level.

In his annual report for the fiscal year ended June 30 Land Commissioner French, of Michigan, says that the total amount of land now held by the state is 537,045 acres. During the year 47,211 acres of land were disposed of, for which $144,495 will be received, all but $14,238 having already been paid.

Some idea of the magnitude of the electric lighting machinery in this country may be obtained from the statement that the public lighting stations of New York city alone supply incandescent lamps each year to the number of 2,125,000. This is independent of those furnished by private plants.

FRANKLIN NEWS IN BRIEF

Latest Local Events and Personal Items of Interest to Readers.

"Prince Pro Tem" tonight.

Recital in Odd Fellows' hall tonight.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McKinnon on Tuesday.

Miss Ellen C. Slade has returned from a three-weeks' visit at Worcester.

The schools of the lower grade close today for a week's vacation, opening Dec. 3.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Feeley of Peck street died on Sunday.

Messrs. Rockwood, Doe and Nye are not expected to return till Tuesday morning.

Miss F. Alma Martin has returned to town after five weeks' absence on a case in Providence.

Mrs. C. E. Page and Mrs. E. J. Gilmore and daughter of Lowell are guests at their father's, F. A. Hartshorne.

A number of the residents with sporting inclinations took a view of the Sportsmen's show at North Attleboro.

It is quite likely that Justice Whitaker of Wrentham will try the McParland case tomorrow in the absence of Judge Doe.

Delicious homemade candies may be purchased in Odd Fellows' hall both before and after the entertainment this evening.

The Farmers' club will try to arrange for a car from Wrentham to allow those who wish to attend the meeting of the club at Daniel Brown's.

The junior and senior elevens of Dean academy engaged in a game on the campus Wednesday afternoon. The game was in favor of the juniors, with a score of 11 to 6.

Clarence E. Abbott is one of the promoters of the New England club, organized among the students at the University of Pennsylvania which come from New England.

The railroad commissioners gave a short hearing Monday on the petition of the Milford, Attleboro & Woonsocket Street Railway company for authority to issue $58,000 stock and $50,000 bonds. There was no opposition.

If you patronize the entertainment in Odd Fellows' hall this evening you will not only have the satisfaction of getting your money's worth, but that you have helped a worthy cause as well. The proceeds will be applied on the debt of the M. E. church.

The concert and ball to be given by the Jolley club next Wednesday evening promises to be one of the most numerously attended affairs of this kind held in the Opera house in a long time. There will be a large number of guests from the vicinity towns.

The superintendent of streets has been instructed by the selectmen to see that the bylaw against throwing rubbish in the streets is enforced. The evil of depositing old paper and dirt in the highway as a convenient way of disposing of it is a growing one.

The gentlemen members of the Franklin Country club will have a handicap tournament on Thanksgiving forenoon, a large proportion of the membership contesting. There is a good deal of interest, and it is quite likely some records will be broken.

Those who attend the football game between the Walpole Athletic association and the Phillips Andover team at Walpole on Thanksgiving day can go on the 9 a. m. train and return here in time for dinner at 1.10. Indications are that a good many will go up, as the game will be a hot one.

The body of the late Francis Talcott was brought here from Dorchester this noon for interment in the Union street cemetery. Mr. Talcott was the father of Mrs. W. A. Wyckoff, and died at the residence of his son, Fred, on Tuesday, aged 82. A brief service will be had at the grave, in charge of Rev. Dr. Sneath.

Clement Farley, a weaver in the employ of the Glendale Woolen company, drowned himself in the mill pond at Glendale early Monday morning. The man's mother and a brother resided here on Union street and he leaves a widow and four children at Glendale, where he had lived for 15 years. He was 35 years of age.

Lawrence guild of St. John's mission will conduct a Thanksgiving candy sale next Tuesday afternoon and evening, Nov. 27th, at the store in Opera house block. A full line of the very finest varieties of homemade candy will be on sale at prices which will defy competition. Buy your Thanksgiving candy of the guild.

While Milton A. Darling, the night watchman employed at Thayer's mill, was going to his work Wednesday evening, about 5.30, he was struck by a hand-car while crossing the tracks near Singleton's mill. Fortunately he was not hurt, but was so badly shaken up that he was obliged to suspend work for the evening.

The town clerks of Wrentham, Franklin, Foxboro, Medway, Bellingham and Norfolk met in the Town hall here recently and examined and compared the vote cast for representative. Albert F. Bemis of Foxboro and George W. Bullard of Medway were elected. The vote cast for A. F. Bemis was 1504, and G. W. Bullard was 1309.

Milford High school football team defeated Dean academy second team of Franklin 5 to 0 on Town park, Milford, Saturday afternoon. Among those who played for Dean were, r. e., A Stone; r. t., Evans, Wing; r. g., Brookhouse; c., Bassett; l. g., Echols; l. t., Woodward; l. e., W. Stone; q. b., Currie; r. h. b., Peabody; f. b., Hixon.

One of the pleasant features of the week's Y. M. C. A. work in Milford was the singing of Mrs. Leslie Anna Stewart of Franklin. Mrs. Stewart possesses a voice of rare sweetness and sympathetic tone, and enters fully into the spirit of the song. She will undoubtedly be heard again in the Sunday meetings. It is probable that she will devote much of her time to singing in services of this character in the future.—Milford Journal.

James J. Valentine, president of the Framingham National bank, has just received by mail a $2 bill on the old Framingham State bank, which was incorporated March 25, 1833, accompanied by the request that it be redeemed. The State bank went out of existence more than thirty years since, but the redemption request will be honored, nevertheless. The bill received is a well-preserved one, and it bears the signature of Oliver Dean, president, who was also founder of Dean academy.

There was a goodly number at the Universalist church on Wednesday evening to enjoy the feast provided by the Young People's society. Oysters stewed and scalloped, cold meats, jellies, pies, cake, etc., were provided, and after the supper all adjourned to the church parlor, where an interesting literary and musical program was carried out as follows: Piano duet by Misses Nixon and Metcalf, reading by Mrs. Haslam, piano solo by Miss Gould, phonograph selections by Fred. W. Haslam, vocal solo by Miss Jessie Corbin, readings by Dr. Hodge, and reading by Miss Linna Ferrer, all of which were thoroughly enjoyed. A gratifying sum was netted as a result of the evening's entertainment.

Many people do not know the names of the different sizes in which coal is sold. It runs in eight sizes, each regulated by the screen over which it passes: Lump, steamboat, furnace, egg, stove, nut, pea and buckwheat. Lump coal passes over bars seven inches apart, steamboat five inches, furnace three and one half inches, egg two and five eighths inches, stove two inches, nut one and one-eight inches, pea three quarters of an inch, and buckwheat one half an inch. Some furnaces do well with furnace but will not heat with egg coal, and others are just the opposite. Stoves follow the same fancies. The writer once used a stove which would burn pea coal finely but stove size caused many troubles.

A Boston paper asks "How many of the pupils in the Boston Grammar schools—or their teachers, either, for that matter—can tell you off-hand what county they live in, and the name of the lieutenant governor of Massachusetts and the names of the present members of President McKinley's cabinet? We imagine if that inquiry were addressed to the teachers and scholars in most any city or town the failure to answer would be almost unanimous. The trouble with the school system is that the curriculum embraces a smattering of study along a wide territory, with too little attention to matters of interest and value right under the pupils' eyes. It is of value that the pupil should know and understand local conditions first, as well as to study those of Russia or Germany.

Recently a certain school teacher in the lower grades had an interesting talk with a number of her scholars, who had gathered around her desk at recess time. They were each telling in childish fashion what they were going to be when they grew to manhood and womanhood. There were would be lawyers, doctors, carpenters, milliners, dressmakers and followers of all the trades among them, and one was going to be president of the United States. Finally a certain young miss chirped up, "I'm going to be married, like my mamma." "Married!" exclaimed another young miss scornfully, "well I guess I'm not. I'm going to grow up and be a school teacher," and she looked for approval at that surprised representative of the profession, who sat behind the desk. It was rather hard on the school teachers.

Local hunters have been enjoying the favorable weather and their hunting togs have been donned more frequently this fall than usual, with varying success. We have yet to hear of any local hunter bringing in a fox, all being content with smaller game—birds and squirrels. Woodcock in any quantity has been scarce. It is the theory among some hunters that they must have come along in this vicinity during a storm and were carried right through, without making a very long stop. The driving north-east winds lately did not induce them to tarry long in this vicinity. The return of the hunting season brings reports of fatal shooting accidents, so numerous that a man seems to be taking his life in his hands if he goes hunting, or perhaps it would be more correct to say if he goes hunting with an inexperienced hunter, for it seems that most of the accidents are due to lack of experience and knowledge of hunters' ways. A hunter had better go alone than with a novice at hunting. The latter is apt to become excited at the sight of game, and to shoot hastily at the risk of life or limb of his companion.

Assumes Leadership.

Rev. Dr. Sneath and W. S. Richardson represented the Congregational church here at the installation ceremonies, on Wednesday, of the Medway Congregational church, which has had but two pastors in its history of sixty-two years, each of whom was compelled to resign on account of failing health.

The day was a memorable one in its history, because it marked the installation of the third pastor, Rev. Robert M. Drawbridge, by a council of ministers from the Mendon conference of churches, the last previous installation being twenty-eight years ago. The installation hymn sung was the same as sung at that time, at the installation of Rev. Rufus K. Harlow, who is now in California in search of renewed health and strength. The church was handsomely decorated, the exercises being held afternoon and evening. A fine supper was served by the ladies of the church. Dr. Sneath offered the right hand of fellowship, Rev. Mr. Swartz of Mansfield gave the charge to the pastor, and Rev Mr. Wheelock of Millis the charge to the people.

The new pastor was born in Chelsea, Oct. 24, 1869, receiving his education in Worcester academy, from which he was graduated in 1890. He fitted for the ministry at Brown university and Newton seminary, working his way through both institutions, and for three years was pastor of a Congregational church in Union, N. H., from which place he comes here. He takes keen interest in young people and in out door sports, being prominently identified with the Brown university football team during his studies in that institution. Sept. 29, 1897, he married Miss Charlotte R. Davis of Farmington, N. H.

The church over which he is now installed has a united membership of 199, and is in most prosperous circumstances. It was organized in 1838 with thirty four members, but has admitted over 600 to membership to date. Its oldest member is Hon. M. M. Fisher, now in his 90th year.

Do Likewise.

The Hyde Park Y. M. C. A. has just been the recipient of a $25,000 gift to complete the plans already under way in that organization. The giver refuses to have his name known, but the money has already changed hands. Here is a tip for some Franklin friend of the Y. M. C. A. which is forming here. The gift need not be that in amount, but a lesser amount given in the proper spirit cannot fail of its reward. About $300 is now needed to complete the proposed plans, and when this is raised Franklin will have a Y. M. C. A. of which none of our citizens need be ashamed.

Those Entertainments.

There are already a good many inquiries in regard to the proposed entertainments to be given at the Congregational church, and we can state that every one will be of the highest grade, and worth vastly more money than is charged. The programs will be popular ones, calculated to please all classes, and a large number of tickets have already been asked for. They will be in the hands of the solicitors and at Mr. Nye's store in a day or two. See advertisement elsewhere for list of attractions.

Well Worth Hearing.

The Alden club will hold its regular open meeting on Monday evening, at which time an illustrated lecture will be given by Rev. H. G. Spaulding, on Hawthorne's "Marble Fawn," with accompanying stereopticon views. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance of the members of the club and of gentlemen as well, as the lecture is an especially pleasing one, and calculated to please everyone. The speaker will commence promptly at 7.30. Please bear this in mind.

The December Delineator is now on sale at N. C. Nye's. It is full of Christmas ideas and suggestions.

Farmers' Club.

Franklin Farmers' club met Monday evening, Oct. 29, with E. S. Cook. C. M. Allen was chosen committee to procure a lecturer from the state. Mr. Cook read the paper of the evening, "Our Forests: What varieties of trees make them most valuable? At what age do different varieties become suitable for timber?" He said in part:

Our forests consist of white and pitch pine (or sometimes called Yankee and hard pine), several varieties of oak, maple, chestnut, ash, beech, birch, hickory, and a sprinkling now and then of cedar and hemlock trees. White pine and chestnut may lead a trifle in value, but oak and maple are very close seconds. Pine or chestnut when ready for market will bring more than oak and maple. At first thought anyone acquainted with our forests would say white pine and chestnut were first in value. They would be if some one gave you the lot already grown, but it is a different thing if you have to hold the land subject to taxes and fires from forty to 100 years for pine, and from thirty five to seventy years for chestnut. White oak and maple can be cut to good advantage at anywhere from twenty to thirty years' growth. Maple takes a prominent place in the list for it is a rapid grower and worth about the same as oak, and the cost of handling is a great deal less, for it is much lighter than oak; also the difference in weight cuts the freight to city markets. Taking everything into consideration maple makes a good effort to reach first place in value. Take all growths at thirty-five years and chestnut takes the lead; at forty-five years pine and chestnut are about equal in value, but at a quick growth of twenty-five years oak and maple are worth the most.

Pine is suitable for timber anywhere from thirty-five to 100 years, chestnut from forty to eighty years, maple from thirty five to sixty, and oak from fifty to 100 years or time of decay. The chestnut tree has a ready market at a good figure in more ways than any other varieties. It is used as wood, poles, piles, posts, ties, and as a timber has no equal. The rest of the varieties are so limited in quantity in this section as to be hardly worth mentioning. The hickory is a valuable tree, in fact, one of the very first quality, but a slow grower and very scarce. The ash also is valuable for special uses and the beech is a very hard wood and used in mills. Birch is a good wood and finds ready sale. Pitch pine can be handled to advantage, and even the poplar tree makes good wood if handled right.

A general discussion, readings and refreshments followed.

"Quo Vadis."

"Quo Vadis," the most powerful and convincing of all religious plays, will be presented at the Opera house next Tuesday evening. The play opens in the house of Aulus, where we see Vinicius and Lygia in the first dawn of their love. Petronius and Ursus appear; Lygia is carried to Nero's palace; the revels begin; Ursus rescues Lygia from Vinicius; she flees to the Christians; Vinicius follows her; she takes refuge with St. Peter and his followers; the Christians come and go on the stage; Nero is in many scenes and his frivolity is more prominent than his cruelty; Rome is burned, and its glare is seen over the doomed city; the Christians are persecuted and three of them are burned at the stake, while they predict ruin for Nero. The scene in the arena is the last, and in this Lygia is rescued by Ursus from the horns of the bull. The company is excellent and well-balanced, and the costumes, scenery and effects are correct, adequate and beautiful.

Tremont Theatre, Boston.

For the third week of his very successful engagement at the Tremont theatre, beginning Monday, November 26, E. S. Willard will revive Henry Arthur Jones' powerful play, "The Middlemen," one of the strongest types of the modern drama. One man dominates it throughout—Cyrus Blenkarn, the patient, humble, meanly-dressed potter, whose uncouth externals but emphasize the lights that burn within—the fiery soul, the illuminating mind, the great heart, the unquenchable courage, the unwearying perseverance. This striking figure is made an actual, living personage by Mr. Willard, whose impersonation is extraordinary for its fascinating naturalness, its simplicity and directness, its depth and suggestiveness, its passion and its pathos—in short, its wealth of human feeling." "The Middlemen" will be presented on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings and at the Thanksgiving day matinee. In compliance with the urgent request of many who were unable to see "The Professor's Love Story" last week, that delightful comedy by the author of "The Little Minister" will be revived for two more performances on Thanksgiving night and at the Saturday matinee, and these will positively be its last representations in Boston this season.

Worth Heeding.

The pneumonia bug is sailing swiftly up and down our streets. The grip microbe is crawling out of the healthy lungs in which he has been spending the summer, and all the cohorts of bacteriology are getting ready for the winter trade. The sudden change in the weather started them all in business again, and it is rumored that they are going to boycott the physicians' union. It is ideal weather for catching cold, for people are slow to put on winter clothing when they should. Men do not like to wear heavier overcoats, and women are too apt to keep their winter suits fresh as long as they can. Because of these things and because of the weather, the bugs are going to have a busy time of it. It is the kind of weather that raises the death rate, and a word of precautionary warning is in order.—Milford Journal

"Prince Pro Tem,"

An attraction of unusual interest, which had such a long and successful run in Boston, will be offered to the patrons of the Opera house this evening. The opera, with its abundance of good music, hilarious fun and wealth of scenery and costumes and its splendid array of talent, has caught on with every class of theatre-goers. There is a fascinating feminine contingent, the stage settings are very beautiful and the light effects please the eye. To the numerous humorous and catch songs there are stirring choruses and ensemble numbers, making it a performance well worth witnessing

The Youth's Companion Calendar.

More thought and expense than ever before have been lavished on the calendar which the publishers of the Youth's Companion will present to everyone subscribing for the new volume for 1901, since it is to be a souvenir of the paper's 75th year. It is an exceptionally attractive calendar, and has been designed and lithographed for the Companion exclusively. The central figure of the calendar is an ideal portrait of a Puritan maiden of Plymouth, and the twelve colors in which the calendar is lithographed reproduce the delicate coloring of the artist's original painting with perfect fidelity.

After the usefulness of the calendar is past, the portrait of Priscilla can be cut out and framed and preserved as a beautiful household ornament.

This calendar, which is sold to non-subscribers to the Youth's Companion for 50 cents, will be given to all new subscribers for 1901, who will also receive, in addition to the fifty-two issues of the new volume, all the issues of the paper for the remaining weeks of 1900 free from the time of subscription. Illustrated announcement of the volume for 1901 will be sent free with sample copies of the paper to any address. The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass.

Fashion in a Smile.

The origin of any particular fashion is somewhat hard to discover and has puzzled many of those who like to sift things to the bottom. Fashion has always been described by men as a woman and a tyrant to boot. She regulates the cut of our clothes, the color of our hair, the nature of our amusements, the food we eat, the places we live in, the houses, furniture, etc., we use, our pronunciation of words, the books we read, the things we talk about, the people we know, the way we shake hands and even the thoughts we think, but up till now she has not interfered with us in any other way. Now however, says the Chicago Evening News, she is encroaching a little further, and there is this year a fashion in smiles. At the beginning of the year it was the "thing" to smile brightly, with wide open eyes and showing the teeth; now the smile is altered, and the present one in vogue is a little sad and drooping, with a touch of pathos in it, and the eyes are cast down slightly. There are people who study these things and it is to be hoped that they get some satisfaction out of them, but they must find it irksome at times, one would think, to discover novelties in the way of fashionable crazes, to keep the ba[illegible] r[illegible]ing. All this makes the routine of a woman who aspires to be "fashionable" above all else one of constant hard work and unremitting attention to—herself. What with keeping up with every new movement and inaugurating several on her own account, social duties, dress, face massage, shopping, the hundred and one things that make up her day, and finally the "rest" cure, or some such relief from the season's gayeties, the life of the ultra-smart woman is one of constant toil. Her humbler sisters envy her, but, if they only knew, would be more contented with the groove into which they are fitted.

Advice from a Business Man.

Not the least important advice to be given the aspirant for honors as a substantial business man is to marry. Though there is no lack of unhappy marriages and many failures result therefrom, it is nevertheless true that a good wife is generally a source of strength in a man's fight for success, says Alexander H. Revell in the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post. Dress as well as your means will allow. Even be a little extravagant in this regard. Be persistently hopeful and aim high. Strike a good, brisk, steady pace, look straight ahead, and never let a cheap jest or sneer, a criticism, a mistake or a seeming failure stop you, but march forward over every obstacle and if you fail to reach the goal at which you aim you will get near enough to it to justify every effort; and if you are square, sincere and charitable in the contest you will find that the game has been well worth the candle, and that it is no small thing to win an honorable place among the plain business men of America.

Porto Rico has added a new word, "Spigoty," to the English language. A dark-complexioned member of the American signal corps was nicknamed "Spaghetti," and this was contracted into "Spigoty." His comrades noted that the Porto Ricans had the same complexion, and therefore called them "Spigoties." The word has spread throughout the island, and is applied to anything Porto Rican, as a "spigoty hat" or a "spigoty collar." "Can you talk spigoty?" has become a common salutation in the island.

A rich widow of Topeka, Kan., has given her lawyer these instructions: "I don't want my body embalmed. I want a pine coffin, to cost not more than ten dollars. There must not be more than the hearse and two carriages at my funeral."

HEADACHE

Pain back of your eyes? Heavy pressure in your head? And are you sometimes faint and dizzy? Is your tongue coated? Bad taste in your mouth? And does your food distress you? Are you nervous and irritable? Do you often have the blues? And are you troubled about sleeping?

Then your liver is all wrong.

Gentlemen:—I must say in regard to GRAIN-O that there is nothing better or healthier. We have used it for years. My brother was a great coffee drinker. He was taken sick and the doctor said coffee was the cause of it and told us to use GRAIN-O. We got a package but did not like it at first, but now would not be without it. My brother has been well ever since we started to use it.

Electroplating the Dead.

Dr. Variot, of Paris, has discovered a process for embalming bodies which it is thought will prove a great success. He not only embalms but metalizes the bodies by the Ruolt process, just as it is done with a fork or a spoon. In this manner they can be preserved indefinitely, and in such perfection that the most imperceptible wrinkles and lines are reproduced, and the embalmed body has the appearance of a metal statue. The process is as follows. After a bath in pure carbolic acid, and being strongly rubbed with nitrate of silver, the body is submerged in a galvano-plastic (?) bath, after which a slight layer of nitrate is applied to it.

MAXIMS OF C. P. HUNTINGTON

The great secret of success is laying by a nest egg and adding to your store, never spending more than you make, and being strictly economical.

False pride is an enormous obstacle. I know young men in New York who would not carry a trunk along Fifth avenue for all the frontage they could pass, because they would be afraid that they might meet some girl they knew.

Another principle I have constantly obeyed is "business before pleasure." The chances are as good to-day as they were—they are even better. But I do not think that the life of one who has accumulated a hundred millions, more or less, is in the least inspiring. It dazzles, it bewilders the struggling youth. It may inspire him for a time but that inspiration soon wears off.

Appreciate the value of to-day. That's my advice to young men. It has been my rule through life—I am nearing the century mark now—not to look forward, for the future is a blank. To-day is the all-important issue. I have never gone against the tide nor worried while my schemes were maturing. A farmer sows a field of wheat. To worry over it would merely sap his energy. The wheat requires his attention at the harvest.

In my mercantile life I have noticed the man who arrives at his post on time and not one minute later, and who leaves on the minute and not one second later. He does no more than he has to do and does not do that well. Then there is the man who arrives ahead of time and works late if need be. He takes an interest in his work and is anxious to be advanced. I have always lived within my means and always strived for advancement.

When I was a boy on my father's farm in Connecticut I worked hard, utilizing every moment, for there was plenty to do. But if I had any spare time I did chores for the neighbors. I never wanted for anything I needed! I always got it. But many buy things they do not need. When I went to New York in 1836 I had quite a sum of money, the result of my savings, judicious investments, and little tradings about the neighborhood.

It Tried Her Faith.

They were sitting on the sandy beach, and no word had been spoken by either for a full minute.

"You doubt me!" he at length exclaimed. "Have I not told you over and over again that I love you, and you only; and did I ever tell you an untruth, Katherine?"

"I would that I could have absolute faith in you," she replied, stifling a sob; "but I heard you tell uncle that you once caught a brook trout that weighed three pounds and six ounces." And the tears flowed down her fair young face, while he tapped the sand with his foot and solemnly gazed o'er the wide blue sea.—London Answers.

Good as an Alarm Clock.

"Are you never afraid of burglars in your flat, Deming?"

"No, never. The baby and the parrot take turns in keeping us awake all night."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Catarrh

Its cause exists in the blood, in what causes inflammation of the mucous membrane.

It is therefore impossible to cure it by local applications.

It is positively dangerous to neglect it, because it always affects the stomach and deranges the general health, and is likely to develop into consumption.

It is radically and permanently cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla which removes the cause, cleanses the blood of scrofulous and all other impurities and gives vigor and tone to the whole system.

The voluntary testimonial of R. Loso, California Junction, Iowa, is one of thousands equally good. It reads: "I had catarrh in the head three years, lost my appetite and could not sleep. My head pained me and I felt bad all over. I was discouraged. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and now have a good appetite, sleep well, and have no symptoms of catarrh."

Spread Like Wildfire.

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare, a leading druggist, of Belleville, O., writes. "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years. You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickly, rundown man or woman. Price 50 cents. Sold by A. C. Mason, druggist.

First and Foremost

In the field of medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It possesses actual and unequalled merit by which it cures all diseases caused or promoted by impure or impoverished blood. If you have rheumatism, dyspepsia, scrofula or catarrh you may take Hood's Sarsaparilla and be cured. If you are run down and feel weak and tired you may be sure it will do you good.

The favorite family cathartic is Hood's Pills.

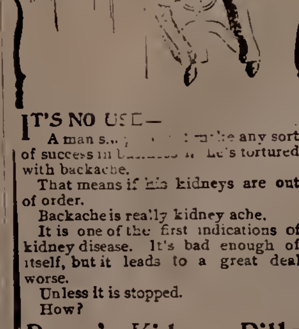
"Not at all. Don't tell anyone, but I call him that because nobody about the house can make him fly as well as my wife can."—Chicago Tribune.



IT'S NO USE—

A man simply can't make any sort of success in business if he's tortured with backache.

That means if his kidneys are out of order.

Backache is really kidney ache.

It is one of the first indications of kidney disease. It's bad enough of itself, but it leads to a great deal worse.

Unless it is stopped.

How?

Doan's Kidney Pills

There's not a form of kidney trouble that this wonderful little remedy will not cure, and the people stay cured.

Mr. John C. Meloon, grocer and provision merchant at the corner of Bridge and 7th streets, Lowell, Mass., says:—

"In the spring of 1896 I was forced, from severe pain in the back, to procure Doan's Kidney Pills at Ellingwood & Co.'s drug store, at the corner of Merrimack and Central streets, and take a course of the treatment. It was speedily followed by absolute relief, and up to date I have not had a symptom of a return."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers, or sent by mail on receipt of price. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no substitute.

Strange Reptiles.

A western writer thinks one of the severest tests ever put upon his risibles was endured at a London dinner table. He was seated next a lovely, rosy-cheeked, gray-eyed English girl, who displayed a most absorbing and flattering interest in his native land. She appeared to have imbibed some extraordinary ideas about the perils to be encountered in the newly-settled regions of the United States, and tried not to look incredulous when she was assured that things were really not as bad as she imagined. "I'm sure it's pleasant to be told there are not rattlesnakes in all the gardens," she said, with a pretty smile, "but my cousin wrote not long ago that he had seen over 40 wigwams in one little village. Perhaps," she added, as her companion made no immediate reply, "the wigwams are not as venomous as rattlesnakes, are they?"—St. Louis Republic.

To Reform Him.

She—No, I do not think you would make me a good husband.

He—Ah! but I'm sure you'd make me one. Please try.—Philadelphia Press.

McCLURE'S MAGAZINE FOR 1901.

$1.00 Per Year. 10c. Per Copy.

Here are a few of the noteworthy features

"KIM." A Great Novel of Life in India.

By RUDYARD KIPLING.

It is the latest, longest and most important product of Mr. Kipling's genius, the most noteworthy contribution to modern fiction. This author returns to the field of his earliest triumphs and writes of that mysterious country with all his extraordinary power of description. It is a masterpiece of literature.

"WITHIN THE GATES." A Drama of The Seen and Unseen.

By ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS WARD.

This is the author's latest discussion of the great problem of death and the resurrection and carries the problem beyond the grave. It is certain to arouse as much comment as her earliest work on this subject.

"More Dolly Dialogues," by Anthony Hope. "The Newest Science," by great writers. "The Jimmie Stories," by Robert Barr. "Wall Street Stories," by Edwin Lefevre. "Stories of Animals," by W. D. Hulbert. "Next to the Ground," by Martha McCulloch Williams. "Great Character Sketches." "Dramatic Episodes in American History." "Unpublished Chapters of History." "Memories of a Great Actress." LAUGH WAS ON SILAS

BY A. O. ELEEN.

IT ALL started when Silas and Leroy got the hoss swapping fever. It was one of the old driver's tales and he let it go with a free rein to a little crowd of horsemen up in Taylor's stable on Oak street one evening this week.

Sile and Leroy belong over on the Cape, and they know more or less about hosses. They have owned a good many, too, in years gone by. At a swap they are considered all right, but—well, it was this way.

About six months ago Sile met Leroy at Town House corner. They had driven in to get a few provisions and such like at the grocery store, and they got out, [illegible], and each surveyed the other's horse with a critical eye.

"Want to swap?" queried Sile.

"Dunno; ain't very partick'er," replied Leroy.

"That's a mighty good hoss I got in 'tween those sharves there, I tell you."

"Looks like a good critter, but I like the one I've got here, pretty well."

"Yes, I suppose that'n is all right for you though I thought as how maybe you'd like this'n better fer your purpose. Ther's different kinds o' good hosses, just as ther's different kinds o' good men, an' a good hoss hain't allus got just the kind o' goodness that we's lookin' fer."

"That ar's true, an' sometimes I think I might get a hoss with a goodness leetle but better suited to my needs than this'n is, though I don't know as I could. Perty well suited as it is, any way."

"This hoss I've got here might have just th' kind o' goodness ye're a-lookin' fer, and that'n yer've got might have th' kind o' goodness I'm a lookin' fer ef we 'us to try 'em. But I'm a pert we. satisfied myself with this hoss o' mine."

To make a long dicker terminate briefly on paper, I'll just say that they swapped and Sile got ten dollars, a briar pipe and an ox goad for hoot. Apparently the horse he had let Leroy have was a winner in every respect. At least, that's what Leroy himself thought as he drove home.

"I've got the best of this trade all right," he mused. "That horse of mine ain't got no great speed. I can't see anything wrong with this one. Wonder how Silas will like the trade he made. S'pect he'll come after me with a shotgun when he finds out the cuss has fits."

But the weeks rolled by, and Silas didn't hear a word of fault from Leroy. When they met, the latter seemed just as pleasant as ever, although it might have been noticed that the subject of horses was not introduced.

Don't think that he was a fool. Far from it. He was only a shrewd old state of Maine farmer, who was willing to wait his turn, when a neighbor got the best of him. He had soon discovered that the horse he had secured from Silas was worse than useless, as he had fits upon the least provocation. So he looked at the roof of his mouth and saw where it had been cut a thousand times for bleeding the poor animal. Then turned him out to pasture and—laid for Silas.

One day last week Leroy appeared out with a new horse. He was a fine looking animal, black as jet with the exception of his two fore feet and a little patch in the mane, which were white. No spavins apparent, and a fine actor. And Leroy had his head checked up unreasonably high.

It wasn't long before he met Silas. The latter was driving one of his best horses. It wasn't a trotter, but it was a good reliable animal that could be depended on, and was just the sort you like to get hold of on a farm. For looks, though, he wasn't in it with the black gelding Leroy was exhibiting.

"Hello, Leroy, got a new one, ain't you?"

"Yes: how'd you like him?"

"First rate; he's built like a watch."

"Yes, he's as nifty an animal as ever looked through a bridle, as old 'Jock' Bowen used to say."

"Where d'you get him?"

"O, a friend of mine up t' Boston picked him out. Said he thought he'd be jest what I was lookin' for."

"Any out 'bout him?"

"Never saw him do a wrong thing in my life."

Silas made up his mind that it was just the horse he wanted, and that if his head was let down he could go some.

"How'll you shift 'em, Leroy?" he asked.

"O, I don't b'leeve I want to swap. This fellow suits me, and he can speed some, too I'll show him off."

Leroy went up the road a piece and came down in fine style, but the horse didn't seem to like to have his head so high, and Silas made up his mind that that was due to Leroy's ignorance of horseflesh.

"Say, Leroy, you don't know how to drive that horse, that's all. He's a good enough animal, but you can't drive him. You better name a figure and we'll shift 'em. The horse is too speerited for you."

"Yes, p'raps he is, Sile; p'raps he is a leetle might too speerited. He's a clever horse though, and I wouldn't think of swapping for lessn't $50 to hoot."

There was considerable dickering, but Silas finally came around and the money was paid over and the "shift" made.

"Now I'll show you what the trouble is with this hoss," said Silas, as he loosened out the check rein and gave the gelding his head. "Leroy's an easy thing with a hoss. This felle'll bring $250 when I get him smoothed up'n I bet he'll go a streak now."

Those were the last words Silas spoke for some time. Everybody knows that if you have got a kicking horse the only thing is to pull his head clear back. This was a kicking horse, and he had been secured for almost nothing by Leroy, who realized that Silas would want him.

Leroy had the horse checked up for so long that at first he didn't seem to realize that he could get his head down and his heels up under his new owner's arrangement, but it did not take him long to find out where he was at, and with a report like a Gatling gun his heels rained against the dasher.

Those who were looking on say that in exactly 28 seconds he kicked 17 different kinds of material out of Silas' substantial farm wagon, scared his new owner into a hysterical condition, and was subdued only when he had kicked most of the harness off of him.

"The only trouble with that hoss, Sile," commented Leroy, as he came back to view the remains, "is that he's a leetle too speerited for me'n I don't understand driving him, but you'll probably make out all right."

Various emotions played over Silas' face; his fists clenched, then his fingers relaxed and the shadow of a smile spread over his wrinkled face. Then he extended a hand to Leroy and said:

"By gum, Leroy, you've squared up that fitty horse you got from me all right, ain't you? Hereafter if we do any swapping let's do it on the square; what d'you say?"

"It's a bargain, Sile," said Leroy, as he helped pick up the debris.—Portland (Me.) Express.

Coughs,
Catarrh,
Consumption.

The United States Health Reports,
January 5, 1900.

"After a careful investigation into the cause of the great decrease in the death rate from Catarrh and Consumption during the past year, we find that this reduction was brought about by the use of the new germicide HYOMEI. That no other treatment or remedy had anything whatever to do with this reduction."

Such evidence should prove to all sufferers that in HYOMEI alone is their only hope of successfully treating these diseases. Besides this, it is guaranteed and your money refunded if it fails.

An Exception to Law of Nature.

A civil engineer who is in Alaska has written home to Chicago that the rails on the Chilkoot Pass railway expand with the cold, instead of contracting as they would be supposed to do. A temperature ranging from 12 to 40 degrees below zero Fahrenheit would not appreciably affect the length of rails, but severer cold than that would be attended with expansion. This is certainly an exception to a law of nature, although water shrinks as it cools until 39 degrees Fahrenheit is reached, when it begins to expand.—Chicago Chronicle.

Old-Time Vanderbilts.

In the first directory of the city of New York, published over 100 years ago, the only Vanderbilts whose names appeared were not members of the old commodore's family ancestors. They were Dutch, to be sure, and spelled their name "Van der Bilt." The most prominent among them was a truckman. At that time the ancestors of the present millionaire family were prosperous farmers on Staten island, and their names did not belong in a New York directory.—N. Y. Sun.

Africa's Postmen.

The mails in central Africa are still conveyed for the most part upon the heads and backs of native postmen. The men are recruited chiefly from the Yao and Atonga tribes, and wear a uniform. Fully 300 bags of mail are made up each month at the different post offices in the protectorate for conveyance by these men, the total distance traversed being close upon 10,000 miles a month, the cost of transit being less than half a penny a mile a bag.—N. Y. Herald.

Electricity Killing Fish.

Many thousands of fish are being found dead in the lakes contiguous to Fergus Falls, Minn., chiefly in Otter Tail lake, from which the city named gets its water supply through the Red river. This is a serious feature of the situation. General belief has it that severe electrical disturbances have killed the fish.—Chicago Chronicle.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern which is not afraid to be generous. The proprietors of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles, and have the satisfaction of knowing it has cured thousands of hopeless cases. Asthma, bronchitis, la grippe and all throat, chest and lung diseases are surely cured by it. Call on A. C. Mason, druggist, and get a free trial bottle. Regular size 50c and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed.

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are too expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2.65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit. The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save. If your druggist can't supply you, it will be fowarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it will wear them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 25c and 50c. Trial size free. At all druggists.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
NORFOLK, ss.

At a Probate Court held at Dedham in and for said county of Norfolk, on the seventh day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred.

On the petition of Simon Spellowski of Norfolk, in said county praying that his name may be changed to that of Simon Brown, public notice having been given, according to the order of court, that all persons might appear and show cause, if any they had, why the same should not be granted, and it appearing that the reason given therefor is sufficient and consistent with the public interest, and being satisfactory to the court and no objection being made

It is decreed that his name be changed, as prayed for, to that of Simon Brown, which name he shall hereafter bear, and which shall be his legal name, and that he give public notice of said change by publishing this decree once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper published in Franklin, and make return to this court under oath that such notice has been given.

JAMES H. FLINT,
Judge of Probate Court.

16,23,30

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
NORFOLK, ss.
PROBATE COURT.

To the heirs-at-law, next-of-kin and all other persons interested in the estate of William Mann, late of Franklin, in said county, deceased:

Whereas, two certain instruments purporting to be the last will and testament, and one codicil, of said deceased has been presented to said court for probate by Willard Everett of Lowell, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to him, the executor therein named, without giving a surety on his official bond,

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Dedham, in said county of Norfolk, on the fifth day of December, A. D. 1900, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper published in Franklin, the last publication to be one day at least before said court, and by mailing, postpaid or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate seven days at least before said court.

Witness, James H. Flint, Esq., Judge of said Court, this seventh day of November, in the year one thousand nine hundred.

ON THE WING.

Hawks have been seen to follow the wake of a moving railway train, to swoop down on small birds that were suddenly disturbed and frightened by the noise, and therefore for the moment were off their guard.

The ostrich has long been laughed at for pushing his head into a bush when hunted It is really far the wisest thing the bird could do, for its long neck is by far the most easily seen part of it. Its body plumage harmonizes perfectly with the desert sand.

The carrier pigeon when traveling never feeds. If the distance be long, it flies on without stopping to take nutriment and at last arrives, thin, exhausted and almost dying. If corn be presented to it it refuses to eat, contenting itself with drinking a little water and then sleeping. Two or three hours later it begins to eat with great moderation and sleeps again immediately afterwards. If its flight has been very prolonged the pigeon will proceed in this manner for 48 hours before recovering its normal mode of feeding.

One Dose

Hood's Pills

And take a dose, from 1 to 4 pills. You will be surprised at how easily they will do their work, cure your headache and biliousness, rouse the liver and make you feel happy again. 25 cents. Sold by all medicine dealers.

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN.

The woman who says she hates to sew and who always pins on her hat trimmings and bodice furbelows verifies her statements by her frumpy appearance.

Women enjoy the same political privileges as men in the states of Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and Arizona; municipal suffrage in Kansas, and partial suffrage in 25 other states.

The khedivah of Egypt has one of the most sumptuous yachts in the world. The saloons are most magnificently upholstered in white satin, brocaded with pink roses, the cornices done in real gold, while the panels are hung with beautiful pictures. Her own room is decorated in pink and white, the bed with its lace trimmings looking particularly inviting, and yet owing to some superstition on the part of the khedivah she prefers to sleep on the floor.

"The Helmet of Navarre,"

A great novel, full of life, adventure and action, the scene laid in France three hundred years ago, began in the August, 1900, Century, and will continue for several months in 1901. Critics everywhere are enthusiastic over the opening chapters of this remarkable story. "The author's fame is apparently established with this, her maiden effort," says the Boston Transcript. The Critic calls it "a remarkable performance."

FREE. New Subscribers to The Century Magazine who begin with the number for November, 1900, will receive free of charge the three previous numbers, August, September and October, containing the first chapters of "The Helmet of Navarre," or, if these numbers are entirely exhausted at the time of subscribing, they will receive a pamphlet containing all of the chapters of "The Helmet of Navarre" contained in the three numbers

Whereas, Metcalf E. Pond, the administrator de bonis non with the will annexed of said estate, has presented for allowance the first and final account of his administration upon the estate of said deceased,

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court, to be held at Quincy, in said county of Norfolk, on the 12th day of December, A. D. 1900, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be allowed.

And said administrator is ordered to serve this citation by delivering a copy thereof to all persons interested in the estate fourteen days at least before said court, or by publishing the same once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper published in Franklin, the last publication to be one day at least before said court, and by mailing, postpaid, a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate seven days at least before said court.

Witness, James H. Flint, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twenty-third day of November, in the year one thousand nine hundred.

Going to Walpole Thanksgiving morning?

Miss Grace Whiting visited schools in Pawtucket last week.

Mrs. W. H. Gould has just returned from an extended stay in Uxbridge.

Dean closes from Wednesday to Monday only, the regular holiday coming later.

Miss Bessie Murray of South Boston is visiting Miss Nellie Robinson of Union street.

Be present at Dr. Hodge's reading Thanksgiving evening at Universalist church.

The Mothers' section will meet next Friday aafternoon with Mrs. Gertrude Daniels.

Some of the retailers who want to keep open shops on Sunday are studying the Sunday law.

During the summer season Dr. Hodge, the tree warden, has planted several ornamental trees.

The teachers of the public schools were made happy Friday with the monthly stipend.

Spence & Granger have just completed a fine job of painting the W. W. Haslam house on East street.

Mrs. C. J. McKenzie left town Saturday for Woodstock, Vt., where she will remain about 10 days.

Carpenters have been at work for several weeks making general repairs at the American Woolen company's mill.

Up to a week ago one farmer at least had failed to harvest all of his potatoes. The dry season made the crop small.

Chester M. Whiting will return to Cuba for the winter at the completion of some business arrangements here.

The weekly meeting of the Congregational church will be held on Friday instead of Thursday evening this week.

The Franklin grange enjoyed a friendly call from about thirty grangers from West Medway last Thursday evening.

The streets on the east side of the town have been brushed up by the roadmen and present a very neat appearance.

"Quo Vadis," the most powerful and convincing of all religious plays, will be presented at the Opera house this evening.

Attorney A. H. Martin has embellished his office with a new office table of the Derby make of generous proportion and elegant finish.

Rev. Mr. Sleeper will give a lecture in the Baptist church in Norfolk next Tuesday evening on "Scenes in England, Scotland and Ireland.

Capt. A. F. Pendleton has prepared for the transportation of school pupils from the northwest as soon as the snow makes its appearance.

The agent of the state and military aid commission was here Friday for examination of recipients of the aid. Very little change was made.

The American band orchestra are to furnish music for the "sunlight dance" to be given in the Odd Fellows' hall on Thursday afternoon from 2 till 6.

The golfites are atilt with interest over the contest next Thursday, when our crack players will compete among themselves for prizes and honors.

Thomas McHugh, employed at Waite's mill, had two of his fingers injured in a carder while at work on Saturday. Dr. A. J. Gallison attended the injured man.

Manager Partridge has made a date for "The New Minister" company to appear at Morse Opera house Wednesday evening, Dec. 5, a play to please everybody.

A pleasing evening is assured at the Universalist church Thanksgiving. Dr. Hodge is to read. A social will follow and refreshments will be served. Come!

The personal property at the Coates farm on Pond street was sold Friday. The farm was offered, but was withdrawn on account of no satisfactory bid.

Thomas Rowcroft, formerly employed by the Star and Crescent Mill company, Philadelphia, has been engaged as superintendent by the Worcester Textile company.

There will be no meeting of the Farmer's club Thanksgiving week, to allow the farmers' wives to have all the time for arranging for the annual Thanksgiving feast.

The Epworth League have placed an "emergency box" at the ticket office of the station here to be used in case of accident upon the railroad. It is an excellent idea.

A number of the Masonic fraternity went to Norwood last evening to enjoy an evening with the m--bers of the Masonic order there. They report a most enjoyable time.

As Edward F. Queery was walking to Franklin from Woonsocket on Saturday evening, having lost his car, he fell through a trestle bridge, a distance of fifteen feet, breaking his left forearm.

The first annual concert and ball of the Jolly club will be held in the Opera house tomorrow evening. Fales' orchestra of West Medway will furnish the music. The affair is already an assured success.

The storm of Wednesday lessened the attendance at the various churches to a marked degree, but served to show in a measure who were the faithful ones. There is comfort in this to the various pastors.

The sale of goods and furniture at the Jones house, No. 5 Union street, will be continued every day this week from 9 till 6 o'clock. The lot, 27,000 square feet, with dwelling house and barn, is also for sale.

The banns of marriage between Miss Flora Farley of Union street and George Pratt of Medway were announced for the first and last time in St. Mary's church Sunday. The ceremony will be performed on Wednesday evening.

It is quite likely that there will be a large number of the members of the Farmers' club and their friends who will go over to Daniel Brown's in Wrentham next Monday evening, and a special car going at 7.15 has been arranged for.

It is reported that the late Joseph G. Hill left no will, prefering to let his estate be disposed of by the regular law channel under an administrator. In addition to the real estate his property consisted largely in savings bank deposits in a number of banks in the state.

Don't forget that the high school will offer their usual Thanksgiving entertainment for the poor tomorrow evening, at the High school hall at eight o'clock, when contributions of provisions, or useful articles will be received for distribution to the needy as Thanksgiving gifts.

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Worcester Textile company, held in Worcester, W. H. Tylee was appointed treasurer, M. P. Burbank having resigned, and George H. Cook was appointed assistant treasurer. Mr. Cook will make his residence in Franklin, as before.

Roscoe Gibbs Bicknell of Worcester, Dean '99, was here last week, having driven his locomobile over from that city. It is a machine similar to H. T. Hayward's and Mr. Bicknell expressed himself as being thoroughly well pleased with its work. He attracted a good deal of attention with it.

Mrs. G. A. Martin returned from her hunting expedition in New Brunswick last evening, having been absent since August. She has had a most delightful time, has improved in health, and has some of the trophies of the chase with her. She has a fine hunting camp there, and enjoys camp life hugely.

A horse attached to an express wagon belonging to James McParland became frightened Friday afternoon, about 4 o'clock, in the lower part of the town, while the driver was delivering goods. The animal was caught at the railroad crossing, however, with no serious damage, excepting a broken shaft.

At the perambulation of the bounds between Bellingham and Franklin Thursday one bound was found removed, broken and placed on the opposite side of the street. The statute provides a penalty of fine or imprisonment for wilfully removing a bound, and measures will be taken at once for having it replaced.

J. B. Rhodes, formerly employed at the Worcester Textile works as assistant superintendent, has resigned his position to accept a place with the Crompton & Knowles loom works at Worcester. On the eve of his departure Mr. Rhodes was pleasantly surprised by the gift from the mill help of a pair of cuff buttons and a carbuncle ring.

Judge Doe, Mr. Nye and Mr. Rockwood returned on Sunday from the South, decidedly enthusiastic over the trip. They had perfect weather, picking roses out of doors, and seeing all the interesting sights. They were four days at the Hygeia at Old Point Comfort, saw the Hampton students, the Gettysburg battlefield, etc. They were much disgusted at this weather on their return.

The closing exercises of the woman's mission at St. Mary's chapel took place Sunday afternoon, 572 female parishioners, not including children, having made the mission. The men's mission opened in the evening, Rev. Father Cullen delivering the opening sermon, taking the text "What doth it profit a man to gain the whole world and suffer the loss of his own soul?" Nearly 500 male parishioners were present.

"Prince Pro Tem" played to a fair-sized house on Friday evening, proving one of the best entertainments of its kind given here this season. The chorus was especially strong, while the soloists were unusually good, noticeably Margaret Rosa. Dan Packard carried off the honors, having the star part, but he was ably supported. Manager Partridge should have had a better house for so satisfactory an attraction.

G. A. R. men will be interested to know that the railroads of the Western Passenger association have formally decided not to authorize the rate of one cent a mile for the proposed encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at Denver next August. The notification despatch says that unless the veterans back down from their stand, Cleveland, in all probability, will be the location of the 35th annual encampment.

Anyone who enjoys seeing a good clean game of football cannot afford to miss the game which is to be played in Walpole on Thanksgiving day morning, at 10 o'clock, sharp, between Walpole and Phillips Andover, at Cobb's field. As the electric cars pass the field and trains come to Walpole from four different directions at about 9 o'clock, there is no reason why anyone who likes to see a good football game should miss this chance.

Supt. Daniels is to have a set of telephones connecting the Horace Mann with the W. M. Thayer and the Nason street schools. Supt. Blanchard of the electric light station is stringing the wires, and the instruments will be installed by out of town parties. This will surely be found to be of decided convenience to the superintendent in affording him such immediate connection with the various departments, a saving of time and in the end a saving of money.

At the desire of the Y. P. C. U., Rev. Dr. Hodge will read at the chapel of the Universalist church on Thanksgiving evening. The readings will be miscellaneous in character and those who have heard Dr. Hodge know that the selections will be good. A small admission fee will be charged which will entitle each person paying it to light refreshments at the close of the reading. Reading will begin at 8 o'clock. The admission will be a fitting close to Thanksgiving day.

The New England Telegraph and Telephone company has petitioned for extending wires and poles on Summer street to winter, on Main from School to Crescent, on Alpine from Emmons to School, on School from Alpine to Union, on Union from Pleasant to Central and on Central from Union to Main. The company covers the territory at the present time by means of the electric lighting company's poles, but finds difficulty from the crossing of wires, so that separate poles are wanted.

Among the sale of pictures from the Carnegie exhibition, Pittsburg, is H. H. Gallison's "Misty Sunlight," which it will be recollected was exhibited at the Boston art club's exhibition last winter. It attracted a great deal of attention for its straight, technique and fine atmospheric effects. Charles F. Grey, a prominent citizen of Chicago, is the purchaser. A. M. Thayer of our own town owns several canvases from the Gallison studio and counts them as among his best investments in the line of art purchases.

The McParland liquor case was again further continued in the district court Saturday morning. Judge Doe had not returned from the South, and an effort was made to have Associate Judge Whitaker of Wrentham try the case, but it was found that he was also absent in Maine. Mr. Ruggles being prosecuting attorney in this case he could not, of course, act as judge in the matter, and consequently another adjournment was necessary. The case will probably be disposed of next Saturday. A number of civil cases also went over.

Two contributions of $25 each have been received during the past few days by C. L. Stewart for the Y. M. C. A. fund, which makes a total already received of over $500, not including the membership fees, which can hardly fail to reach at least $400. As soon as all things are in readiness, it is proposed to have a Y. M. C. A. day on Sunday, Dec. 9, with prominent Y. M. C. A. speakers from the state and elsewhere. Full particulars will be given as soon as the plans are all matured. Speak a good word for the cause when opportunity offers.

Menu for Thanksgiving.

We furnished your turkey last year; let us do so again. Our turkeys are the choicest in the market, fine Northern birds at 20 cents; fowls and chicks from 15 to 18; lettuce, cauliflower, parsnips, Hubbard squashes, Boston market celery, the finest; carrots, red cabbage, large, fine cranberries from the Ray meadows here; apples, prime butter, cream cheese, etc. Anything you want in the market line.

EMERSON'S MARKET.

Crescent House.

I have some choice single and double rooms, fronting on the Main street. Steam heat and electric lights. Suitable for a man and wife or family. Terms reasonable. S. T. CAPRON, Prop.

The company presenting "Remember the Maine" is said to be the best that Lincoln J. Carter ever sent on the road, and it will surely be greeted by a large audience at the Opera house Saturday evening. The entrance of the battleship Maine into Havana harbor, the explosion of the Maine, the old wine vault with its falling foundation, the destruction of a Spanish fort by an American shell, and to top off this list nothing less than Dewey's destruction of the Spanish fleet and the bombardment of Manila, are five effects in one play alone, and done as only this master hand of effects for the stage can do them.

An Enjoyable Treat.

It was not only a large audience but an enthusiastically appreciative one which listened to the fine program at I. O. O. F. hall last Friday evening, under the auspices of the Epworth league. The carefully rendered piano solo by Mr. Kirkham of Dean academy was a fitting prologue to the high class entertainers who followed.

Waldo Everett, a Franklin boy, at present a student at Harvard, displayed considerable versatility in selections ranging from classical "Snowbound," very feelingly rendered, to popular "Casey at the Bat." That he pleased his friends was evidenced by repeated encores. Seldom has a Franklin audience the privilege of listening to a soloist of the high class and evident culture of Prof. McWatters of Boston University, whose baritone solos were of the highest order.

A greater compliment could scarcely be paid to the playing of Nathan D. Prince of Danielson than that of Prof. McWatters, who pronounced it the most artistic production he had ever heard on the banjo. Mr. Prince is certainly an artist on his favorite instrument; his rendering of "Last Rose of Summer," as arranged by himself, was of that particularly entrancing nature which makes one think it but just begun when the end is reached.

The Epworth league deserves much credit for presenting a list of entertainers of such excellence. The sum of $25 was netted for the worthy object in view.

The Interest Increasing.

There is continuous call for the tickets for the series of entertainments to be given at the Congregational church during the winter, and the solicitors have already disposed of a good many. They can also be secured at store of N. C. Nye. The selection of seats will not be made till Wednesday, Dec. 5. The character of the first entertainment, that given by the Harvard male quartet and Miss Hennigar, reader, may be gained from the fact that the program is to be submitted to the local committee two weeks before the entertainment, in order to provide for any change that may be thought necessary to meet the tastes of our people. This is enough in itself to insure satisfaction.

Farmers' Club.

The club met Monday evening, Nov. 12, with Horatio Metcalf, Sheldonville. The club accepted the invitation of Daniel Brown of Wrentham to hold a meeting with him Dec 3. Mr Metcalf read the paper of the evening on "Is General or Special Farming the More Likely to Bring Success?—What are some of the mistakes most often made by farmers?" He said in part:

This question may be divided into two or more parts. Shall we call it the manner most generally used in performing the labor, or the crops most generally produced. If we look back a few years we shall see that the ideas of farmers were somewhat different from now. Then they did not deem it so important to have cellars under the barn, nor to have the stock protected from the weather. The cows, for instance, yarded with perhaps only a small shed for shelter from the storms. Then to make the yard a little dryer cart in some loam. Then in the fall when potatoes are dug, corn harvested, apples picked, cider made, cart the loam and other accumulations onto the land to be planted next year to lay there till the next spring. About hay—prepare the ground for the seed, lay on the fertilizer in the hill, sometimes fairly well, but often sparingly. But perhaps by the question is meant general crops, such as corn, potatoes and vegetables. Now by special farming is meant raising special crops like small fruits. It requires more brains, more study, more calculation to make a success of it. I am not sure but the best methods of farming might not be classed as special farming. If the labor is performed in the best way and with the most improved tools, the cost of labor is very much reduced, which is a very essential thing.

Some of the mistakes farmers make are, first, trying to cultivate too much land; labor costs too much. Another mistake is trying to get along with poor tools. I think much of the success in farming is due to the knowledge the farmer has. To sum it all up it requires a good head, a strong constitution, good habits and not a little capital to be successful at farming. With these qualifications a man can succeed if he has a good wife to help, whether he does general or special farming.

A Thanksgiving Thought.

There is no truer saying than this: "The best way to bring happiness to one's self is to try to make others happy around you." That is a good Thanksgiving motto. Those who have a surplus of this world's goods can add to their own happiness by sending a chicken, turkey or some other good thing to a poor and needy family. It is worth trying.

"Remember the Maine."

Will be given at the Opera House on Saturday evening. The play is a melodrama, founded on some of the incidents of the late war. The intrigue begins in Havana, where the Spanish plot to blow up the Maine is disclosed. Prominent in the scheme is Weyler and a Spanish naval officer named Rujaneiro. Figuring in the act are also General Lee and his ward, a Miss Walters, with whom a young officer of the British navy is in love. There are several Spanish conspirators, a Chinese sea cook, a Cuban girl, a Spanish woman, and these manage to mix up in an intrigue in which jealousy, revenge, patriotism and love are successfully brought into play together with the arrival of the Maine in Havana, and the blowing up of that vessel. Then the scene shifts to Manila and all the persons, except Weyler manage to get there in time to see the battle of Cavite. This is a realistic scene, in which the American and Spanish vessels fire vigorously upon one another. The entertainment closes with the Maine illuminated.

Come and Bring Something.

The pupils of the Horace Mann High school have arranged an entertainment to be given there next Wednesday evening to aid the deserving poor of Franklin. No admission fee is charged, and those who come are requested to bring such articles as they see fit for distribution among the needy the next day by the pupils of the school. If you cannot come, kindly send something, as the cause is a worthy one.

Offer Extraordinary.

James F. Ray, the flour dealer, has a magnificent offer to place before the readers of the SENTINEL in this issue, found on page two. It is no less than a bona fide offer of a barrel of Pillsbury's best flour at only $5 per barrel, the offer holding good only during December. This is a rare chance to get the best flour on the market at a very low price.

Delicacies for Thanksgiving.

Our order for finest selected Vermont turkeys this year was unusually large, and we have made the prices right. For finest selected Vermont turkeys 20 cents per pound; western turkeys from 15 to 20c. Fowls and chicks, fresh killed and nice, from 12 to 20c. All the meats, extra fine beef, lamb, pork, sausage, etc. Our Thanksgiving vegetables will include everything to be found in the Boston markets. Celery 15c a bunch. Choice Cape cranberries 10c, three for 25. Begin your Thanksgiving dinner with a choice soup. We have all flavors.

RICHARDSON, the Marketman.

The Youth's Companion Calendar.

More thought and expense than ever before have been lavished on the calendar which the publishers of the Youth's Companion will present to everyone subscribing for the new volume for 1901, since it is to be a souvenir of the paper's 75th year. It is an exceptionally attractive calendar, and has been designed and lithographed for the Companion exclusively. The central figure of the calendar is an ideal portrait of a Puritan maiden of Plymouth, and the twelve colors in which the calendar is lithographed reproduce the delicate coloring of the artist's original painting with perfect fidelity.

After the usefulness of the calendar is past, the portrait of Priscilla can be cut out and framed and preserved as a beautiful household ornament.

This calendar, which is sold to non subscribers to the Youth's Companion for 50 cents, will be given to all new subscribers for 1901, who will also receive, in addition to the fifty-two issues of the new volume, all the issues of the paper for the remaining weeks of 1900 free from the time of subscription. Illustrated announcement of the volume for 1901 will be sent free with sample copies of the paper to any address. The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass.

DAVID CITY, NEB., April 1, 1900.

Genesee Pure Food Co., Le Roy, N. Y.:

Gentlemen:—I must say in regard to GRAIN-O that there is nothing better or healthier. We have used it for years. My brother was a great coffee drinker. He was taken sick and the doctor said coffee was the cause of it and told us to use GRAIN-O. We got a package but did not like it at first, but now would not be without it. My brother has been well ever since we started to use it.

Yours truly, LILLIE SOCHOR.

Bad Weather

Must be considered when figuring on your photos for Christmas. Better come for the sitting at earliest possible date, and thus avoid any possibility of disappointment. What more pleasing remembrance than one of our Platinotype portraits, so dainty and artistic.

THE TOWN HALL AND THE COMMON.

When Indians roamed o'er hill and vale,
In Franklin,
Though battling oft, could not prevail,
In Franklin;
Far from their thought that centuries
hence,
Despoiled by white man's insolence,
Legends alone their monuments,
In Franklin.

'Tis said that in the later days,
In Franklin,
The dwellers oft had curious ways,
In Franklin;
With Dr. Emmons' preaching—well,
What's now passe, for, truth to tell,
He'd then been called an infidel,
In Franklin;

His sermons held his people long,
In Franklin,
Were full of thought, in doctrine strong,
In Franklin;
The doctor's quaint, three cornered hat
Crowned one not veered by this or that,
Who always knew "where he was at,"
In Franklin.

Red man and white man had their day,
In Franklin.
Ghosts of a shadowy past are they,
In Franklin;
Had other relics gone with these
Our poignant grief we might appease;
They're with us, and our patience tease,
In Franklin.

Of Common and Town hall we're proud, (?)
Exciting imprecations loud,
In Franklin;
With general air of disrepute,
We'd sell, or give away to boot,
Quit claim, with title absolute,
In Franklin.

The Town hall is the beauty spot
In Franklin,
Which when once seen is ne'er forgot,
In Franklin;
It's whole dilapidated air,
Inside and out shows lack of care,
Inciting tendencies to swear,
In Franklin.

Rash men cast hints both dark and dire,
In Franklin,
That were the "ranch" to be on fire,
In Franklin,
While they might indignation feign,
From lending aid they would refrain,
Convinced that no one would complain,
In Franklin.

The Common, too, yclept Town park,
In Franklin,
Presentable only after dark,
In Franklin;
A rendezvous, where tramp and bum,
Grimed with dirt and filled with rum,
Wooing Morpheus hither come,
In Franklin.

That relics such of hygone days,
In Franklin,
Remain to greet our saddened gaze,
In Franklin;
Is proof complete we should awake,
Admit that we have made mistake,
Rebuild, reclaim, for honor's sake,
In Franklin.

Miss Lucinda's Lost Brooch

Every Thanksgiving day brought the Pettibones together under the old home roof. It was the great day of the year for them, and nothing could bring keener disappointment to young or old than to be prevented from celebrating it under the old time honored custom, which they had been brought up to regard quite as much in the light of duty as a pleasure.

Aunt Cindy, busy over the concoction of the "punkin" pies for which she was famous throughout all Lilbury "and the region roundabout," was thinking of dead and gone Thanksgivings. As she beat a bowl of eggs into golden froth her thoughts went back to that Thanksgiving day ten years ago when a shadow fell upon her life a shadow that had never lifted. True, but few eyes saw it nowadays, but it was in her heart yet, and all the sunshine of her quiet, peaceful life could not dispel it.

"I wonder what has become of him?" she said to herself as she sifted sugar crystals into the foaming mass. "Perhaps he's dead. Who knows? Ten years is a long time, and a great many things may happen to them."

If a tear or two fell into the bowl, I do not think the pies were any the worse for them. Perhaps they gave them a better flavor.

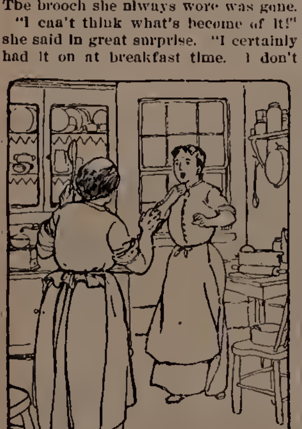
"He" was Robert Grant, and Robert Grant had been her lover long ago. Everybody had said "it was going to be a match" between them, and in this case "everybody" had good reasons for thinking so, for, though no formal engagement had ever existed between them, there had been a tacit understanding of the heart which it is never necessary to put into words to make one's meaning and intention plain. But on that Thanksgiving day ten years ago there had arisen some misunderstanding which had parted them. Just what it was about Lucinda could not tell now as she thought about it. "We were both so foolish, so unreasonable," she had often told herself. "To think of letting two lives be parted by something so insignificant that neither fully understood what it was!"

"Dear me!" exclaimed Martha Pettibone, Lucinda's sister-in-law, as she dropped into a comfortable rocking chair in one corner of the kitchen. "I'm glad we've got about done with our work, ain't you, Lucinda? I'm allus real glad to have 'em come here, but one gets so nigh beat out with cookin an fussin that I'm allus glad that it don't happen more'n once a year."

"Why, Cindy," suddenly, "where is your breastpin? I thought you had it on! You don't look nat'ral without it."

Lucinda put her hand to her collar. The brooch she always wore was gone.

"I can't think what's become of it!" she said in great surprise. "I certainly had it on at breakfast time. I don't remember being out of the kitchen since. It must be somewhere about the room."



THE BROOCH SHE ALWAYS WORE WAS GONE.

A careful search was made, but the brooch was not to be found.

Thanksgiving day dawned clear and beautiful, as all Thanksgiving day mornings ought, to be in keeping with the thoughts which come, or ought to come, at such a time.

"Now, Cindy, you run right up an git ready to receive the company," said Martha after breakfast. "I'll see to all that needs doin down stairs."

So Lucinda went up to her room and "got ready." The dark wine colored cashmere dress she donned was very becoming to her fair complexion, with soft frills of lace at throat and wrists.

"I don't seem to grow old very fast in looks," she thought as she stood before the glass to give the last feminine touches to her toilet. "Thirty-five, Lucinda Pettibone! Do you realize that that means half an ordinary lifetime?" Then she sighed, for a thought came into her mind of what life might have been if— Ah, these "ifs!"

"Hurry up, Aunt Cindy!" cried John junior from the stairs. "They're comin, 'cause I hear bells! Hooray!" Then there was a stampede of new boots down the hall.

"Martin's folks is here," said Martha, putting her head out of the kitchen "Tell 'em I'll be in as soon as I've tended to the turkey."

Lucinda went into the sitting room to receive the guests. The air was full of kindly greetings and good wishes as she shook hands with the newcomers. They seemed to have brought the very spirit of Thanksgiving with them.

"Where's Martha?" asked Sister Sarah almost as soon as handshaking was over. "I want to see her about somethin the worst way In the kitchen? Well, then, I'll go right in. You stay here an see to the children, Cindy, while I'm gone."

"For the lan's sake!" cried Martha as Sarah appeared in the kitchen door. "How do you do, an how's all the folks?"

"Quite well, thanky," responded Sarah, with proper politeness, which was instantly put aside as soon as the door was closed behind her and the two were alone "Martha Pettibone, I've got some news for you. You can't guess who came to our house las' night?"

"Elder Hogaboom," ventured Martha.

"Elder Hogaboom, indeed!" exclaimed Sarah. "I knew you'd get way off! You'd never think of the right person. 'Twas Robert Grant!"

"For goodness sake!" cried Martha. "Air you reely in earnest, Sary? It don't seem as if it could be so. Cindy an I was a-talkin about him yesterday an wonderin what had become of him."

"Yes, 'tis so," answered Sarah, "an he's there now. We tried to coax him to come over with us, but he said he didn't know's 'twould be agreeable, but he'd like to the worst way. I jest know he was thinkin of Cindy all the time. Now, I want to know if you have any idea she'd care if he should come. I thought I'd ask you 'fore I said anything to her Martin, he told John not to put the team out till he knows, an, if it would be agreeable, he's goin right back after Robert."

"I reckon she'd be glad to have him come," said Martha "Oh, Sary, mebbe it'll all turn out right yet Who knows? He- he ain't married, is he?"

"No, he ain't, an I don't b'lieve he ever will be if Cindy don't have him," answered Sarah. "He blames hisself for what happened. He jest the same as told me so. Call her in an ask her if she's willin he should come."

"Cindy, come in here a minit, won't you?" called Martha in a flutter of delightful excitement. "Dear me, Sary, I feel's if somethin was goin to happen! Wouldn't it be jest splendid if they should make up?"

"What's wanted?" asked Lucinda.

"Cindy," said Martha as solemnly as if about to inform her of somebody's death, "somebody's come back."

Lucinda started, and her cheeks grew pale. She opened her mouth to speak, but no words came.

"He's over to Martin's, and Sary wants to know if you'd find any fault with havin him come over to eat Thanksgivin dinner with us. It don't seem jest right to let him spend such a day there alone, does it?"

"Why shouldn't he come?" said Lucinda. But it hardly seemed to either of the women as if she spoke to them. Indeed it hardly seemed to her, as she stood there face to face with the fact that after many years her old lover had come back, as if she was not alone with that one thought.

"Oh, I'm so glad!" cried Sarah. "I'll run right out an tell Martin."

Lucinda ran up to her chamber to think it all over alone As she shut the door she heard the sound of bells, and, looking out, she saw Martin driving swiftly up the hill road on his friendly errand How the bells rang!

He had come back! He was coming there! She would see him again, would hear his voice and feel his hand clasping hers as in the old days when they met each other after these long years of separation! As in the old days? Perhaps not. There might have been changes of which she knew nothing. But they could at least meet as friends. Suddenly a sense of all the sorrow these vanished years had held seemed to force itself upon her as she had never comprehended it before, and she laid her head down on the window sill and cried. By and by she aroused herself.

"This will not do," she said as she looked at herself in the glass. She almost stared at the face she saw there. It was not like the face she had seen there this morning. This face seemed almost radiant.

The clock was striking 11 when John junior sang out that "Uncle Mart is comin back, an there is a man with him."

There was a general stampede of youngsters for the front door Lucinda felt a wild impulse to run away But she did not. Martha and Sarah helped her to pass the ordeal of the next few minutes by being very demonstrative and talkative, thus drawing attention from her. She saw Robert Grant come into the room; she saw him shaking hands with all the grown folks and smiling at the wondering eyed children and was dimly conscious of an idea that it would take him years and years to get across the room to where she stood. Then all at once Martha spoke and said:

"An here's Cindy. She's glad, with all the rest of us, to see you back, Robert," and then she felt her hand clasped close in Robert's hand once more and heard him say:

"I'm glad to see you."

Only a few simple words, but they might mean so much or so little.

When they were seated at the dinner table, Martin happened to notice all at once that Lucinda didn't look familiar.

"Why, Cindy, what's become of mother's breas'pin?" he asked. "I hain't seen you 'thout it afore sence I can remember."

"I don't know what has become of it," answered his sister. "I lost it yesterday. I'd give anything if I could find it."

Just at this juncture the pumpkin pies were brought in.

"These are Cindy's pies," said Martha. "When I've said that, I know you'll want a piece."

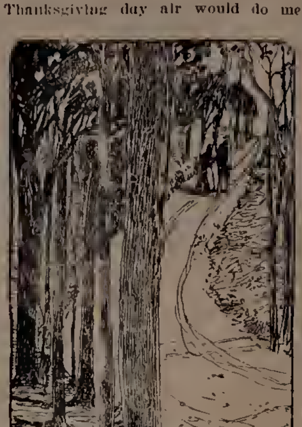
"Or two pieces, more likely," answered Martin. "Let me see, you used to like Cindy's pies, Robert. I s'pose you hain't forgot how they tasted?"

"I don't believe I have," answered Robert as he took a "piece" and fell to enjoying it

All at once he put his napkin to his mouth, and John junior, who was enduring the tortures a boy always experiences when he has to wait, whispered to his Cousin Tildy that he guessed that feller'd bit his tongue or something.

"How bright and pleasant it looks outside!" Robert Grant said to Lucinda after dinner "Don't you want to take a walk?"

"I think a little of this bracing Thanksgiving day air would do me good," she answered and went up stairs after her bonnet and shawl. Her heart was all in a flutter again. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself!" she said to herself. "Thirty-five years old and acting like a girl!"



BOTH WERE TOO BUSY WITH THOUGHTS OF THE PAST.

For some time neither of the two spoke as they went up the hillside road side by side. Both were too busy with thoughts of the past.

Suddenly Robert paused and faced her.

"Lucinda," he said, and his voice was not very steady, "perhaps we can never be to each other what I think both of us hoped years ago, but we can, I trust, be friends. I want to tell you that I have been sorry for what I said to you that day ever since the words were spoken. But I was too stubborn to say so then. Can you, will you, forgive me at this late day?"

"I was as much to blame as you were," she answered "I would have told you so long ago if you had given me the opportunity to do so. Let us forget it all and be friends and in our friendship make up for the loss if we can."

"But can we be nothing more to each other?" he cried, his eyes full of eagerness, his face bright with hope. "I love you yet, Lucinda! I have loved you all these years. If you can overlook the past, if you will only let me try to make you as happy in the days to come as we might have been in the days gone by!"

"Are you sure you want me?" she asked, her face quite pale. "I am no longer young, remember. Do not make the worst of all mistakes—mistaking pity for love."

"I shall make no such mistake as that," he said. "Don't be afraid of that, Lucinda," a sudden smile breaking across his face. "You are not the woman to make an offer and then refuse to live up to it."

"I don't know what you mean," she said, looking at him wonderingly.

"Don't you remember that you said when we were eating dinner that you would give anything to find your lost brooch? Now, that means, I take it, that whatever the person who finds it and restores it to you asks for you are bound to give him. I have found it. Here it is, Lucinda. What I ask as a reward is—yourself. You will keep your word and give me what I ask, I hope. Will you, dear, or won't you?"

"Your logic is not to be contended against," she answered, with a little laugh that somehow had a quiver in it. "I suppose you want me, Robert. If you need me and insist on having me, why, take me."

He put his arms about her and kissed her.

"May nothing come between us henceforth," he said earnestly, solemnly, and her heart repeated his words.

"I suppose you wonder how I came to find the lost brooch," he said as they turned homeward.

"I was going to ask you about that," she answered, "but before I got to it I thought of something else," with a little blush, "and forgot it. Where did you find it? We have hunted high and low for it."

"You didn't find it because you didn't look in the right place," he answered. "It came to me in a piece of pumpkin pie. I have read about some one who discovered pearls in the wine she drunk, but I had no idea that ordinary people of today flavored their pies with articles of jewelry I think fate had something to do with it."

In the twilight of that November day the man and woman whose lives had drifted apart for ten long years stood side by side and looked out upon the white world with thoughts of unalterable thanksgiving in their hearts. A current on the sea of time had brought those lives together again, and henceforth no wind of passion would separate them, please God.—Chaperone.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

WE SHOULD MAKE OF IT A SEASON OF REJOICING.

Our Festival at the Ingathering of the Fruits Is an Imitation of the Feast of Tabernacles—Eat of God's Bounty and Remember the Poor.

Praise for the goodness of God is never out of place and never unseasonable, but it is especially appropriate on days set apart by official appointment to notice the mercies which have followed us, the blessings which we have enjoyed, the kind interpositions which have been made in our behalf, the bounties which have been bestowed upon us in order that we may render again to God for all his benefits with festive joy and heartfelt thankfulness.

The establishment of a day of thanksgiving in the late autumn, after the ingathering of the fruits, was made by the early settlers of New England, in imitation of the feast of tabernacles held by the Jewish nation. It was a wise and pious act, and its adoption by most of the states and at length by the general government of this broad land is an evidence of the diffusion of those religious sentiments which were at the foundation of the settlement of this country.

We may welcome this annual thanksgiving today with the added interest which venerable custom has thrown around it, with the pleasing memories which early associations weave about our former celebrations of it, with the recollections of absent friends who have shared it with us, the reunion of families, the merry laugh of children, the pleasure of parents and hail its advent as a day of sacred and social joy.

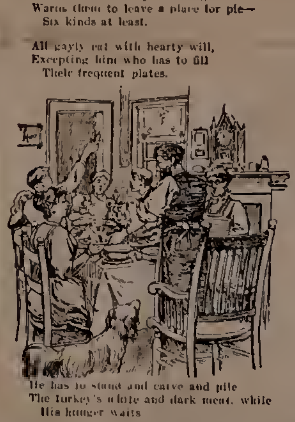
It should be observed with happy hearts and cheerful voices, and for the time at least the sigh of sorrow should be hushed and the tear of grief restrained, while full scope is given to all the kindlier emotions of our nature. Let us crowd into its flying hours the pleasant memories of the past, the happiness of the present and the fairest prospects of the future and make it a bright and gladsome day.

Let us make it, so far as we can, a day of grateful rejoicing, and, while we partake freely of the bounties of the year, give loose rein to the sweet sympathies of humanity and dispense with a liberal hand and a benevolent spirit to those that have need, so that the voice of gladness may be heard in every dwelling. In imitation of the time honored custom of our fathers and in obedience to the language of Scripture, let us "eat the fat and drink the sweet and send portions to them for whom nothing is prepared."

The Head of the Family.

Thanksgiving day is almost here,
Season of gladness and good cheer
And bounteous feast,
When all eat turkey till a sigh
Warns them to leave a place for pie—
Six kinds at least.

All gayly eat with hearty will,
Excepting him who has to fill
Their frequent plates.



He has to stand and carve and pile
The turkey's white and dark meat, while
His hunger waits

Then here's to him who has to see
All others quickly fed, while he Must wield the knife.
Working with ardor fierce and grim
Does anybody envy him?
Not on your life!

A Game For Thanksgiving.

A potato race is a good game to aid the digestion of the Thanksgiving dinner. Take ten good clean potatoes, as round as possible, two vegetable dishes and two tablespoons Place the potatoes in two parallel rows of five each, three feet apart, leaving a broad space between the rows. Place a vegetable dish at the head of each row. Divide the company into two squads and equip each leader with a spoon. Appoint a timekeeper to keep tally.

When time is called, each leader darts down his respective line, the object being to gather up the potatoes, one at a time, on the spoon, without touching them with the hands, and to carry them to the dish and place them in it.

The one who finishes first wins the prize, and the next in line gets the spoon. By the time that all have gone through the experience considerable hilarity has developed and all have a voice in the fun.

A THANKSGIVING FABLE.

Turkey and Eagle Discuss the National Bird Question.

A merry young turkey was asked one day by a baldheaded eagle why he cared to let himself be fooled by being fatted up for a Thanksgiving dinner to make a dish for all the greedy mouths that could afford to get a slice of him.

"I," said the eagle, "am the king of birds. I am the terror of the Alleghanies and the Rockies, and I defy the greedy appetite of your masters. I am all wool and a yard wide. I'm the great American eagle! Whoop la!"

"Ah," said the turkey benignly as he cast a pitying look upon his proud and scornful critic, "you are not civilized yet, and so you don't know what you are talking about. You are as wild and untutored as the savage Indian and, like him, must delve and fight and struggle for your miserable existence, while I have more food thrown down at my feet than I can swallow.

"Then, again, poor devil, you have to sleep in some cold and dismal cranny in the rocks, while I have always a warm and comfortable lodging provided for me. I have nothing to do but strut around and enjoy life, and the more food I eat the better my master likes it. Out of all your life of freedom you do not have as many hours of ease and solid comfort as I do in my brief career.

"Leave it to a turkey to know what's what. I don't want to be any emblem of freedom. My respects to you, but I've got a snap, and I know it. A short life and a merry one is my motto, and I want no more sincere respect than is shown to me when I am well cooked and dished up for a Thanksgiving dinner. What could be more glorious, indeed, than to die as the apotheosis of a great nation's gratitude?

"Go to your eyrie, old eagle, for I am the greater bird of the two."

"Yes, when you are fatted up to eat," replied the eagle sarcastically, by way of a farewell thrust, as he swung into his customary gait and rolled away over the barn to escape the bullet from the farmer's rifle.—Washington Post.

THANKSGIVING TURKEY.

A Delicious Way to Prepare It Boiled and Baked.

Select a plump hen turkey weighing 10 or 12 pounds. Singe, draw and wash it. Prepare the following dressing: Put into a bowl one quart of grated stale bread and a cup of cream or milk. Add to this a teaspoonful of chopped parsley, a half teaspoonful of pepper, a level tablespoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of finely chopped onions, four tablespoonfuls of butter and two well beaten eggs. Mix well together and add a pint of whole oysters. Stuff the crop and body of turkey, but not too solidly. Make a paste of flour and water of a consistency to roll out easily. Roll out into a good sized sheet, take the turkey that has been stuffed and well tied into shape and cover it with this paste, and then sew into a cheesecloth.

Put this into a kettle, just cover it with water and smother it for two hours, not allowing it to come to the boil Do this in the early morning. Then set it off the stove and leave it in the water until entirely cold. Then take the turkey out of its blanket, gently rub the paste off and rub the whole surface with butter, pepper and salt. Place the turkey on its back in a pan and put in a cup of hot water. Then put into a fairly hot oven and roast for about 1½ hours or until it is a rich tender brown. Baste continually. A wineglass of wine added to the water in which it is baked gives a delicious flavor.

Old Time Thanksgiving Dinners.

A Thanksgiving dinner some 35 or 40 years ago would in all probability have consisted of the following dishes: Roast turkey, with rich gravy or sauce; chicken pie, cold roast pig, mashed potatoes and turnips, boiled onions, cranberry sauce, pumpkin pie, mince pie, baked Indian pudding, cider and coffee. Sometimes oysters would be added to the list of dishes, but in the interior section of the country these were not easy to procure, and it was the same with celery. It was not an unusual thing for the boys of the family to travel 25 miles to procure celery for the Thanksgiving dinner. Nuts, raisins and fruit were generally reserved for the evening, the midday diners concerning themselves for the most part with the more substantial turkey and "fixin's" so termed.

Thanksgiving In Our Islands.

Thanksgiving day under the genial influence of the American flag will be celebrated in many different degrees of latitude and longitude this year. In the Philippines, in Hawaii, in Cuba and Porto Rico the day will be observed with the fullest honors.

Last year there was a dearth of turkeys in "our new possessions," but arrangements have been made to avoid such a dearth this year as far as possible, and large consignments of them have been shipped to Manila and Cuba

Giblet Sauce.

Giblet sauce should always be served with roast turkey. Boil the giblets until tender. Chop them, but not very fine. Add a tablespoonful of flour to the pan in which the turkey was roasted Let it brown, stirring constantly. Add slowly a cupful of water in which the giblets were boiled. Season with salt and pepper Strain and add the chopped giblets. Serve in a sauceboat.

Thanksgiving Dance.

The drumstick figure is especially appropriate for the Thanksgiving dance. Tiny drums are handed the ladies and the drumsticks given the men. Each man selects his partner by executing a vigorous tapping on the drum suspended about the fair neck. Then the dancing is done to military music and ceases at the sound of the bugle call.

AN OLD TIME FEAST.

THE FIRST THANKSGIVING IN PLYMOUTH COLONY.

Miles Standish and John Alden Greet Massasoit and His Braves—Viands With Which They Were Regaled. Roast Pig and Saccotash.

A background of woods, all flushed with many hues, a canopy of white drifting sky with here and there a bright blue spot, bring to the mind an idea of the day and the surroundings amid which our brave Plymouth sires founded our day of Thanksgiving.

Before the summer tresses of trees have fully gone in a small clearing of the somber woods two snowy tables are spread. At the left is a log house with one large chimney, from which issues, into the clear autumn air, a cloud of smoke. The fair faced Puritan women are hurrying in and out, preparing for the feast. At a little distance the governor, elder and captain of the colony are eagerly talking and at short intervals peering into the surrounding woods in anticipation of the arrival of Massasoit and his braves. Here also is John Alden, "that fair Saxon stripling, who, peering through the shadows of the forest boughs, sees, at some distance still, a thin, dark line, which, growing each moment more certain in outline, tells of the approach of the Indian warriors."

At this moment Miles Standish calls, "Are they yet in sight, my friend?"

"Almost within speaking distance, captain," and with this reply John Alden enters the kitchen.

"Good day, John Alden," says a fresh young voice, and he, looking eagerly in the direction from which it comes, sees a dear face all smiling in its happiness.

"Is it not well that we have such a fair day?" Priscilla further asks before the mantle of shyness has quite left him. At this moment the Indians, headed by Massasoit, entered the clearing and were greeted by the governor. "Welcome, friends; welcome!" he said in a hearty, jovial voice and led them directly to the table.

The men of Plymouth colony had invited these guests for a friendly concourse and combined with this plan the harvest feast. Delicate appetites were in those times rather a defect than a grace, and hospitality consisted in providing great quantities and many varieties of food. Realizing this fact, the good women of Plymouth had prepared accordingly. The harvest had been abundant, and the result was a goodly feast. Plenty of dishes of pewter and wood lined the table, and by each lay a napkin and spoon, but neither knives nor forks, for these were regarded as curious implements of extreme luxury. Massasoit sat next to the excellent elder at the table with the colonists, while the men of his tribe sat, at a little distance, beside the other table.

What a feast greeted the eyes of the guests! Chowder and roasted pig in plenty, succeeded by a mighty dish of succotash, that compound of dried beans, hulled corn, salted beef, pork and chicken, may be called the charter dish of Plymouth; then came wild fowl dressed in various ways, a great bowl of salad of Priscilla's composition and at last various sweet dishes, all deliciously prepared and how strangely new to the Indians!

After Elder Brewster had said a blessing all began the meal. It was a beautiful sight. The bright, pure sun shone on all—the women coming from the cookroom laden with steaming dishes, the Puritan elders extending hospitality, the Indians, friends of the white men and native owners of the soil, enjoying their new surroundings. All are happy in the pleasure of friendship and rich in this, the first harvest of Plymouth, which God had endowed.

In gazing through the mist which envelops the time intervening between that first Thanksgiving day and this Thanksgiving day we see again those brave and loyal hearted men in the dusk of that primeval forest bidding good night to their sworn allies, Massasoit and his followers. We follow them until they pass through the woods and fade from sight amid the distant hills.

Again in retrospection the faces of those serene and glorious men and women appear to us in all their simple grandeur. Notwithstanding the sufferings that they experienced the preceding winter, these founders of our ever growing land chose a day which was filled with thanksgiving to God for having brought them through the shadows to this bright harvest day.

Thanksgibbin Am Creepin Roun'.

In de fall ob de year, when de leabes turn brown,
An drap fum de trees till dey kiver up de groun'
An de ripe persimmuns come a-patterin down,

Trouble About the Shirt Waist.

The men have not had since the "pigs in clover" puzzle so absorbing a subject for thought as the shirt waist problem. We mean of course the male shirt waist. Says the Chicago Post in its strugglings for the light: "The proposition to put men in shirt waists cannot be seriously considered until we know exactly how we are going to dispose of that obstacle at the waist line. We have seen the football player

" 'Where the shirt and trousers meet,
Standing with reluctant feet,' but while this may do very well for football it will hardly serve the purpose for dress parade. The physical conformation of the ladies enables them to retain the graceful swing and hang of their skirts, but a man's trousers must be buoyed up by adventitious aid. We could not think of wearing our suspenders over our shirt waists, and our present style of belts surmounted by a row of trouser buttons would be a hideous innovation. To meet the exigency therefore, we must employ pads in defiance of nature's distinctions, or safety pins, which are somewhat subversive of our manly dignity. There may be other ways of getting around this difficulty, and we hope the interested parties will give the subject the prayerful consideration its importance merits. We have no hesitation in saying that the inventor who points out the way of uniting the shirt waist and the trousers, harmoniously to the eye and agreeably to the abdominal muscles, will lay the foundation of a colossal fortune."

Points About Storms.

Cyclones or general storms may be 1,000 miles in diameter. Hurricanes operate on a path averaging 600 to 800 miles wide. Tornadoes are very much smaller. They may be only a mile wide at the top and but a few feet at the bottom, but they are much more dangerous than either a cyclone or a hurricane. They form in all parts of the temperate zone—at sea they are waterspouts, and on the desert they are sand storms. Sometimes, says a scientific authority, a whole family of tornadoes will be born at once from the same cloud. As many as 15 tubes have been observed at one time. In winter months tornadoes occur only in the gulf states, but in summer they occur in the north, in Nebraska, South Dakota, Iowa and Minnesota. The average is 25 a year. They are simple examples of vortex motion. A mass of air rotating at a low level runs into a vortex, and a tube is projected downward. The velocity of the lower end of the tube may reach 200 miles an hour, and it is the partial vacuum caused by the whirl and the sudden inrush of the outside air that causes the disastrous explosive effects.

The young men of to-day are too finicky—too much given to self-analysis, too self-pampering. Their shoes and neckties cost more each year than did the entire wardrobe of their grandfathers. They feel a sense of degradation in small beginnings and plodding and they wait for success ready-made to come to them. The young man of to-day wants capital. Trusts and combines and corporations distress him. He cannot be president of a bank or judge of a court the first week he is from school, and he feels, like the famous Eli Pussley, that he has "no chance."

The board of county commissioners of Wichita county, Kan., has just abolished the poorhouse, there being no more paupers in the county. One old soldier is the only dependent person in the county, and he is being cared for by regular subscription, so the county may be said to be pauperless. Ten years ago there were over 500 paupers in Wichita county.

STRENGTH—WEAKNESS.

The strong man and the weak woman. The sturdy oak and the clinging vine. Women to-day do not expect to be carried around like children. They have serious work to do—hard wark—and they must be fitted for it. The ideal medicine to build up weak women is Smith's Green Mountain Renovator, because it is made in Vermont of pure, wholesome herbs, redolent of the fragrant woods, the green hills and the bracing air. These herbs are so combined as to assist Nature in restoring Strength.

"I wish to say to you that after using four bottles of your Renovator it has worked wonders for me. It has given me great strength and muscular vitality; increased my appetite and given me restful sleep. I have also suffered with bad blood for years, and when commencing the Renovator had twenty boils on my neck. They have now disappeared, and I cannot say enough in praise of this great tonic for the muscles, nerves and blood—it is a grand medicine.

RULINGS OF THE COURT.

The right of a city to discharge a sewer into a tailrace belonging to an individual, where it runs through a culvert under a highway, is denied in Nevins vs. Fitchburg (Mass.), 47 L. R. A., 312.

A policy of insurance against loss or damage by windstorms, cyclones or tornadoes is held, in Holmes vs. Phoenix Insurance company (C. C. A. eighth C.), 47 L. R. A., 308, not to cover damage by hail.

Failure to enact or enforce an ordinance prohibiting the riding of bicycles on sidewalks is held, in Jones versus Williamsburg (Va.), 47 L. R. A. 294, insufficient to make a municipality liable for injury to a person struck by a bicycle ridden on the sidewalk.

A breach of promise of marriage is held in Sanders versus Coleman (Va.), 47 L. R. A. 581, to be excused when, without any fault on his part, the prospective husband has developed a grave malady of such character that marriage might endanger his life or health.

A state hospital created for purely governmental purposes under the exclusive ownership and control of the state is held, in Main versus Eastern hospital (Va.), 47 L. R. A. 577, to be not liable for injury to an inmate by negligence of the persons in charge.

The right of a telephone company to string wires in a highway is held in Wyant versus Central Telephone company (Mich.), 47 L. R. A. 497, to include the right to do the necessary trimming of trees in the highway in a proper manner, without first giving the landowner an opportunity to do it.

An infant who has bought a bicycle on the installment plan is held, in Rice versus Butler (N. Y.), 47 L. R. A. 303, to be under obligation to account for its use and for deterioration in its value while in his possession, if he rescinds the purchase. The disaffirmance of a conveyance by an infant is upheld, in Bullock versus Sprowls (Tex.), 47 L. R. A. 326, without restoring the consideration received for the property, when it is not in his possession or control upon arriving at full age, but has been dissipated by him while still a minor.

Scrofula

This root of many evils—

Tumors, abscesses, cutaneous eruptions, dyspepsia, readiness to catch cold and inability to get rid of it easily, catarrh, and other ailments including the consumptive tendency—

Is removed by Hood's Sarsaparilla so completely that a radical and permanent cure is effected.

This statement is proved by thousands of voluntary testimonials. SILAS VERNOOY, Wawarsing, N. Y., writes: "When our daughter was two years old, she broke out all over her face and head with scrofula sores. Nothing we did for her seemed to do her any good, and we had become almost discouraged when we thought we would try Hood's Sarsaparilla. The first bottle helped her and when she had taken six the sores were all healed and her face was smooth. She has never shown any sign of the scrofula returning."

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

Mr. H. H. Black, the well-known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan Co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have the attacks been that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croupy symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug, and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2.65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit. The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save. If your druggist can't supply you, it will be forwarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

MARY JANE'S THIEF.

Miss Mary Jane Simpkins, for such was her whole name, although none of her neighbors or friends ever gave her the benefit of the latter, was near her fortieth birthday, and did not look to be a day over 30. She had, many years before, her love affair, followed by a misunderstanding, the reason of which was so securely locked in her breast that, although many had been the conjectures in regard to it, yet no one surmised the exact truth concerning the lovers' quarrel.

They knew that big, handsome Sam Hopkins had gone away suddenly, that he had never returned to claim the bride they had expected him to take, and that was all they knew.

They readily imagined that it was through no fault of his that their favorite was left a spinster, but what her reason for putting him out of her life had been they neither knew nor could they find out. So far as Mary Jane was concerned, she never as much as intimated that Sam had not gone away of his own accord, glad to escape the bonds of matrimony.

Short and plump, with kindly face, and good-natured as the day was long, she was regarded by many as still in the matrimonial market, partly on account of her attractive home and bank account as well as her genial, cheery personality, which had won for her a legion of friends as well as many would-be suitors, none of whom, however, had replaced the old love.

As time slipped by her village friends had almost forgotten the existence of Sam Hopkinson, her beau of more youthful days, who had, to everyone's surprise, Miss Mary Jane excepted, suddenly left for parts unknown, but who had been heard of by chance some few years ago as having made a snug little pile in Australia. "An old maid from choice, not necessity," was what her friends said of her, and when several of the town's most eligible young men had tried to "make up" to her she had been friendly but kept them at arm's length.

On one particular afternoon she had sent her neat little maid servant with some jelly and a freshly killed chicken to a sick neighbor, some half a mile away, and sat among the geraniums in the sunny bay window upstairs mending some table linen. The sound of footsteps on the front graveled walk made her pause to listen; then some one knocked and at the same time stealthily turned the knob of the screen door and stepped in.

Only last week the big house on the hill had been visited by a burglar, who had departed as quietly as he came with some old family plate and several valuable pieces of jewelry. What if this were the same thief, emboldened by his former success, to pay her home a visit in broad daylight, with the hopes of similar plunder. Not if a woman's prompt action and courage could prevent, thought Miss Mary Jane. So hastily opening a bureau drawer and picking up a revolver, both old-fashioned and unloaded, which had lain there many years, she crept swiftly downstairs, where with his back turned toward her stood a strapping big fellow, who turned as she reached him, and, taken by surprise, stepped quietly backward toward the door of the closet located under the stairs and then attempted to pass her.

Summoning all her courage and pointing her weapon of defense at his head, she cried: "Open that closet door if you value your life," whereupon the impudent fellow exclaimed: "Why, Miss Mary Jane!"

"Don't Mary Jane me," she shouted, "but open that door," now thoroughly courageous with righteous anger at the fellow's bold insolence. As he turned and opened the door she gave him one push, shut the closet door with a bang, at the same time turning the key with a dexterity surprising even to herself.

Thank heaven, she had him good and fast, and now needed the assistance only of some passerby to take her prisoner bodily. His voice reached her but indistinctly through the heavy door, but she could hear her name in muffled tones: "Miss Mary Jane, Miss Mary Jane, open the door." Not much, but how manage to summon aid? The large brass dinner bell, used in her father's day, would be the thing, and in a moment she had seized the heavy thing, and with the revolver still clutched in the other hand, rung the bell first at one window, then another; surely some one would hear and come to her rescue, and as the seconds dragged along for what seemed hours, but was in reality only a few minutes, and she saw some one coming across Neighbor Smith's lawn, she rang harder and louder. What if her prisoner should burst the door and escape? "Come quicker," she shouted, "come quicker, and take him away." By this time Jonas Smith had reached the kitchen door, followed by several more neighbors who had also become aware of something unusual in the noise and commotion.

"Take who away?" said Jonas, adding, "you had better take that firearm away or you will be shooting yourself or one of us."

"Burglar, entry closet," gasped Mary Jane, and handing him the revolver collapsed on the kitchen steps without another word of explanation.

Muttering something about "noise enough for a fire," he trudged in, followed by the rest, and arming himself on the way with the kitchen poker besides the revolver, he made straight for the entry closet.

"Stand around," he shouted, with an air of military command. "You, Deacon Adams, unlock the door, and you, Seth Fisher, open it, while the rest be ready to seize and hold the rascal."

No sooner said than done, and in less time than it takes to tell five pairs of hands seized the occupant of the closet, although, strange to say, he made no resistance, but exclaimed: "A nice way to welcome home an old friend, threaten to shoot him, lock him up, and then when nearly suffocated liberate him in this playful manner; don't you know me, boys?" as he met their look of blank amazement.

"Why, if it ain't Sam," shouted Jonas, absently extending first the revolver and then the poker for a friendly handshake and then flourishing them both at the rest of the crowd.

"Why, so it is," exclaimed Seth, and by this time Mary Jane, having recovered her breath and hearing the conversation, nearly fainted when she realized her mistake.

After mutual explanations and the rescuing party had at last departed Mary Jane and Sam, for he it was, though much changed by additional flesh and a heavy beard, sat down in the best room to talk it over and explain, she that her inhospitality was due to his own manner of call, and he to tell of his desire to see her first and have his first welcome from his old "sweetheart," besides the fun of surprising her.

The following month a quiet wedding took place, at which Mary Jane made a smiling, happy bride, remarking after the ceremony to the proud Sam: "Well, perhaps you don't think 'surprises' are so funny after all, but it isn't every woman who can capture a burglar, even if he had stolen her heart."—Boston Post.

A collection of postal cards is easier to make than one of stamps, for several reasons. One is that postal cards date back 30 years, while stamps were issued as early as 1840. Another reason is that there is generally but one kind of postal card in each issue, whereas there is hardly ever less than ten stamps in a series. Then again, there have been very few changes in postal cards as compared with stamps.

SAYINGS OF CHILDREN.

Aunt Mary—"Now, candidly, Margie, don't you think you have eaten enough pudding?" Margie (aged four)—"Well, I may think so, Aunt Mary, but I don't feel so."

"Mamma," said little Johnny at the breakfast table the other morning, "this is awful old butter, isn't it?" "Why do you think it is old, dear?" asked his mother. "'Cause," replied Johnny, "I just found a gray hair in it."

"Mamma," said three-year-old Flossie, "I guess you don't know much about raising children, do you?" "Why do you think that?" asked her mother. "Because," replied the little miss, "you always send me to bed when I'm not sleepy and make me get up when I am sleepy."

A little schoolgirl was told by her teacher to write the word "ferment" on her slate, together with the definition and a sentence in which the word was to be used. The following is the result: "F-e-r-m-e-n-t; a verb, signifying to work. I love to do all kinds of fancy ferment."

"Mamma," said four-year-old Bobby, "what is that white stuff on my berries?" "That is what we call whipped cream," answered his mother. A few days later Bobby dined at a neighbor's and, being offered some ordinary cream, he asked: "Haven't you folks got any spanked cream?"

"Mamma," said small Harry after glancing over his Sunday school lesson, "I don't believe Solomon was half so rich as they say he was." "Why not, my dear?" queried his mother. "Because," replied the youthful student, "it says here: 'And be slept with his fathers.' If he had been very rich I guess he would have had a bed of his own."—Chicago Daily News.

First and Foremost

In the field of medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It possesses actual and unequalled merit by which it cures all diseases caused or promoted by impure or impoverished blood. If you have rheumatism, dyspepsia, scrofula or catarrh you may take Hood's Sarsaparilla and be cured. If you are run down and feel weak and tired you may be sure it will do you good.

The favorite family cathartic is Hood's Pills.

English Politeness.

Tramp—Excuse me, have you seen a policeman?

Cyclist—No.

Tramp—Then I'll have to call on you to give up your watch and money.—Tit-Bits.

Rheumatism.

Nobody knows all about it; and nothing, now known, will always cure it.

Doctors try Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, when they think it is caused by imperfect digestion of food. You can do the same.

It may or may not be caused by the failure of stomach and bowels to do their work. If it is, you will cure it; if not, you will do no harm.

The way to cure a disease is to stop its cause, and help the body get back to its habit of health.

When Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil does that, it cures; when it don't, it don't cure. It never does harm.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar White celebrated their wedding anniversary by giving a party.——The straw hat factory of Daniel Brown will shut down for three days next week for piping.——Miss Florence A. Fisher officiated as organist at the Congregational church on Sunday.——W. F. Maintein and Elbridge J. Whitaker Esq., returned home Saturday after a two week's hunting trip in Maine. Maintein brought home with him two bucks, which weighed when dressed 150 pounds each, and Whitaker brought back a buck and doe.——The first rehearsal of the "Mock Trial," which the Odd Fellows are to present in the Town hall in December, was held Saturday night at the residence of Miss M. A. Smith.——The Walpole-Andover game of football to be held on Cobb's field, will draw out a large attendance from this town.——Frank E. Shepard sang at the Congregationalist church Sunday morning.——The new lights for Odd Fellows' hall were put in place last week, but before they could be lighted the whole chandelier fell with a dull thud, and the thing was a total wreck. Had the accident happened when the lamps were lighted nothing could have saved the building from being destroyed by fire.——The continued sale of the grocery stock of F. P. Redding will be held this week until disposed of.

STAMPS AND POSTAL CARDS.

The amount received by the United States government from the sale of postage stamps, etc., for the fiscal year ending June [illegible], exceeded $[illegible]. This is $[illegible] in excess of any previous year.

An Amsterdam daily paper says that the new colonial Dutch stamps, the New Netherlands set, merely surcharged with the colony and value are only provisionals and will be replaced at a very early date by definitive full sets for each colony as they have had them heretofore.

It is said by English dealers that a complete set of Transvaal stamps would cost $5[illegible], for there has been a great variety issued. Some of the old Transvaal stamps of the British regime of 1877-[illegible], and of the first republic, now fetch from $100 to $250. The Orange Free State offers no such number or variety.

The picture postal card has now been fairly introduced into this country, and in a short time may be expected to become a craze. It is said that in New York alone there are a dozen publishers issuing regular lines of decorated cards. As may be imagined, most of the views are of New York and its vicinity, but the rest of the country has not been neglected.

Siam has ordered an entirely new set of postage stamps at London and we will probably hear about its being placed in the distributing offices within a short time. The portrait of King Chula-Long-Korn will be a profile instead of the three-quarter face we have seen for so long a time and the colors will comply with the schedule accepted by the Universal Postal union at the postal congress in Washington.

Stamp news from Brazil partakes of a humorous character. A circular of the postal administration displayed in every post office announces to the public that hereafter the newspaper and postage due stamps will not be gummed, because the gumming machine does not work satisfactorily or fast enough. As the public does not use either postage due or newspaper stamps, it is difficult to understand why the information is given out.

Better.

"You contend that oleomargarine is just as good as butter, don't you?"

"It's better," answered the dealer without hesitation. "It pays several times the profit."—Washington Star.

"Now that you have given your consent," he said, "I suppose I ought to speak to your father."

Not a Safe Question.

Just as the judge was about to put the usual question the clerk leaned over and said "Don't."

"Don't what?" asked the judge.

"You were about to ask him if he had anything to say before sentence was passed upon him, were you not?"

"Certainly. That is customary."

"Of course, it's customary," admitted the clerk, "but don't do it. I happen to know that he is a political spellbinder, and with a big docket of cases demanding attention the time of this court is of considerable value." —Chicago Post.

Jones—So you've been to Cowdie's wedding? Who was best man?

Blower—Well, that depends on what you mean by "best." The [illegible] off man was the bride's father, 'cos he's got rid of her; the best fighting man was her brother, who thrashed little Cowdie into marrying her; the best paid man was the parson; the best treated man was the reporter of the local paper, who came to describe the presents and dresses; but the best looking man was myself.—Ally Sloper.

Mortgagee's Sale.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Lawrence McGinnis of Medway to Margaret H. Kenney of said Medway, dated August 8th, 1895, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, book 744, page 522, will be sold at public auction, upon the premises, on

MONDAY, the SEVENTEENTH day of DECEMBER, 1900,

at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely, three certain parcels of land situated on Village street, in said Medway, and bounded as follows

The first lot southerly by said Village street, easterly on land late of Edward Eaton, now Medway Savings Bank, northerly on land of E. E. Carpenter, westerly on land of grantor, containing five acres and three-fourths, more or less.

The second lot situated opposite and bounded northerly on Village street, southwesterly by Charles River and easterly on land of Mrs. A. H. Clark and another.

The third lot is the grantor's homestead, bounded southerly on land of Peter Foley and Village street, easterly on lot first described above, northerly on woodland of W. A. Jenckes and westerly on land of Ellen McGill and Peter Foley, containing eight acres, more or less, being the same as lands described in the following deeds recorded in the Norfolk Registry to A. P. Phillips, book 398, page 315; to grantor, book 300, page 185, book 313, page 188 book 366, page 88, except a small piece conveyed to Peter Foley.

Excepting what was released from the grantor's homestead estated seventy feet on Village street and one hundred and fifty feet deep as per mortgage from John Boudo to Medway Savings Bank; excepting and reserving from the operation of this mortgage eight acres since released, described above as lot No. 3.

Terms of said sale will be made public at the time and place of sale.

Edward J. Wentzel of Franklin and Miss Rubie M. Wales of Bellingham were united in marriage Thursday afternoon by Rev. Frank B. Sleeper at No. 16 Garfield street. The happy couple will make their future home in Milford.

Coupon tickets for the popular course of entertainment can be had next week Wednesday at the store of N. C. Nye, where the selection of seats may be secured. Already a large number of tickets have been sold, and the success of the course is assured.

A very pleasant wedding took place at Sheldonville last evening at 6 o'clock, when Miss Alma F. Scott, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Scott, was married to Mr. Charles E. Whiting, Rev. Dr. Hodge performing the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Whiting will reside at North Attleboro.

Mrs. Eliza Burke, wife of Joseph B. Burke, died at her late home on Arlington street early Wednesday morning after a brief illness with lung trouble. She was 38 years of age and leaves a husband and four children. The funeral was held from St. Mary's chapel at 9 o'clock this morning.

There were six contestants at the golf links yesterday, over the new course, and some excellent playing resulted. The following is the score: Sherman 84, Chapman 89, Rockwood 89, Nye 92, Bassett 101, Woodward 101. The first prize goes to Mr. Sherman, Messrs. Rockwood and Chapman tieing for the second.

The annual inspection of the G. A. R. post was held on Monday evening, the exercises being conducted by Deputy J. H. Pember and suite of Medfield. Guests were present from Medfield, Medway and Walpole. A fine turkey supper was served. The Friday evening previous about ten of the Post went to Walpole, where they enjoyed a most fraternally pleasant visit with the Post of that place.

The general superintendent of the Universalist church gives out a uniform list of subjects for the ministers of that church for the month of December. They are to deal with the five principles of the new statement of belief. Dr. Hodge takes up the first of these, "The Universal Fatherhood," next Sunday morning. In the afternoon he continues his series on "Religious Movements of the Nineteenth Century."

It is probable that the petition of the New England Telephone company for an extension of poles and wires on certain streets, as stated in the SENTINEL recently, will come up for consideration at the meeting of the selectmen this evening, and any citizen who has any objection to urge or inquiry to make in regard to the matter should appear at that time and make it known. It is better to settle matters then than try to remedy mistakes after they are made.

Subscriptions to the Y. M. C. A. fund are still being received. New friends of the work are coming to the front in a substantial manner every day. The amount already pledged is nearly $600, over $400 of which has been paid. It is hoped a sufficient sum may be raised to enable the executive committee to secure an additional room for educational classes, so that this work may be commenced at once. If you have not contributed you may be sure the committee will be more than pleased to have you.

The Universalist chapel was filled last evening with a very appreciative audience for Dr. Hodge's readings. To be greeted by such an audience on such a day when so many have home engagements, and when an admission fee is charged for what Dr. Hodge has so often given for nothing, is a testimony to the popularity of these readings. Dr. Hodge gave last evening, Collins' Ode on the Passions, James Whitcomb Riley's "Mister Hop-Toad" and "Christmas on the Wires," closing with "The Circumlocution Office" from "Little Dorrit."

"Our New Minister," which appears here on Tuesday evening, has just played in Woonsocket and Milford, the papers there praising it very highly. Indeed, no stronger comedy drama will be given here this season. The scene is laid in a small New England village, and the plot centers about a discharged convict, who, coming back home at the expiration of his sentence, is firmly resolved to lead a better life, but is hampered at every step by the church deacons and others, who invariably "give him the cold shoulder" The new minister, however, comes to his aid, and, in rebuking the Pharisees, makes no end of trouble for himself. In the end truth, justice, charity and love triumph.

"Remember the Maine" is the title of a new play by Lincoln J. Carter, to be produced for the first time at the Opera house on Saturday evening. The drama is said to excel anything yet evolved by Mr. Carter in the way of scenery and effects, and to one familiar with Carteresque plays this does not seem possible. A special effort to make the production surpass his previous efforts has been fruitful of a mass of scenery consisting of moving battleships, distant cities that are to be bombarded, etc. "Remember the Maine" affords scenic possibilities, said to have been fully improved, in fleets of war ships, bombardments, a naval fight at sea, tropical scenes and many mechanical revelations to make the play spectacular.

The concert and ball given under the auspices of the Jolly club at the Opera house on Wednesday evening was well attended and proved most successful socially and financially. From 8 to 9 an entertaining concert was given by Fales' orchestra of West Medway, a fine programme being rendered. The ball was set in motion shortly after 9 o'clock, the march being led by Charles Feeley and Miss Bertha Bennett. There were 24 numbers on the programme and 100 couples participated, an intermission being taken at midnight for refreshments, which were served in the hall. The hall and stage were tastefully decorated. Chas. Feeley was floor manager, William Pendergast assistant, and Stephen Maroney, Stephen Ferretti and George Cody aids. The stage furnishings were kindly loaned for the occasion by Alfred Farrington. A goodly number from out of town were present.

Summoned to Answer.

Deputy Sheriff Fitzpatrick served the notice upon the M. A. & W. street railway company Tuesday at Franklin charging that the company has declined to grant the request or heed the protests of the citizens of Bellingham. The selectmen have filed in the superior court at Dedham a bill in equity, and Judge Sherman has ordered the street railway company to appear next Monday and show cause why it should not comply with the terms of its franchise. The bill, which is very lengthy, sets forth as grievances a great number of things, among them the following: Failure to use the rails required; neglect to obtain consent of selectmen as to ties used; failure to grade streets as required; failure to widen bridges, neglect to put up railings on embankments; failure to run cars according to alleged agreement; failure to widen streets; failure to fill up between tracks at crossings and walks.

It is alleged that the company has persisted in putting in grade crossings without authority, constructing switches without permission, laying rails on different part of the street from that ordered, and refusing to answer or obey written orders of the selectmen.

The alleged violation of its franchise is the refusal of the company to run hourly trips between Caryville and Bellingham Four Corners. A further cause of complaint is the running of open cars on this part of the line at this time of the year.

The street railway officials claim that the branch in question does not pay expenses now, and declare they would rather take up the rails than comply with the demands of the Bellingham people.

The failure of the company to secure permission to cross the tracks of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad at North Bellingham, the extension of the Medfield & Medway street railway to Franklin and the completion of the direct line from Milford to Bellingham have all contributed to make the branch of the road which is the chief cause of this litigation unprofitable. T. E. Grover of Boston and Rufus G. Fairbanks of West Medway are counsel for the town of Bellingham in the matter.

The whole matter is the outgrowth of the recent indignation meeting of the citizens of Caryville and North Bellingham.

Crowley—Casey.

The marriage of Dr. J. M. Crowley, Franklin's well-known physician, and Miss Catharine Casey of Dorchester was solemnized at the home of the bride at that place on Wednesday evening in the presence of relatives and immediate friends. The couple left for a brief wedding trip and will come to their new home on Central street tomorrow. They were the recipients of many elegant wedding gifts from friends in Franklin, Boston, Dorchester and Dartmouth, N H. The doctor's office will hereafter be at his new home on Central street.

Alden Club.

The Alden club held another open meeting on Monday evening last. A large audience was present to hear the lecture on "The Marble Faun" by the Rev H. G. Spaulding of Boston.

After reading several selections from Hawthorne's Marble Faun, Mr. Spaulding reviewed the book with the aid of most beautiful and clear stereopticon views. His interpretation of the romance was very lucid and instructive, as the pictures were thrown upon the screen, we frequently thought ourselves in old Rome and looked for the different characters to actually appear, so clear was the description of the different places and characters. Mr. Spaulding held his audience with rapt attention.

Y. M. C. A. Day.

Plans for the Y. M. C. A. day are rapidly maturing and promise to get the association a good start off. As the arrangements are so far made they include the opening of the rooms Saturday evening, Dec. 9, with a consecration service conducted by Geo. E. Knight, of the Hyde Park association, and assisted by several prominent association men from some of the large associations. Sunday morning the work of the association will be presented in the churches by association men. Sunday afternoon men's meeting at rooms with address and song service. Sunday evening mass meeting at the Opera house, at which good music and strong speakers will be sure to draw a large audience. Monday evening a reception to all members at the rooms, after which a banquet will be served to all who have secured their membership tickets.

The speakers thus far secured are W. D. Fellows, general secretary of the Fall River association, and Geo. E. Knight, general secretary of the Hyde Park association, both strong men. A more complete program will appear in Tuesday's SENTINEL.

Gone Home.

The old-time residents of Franklin will be sorry to hear of the death at East Walpole of Mrs. Amelia Newell Boyden, whose home for many years was in this town, she being a teacher in the South Franklin district at one time.

Her friends will remember her as a woman of exceedingly gentle and loving disposition, ever ready with words of kindness and sympathy. Through a long and trying illness, her sunny nature and brave struggle for the life she so loved gained her many new friends and drew the older more closely. She never lost interest in the books, pictures or the beautiful in nature that had filled her life when well. Such a life so full of happiness and sunshine, surmounting physical suffering serves as a beautifully tender lesson, and the husband and son, brothers and sisters must ever look back upon it with reverence, and be grateful that the years of pain are ended.

"Not into these, bright spirit, do we yearn
To bring thee back, but oh! to be, to be
Unbound of all these gyves, to stretch, to spurn
The dark from off our dolorous lids, to see
Our spark, conjecture, blaze and sunrise burn,
And suddenly to stand again by thee!"

L. M. P.

"Remember the Maine."

This wonderful play will be given at the Opera House Saturday evening. The parts are well taken by a capable company, who deliver their lines with stirring effect.

The story of the play is an interesting one, being of the military sort, and cannot help but arouse the patriotism of an audience. It tells the story of the blowing up of the Maine, giving a realistic reproduction of that incident, showing the arrival of the ill fated battleship in Havana and her destruction and as the play runs on, showing the cowardice of the Spaniards and the courage of the Americans. The scenery used is of a very attractive nature, being new and bright.

The play closes with Dewey's victory at Manila, which is the best representation that has ever been given by any company of this battle.

Offer Extraordinary.

James F. Ray, the flour dealer, has a magnificent offer to place before the readers of the SENTINEL in this issue, found on page two. It is no less than a bona fide offer of a barrel of Pillsbury's best flour at only $5 per barrel, the offer holding good only during December. This is a rare chance to get the best flour on the market at a very low price.

The Doctor A-Sight Seeing.

LONDON, ENG., Nov. 9, 1900.

EDITOR SENTINEL:—In reply to your request for a few notes on London, I will endeavor to describe a few of the interesting things which I have been privileged to see during my stay here. They will probably be of interest to those of your readers who have never been in London, and may revive pleasant memories in the minds of those few who have seen them. My time during the week is very much occupied with my work, but Saturday and Sunday afternoons I have devoted to sight-seeing, and have been able to accomplish quite an amount in that line. The National Art gallery is situated at the north-easterly side of Trafalgar square, overlooking the great Nelson monument, and the present building was opened to the public in 1838; however, the gallery was founded in 1824 There are 1,370 pictures, some dating as far back as the second or third century, and none more recent than 1790. Here one is lost in admiration and at once becomes oblivious of time. It seems almost beyond belief that the masters of those old days were so skilled in their profession. I do not profess to be at all schooled in art, but the pictures which impressed me most were two portraits by Rembrandt and several paintings by Peter Paul Rubens, most notably "Peace and War" and "The Crucifixion;" the former is 6 feet, 6 inches high, by 9 feet, 9 inches wide and is allegorical in character. In one wing of the gallery are more than one hundred pictures by J. M. W. Turner, but I will mention only two, "Death of Nelson," and "Rain, Steam and Speed;" the latter represents an express train rushing through rain and fog, and is very finely executed. In the Spanish school the most notable were "Dead Warrior by Velazquez, and "The Dead Christ" by Josef Ribera; the former is especially beautiful. In the Dutch and Flemish school is an equestrian portrait of Charles I, King of England, by Sir Ant. Van Dyck; this is one of the largest pictures in the gallery. In one hall are several fine portraits by Gainsborough, as well as an excellent portrait of Gladstone by Sir John E. Millais. I spent several hours in the building, but one can only glance hurriedly over the pictures in that time, and I shall go again as soon as the opportunity offers.

On the morning of Oct. 1 I visited the Tower of London, which was founded in 1078 by William the Conqueror. It was first built as a fortress, and upon entering within its walls we find ourselves within a veritable castle, surrounded by an outer and an inner wall, and, between the two, a moat, now dry, and crossed by a drawbridge. Within these walls have dwelt many of the kings, queens and high officials of England, both in the time of their power and in captivity. Here occurred the beheading of people high in power, and the murder of Edward V and his brother, the Duke of York, in what is now called the Bloody Tower. In Wakefield Tower the crown jewels are kept They are very beautiful and of such size and rarity that it would be practically impossible to estimate their value. In the front of Queen Victoria's crown is a ruby, about the size of an English walnut, which was given to the Black Prince in 1367. The whole crown contains about 2,700 diamonds, and many other jewels, and weighs over thirty nine ounces. Leaving the Wakefield tower and crossing the parade tower we enter the White tower, the oldest part of the whole fortress. Here are the state apartments and the armory; and it is here that one is almost led to believe that he has been carried back five or six centuries. Every kind of armor and implement of war imaginable, of the earlier days, is here collected.

I have spent three Sunday afternoons at the British Museum, but the material here is so vast and varied that it is utterly impossible for me to give you any idea of it, as a whole. What interested me was the statuary department, and here, as at the National Gallery, one is simply amazed at the skill shown by these artists and sculptors of the Middle Ages. Here are the remains of the Temple of Diana at Ephesus, and other pieces of statuary; all in a remarkable state of preservation. One large hall is filled with relics of the Mausoleum. In this collection is a model of the Acropolis at Athens and another of the Parthenon after the Venetian bombardment in 1687, the centre of both the north and south walls being entirely broken down. In the Mausoleum room are two statues representing Artemesia, the wife of, and Mausolos, Prince of Caria, B. C. 377-353, which are believed to have stood in the chariot which surmounted the Mausoleum at Halicarnassos. They were found by Sir Charles Newton in 1857 outside the northern wall of the Mausoleum, together with large fragments of the horses. The statue of Mausolos is about 10 feet in height, that of Artemesia about 9 feet, and the horses are simply gigantic. In the Egyptian gallery are many fragments of colossal statues, of interest as antiquities rather than works

"Our New Minister."

There is the freshness and fragrance of summer, the scent of new mown hay and the quaint simplicity of country life in the atmosphere of Denman Thompson and George W. Ryder's latest comedy drama, "Our New Minister," which next Tuesday evening will have its first presentment here at the Opera House

Like "The Old Homestead," all its characters are of a distinctive rural type, and its scenes and situations likewise. It is not a religious play, but deals with the ordinary, every day happening in a small New England village, where the skeleton in nearly every household is laid bare by back-biting neighbors and a meddlesome, prying curiosity. A rich and deep vein of comedy and pathos pervades everyone of the three acts of the play.

List of Unclaimed Letters.

Letters remaining unclaimed in the post office at Franklin for week ending November 28, 1900:

Ladies—Mrs. A. H. Craig, Mrs. A. A. Hastings, Mrs Margaret Sherrin.

Gentlemen—Chas Gallagher, Wm. Holland, M A. Mackhill, J. H. Stanley.

Persons claiming the above will please say "advertised" and give date of above list.

Opera House, Woonsocket.

Joseph Arthur, the author of "Lost River," soon to be acted in Woonsocket, declares that every character in the play has its prototype in Lost River, Indiana, where he spent many years as a boy, and which is within a few miles of West Baden, one of the most fashionable inland watering places in the world. Those who remember the unique characters of "Blue Jeans" and other Indian plays from the Arthur pen can anticipate with reason a treat in the personages of "Lost River," which manager Ogden has secured for the evening of Thursday, Dec. 6, at the Woonsocket Opera house.

of art. A collection of ivory carvings in the mediæval room is very beautiful and artistic. One entire hall is filled with vases and ornaments of every nation and age, and the change in style of the different periods is a very interesting study. Many of these ancient vases are more beautiful than any we have at the present day. In this hall is a collection of Italian pottery (Majolica) painted in rich colors, which is very beautiful. I was impressed with the few marks of age which many of these articles show.

One bright Sunday morning I went for a walk in Hyde Park and at the north east corner I came upon the Albert memorial, erected by the Queen in memory of the late Prince Consort; this is one of the most wonderful monuments in the world, but, at first sight, it does not impress one as such. At each corner is a large group of figures, one representing Europe, another America, another Asia and the fourth Africa. The foundation is formed of granite, with steps arranged in the form of an octagon leading up to the base of the monument itself. The base is formed of 170 life sized figures of noted statesmen and philosophers, and above these, at each corner, is another group of figures, one representing agriculture, another manufactures, another engineering and the fourth commerce; above these is a large statue of Albert seated upon a throne beneath a double arch, and above the arch is the shaft and many allegorical figures, and all above the base is bronzed.

On Oct. 29th the City Imperial Volunteers returned from South Africa and were tendered a reception by the city. It was a record day, even in this city of crowds, and it took 30,000 Volunteers to keep the line of parade open, and even then it was blocked at several places. Eleven hundred people were injured in the crush and one of the C. I. V.'s remarked that he would rather help retake Pretoria than go through that parade again. The city went wild with enthusiasm and far into the night the streets were filled with people shouting and singing patriotic songs. The police made no effort to restrain them, but good nature is characteristic of a London crowd and it was a sight worth seeing.

Yours truly,
C. B. HUSSEY.

Dugan—Faith an' I do! Last night I dhremt I was awake, an' in the morning me dhream kem thrue.—Tit-Bits.

Naturally.

"Joe Woods' daughter has a houseful of pretty girls visiting her."

"Well, what are you going to do about it?"

"Take to the woods, I guess."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Not Chronic.

"Some doctors are discussing the question whether suicide is a disease," said Tenspot.

"If it is it isn't likely to prove chronic," added Dimling, "although it is always fatal."—Chicago Daily News.

Gets Some Relief.

"Doesn't your husband's insomnia get any better?"

"No; the only sleep he ever gets is when I think I hear a burglar downstairs."—Chicago Record.

Nerve Enough for Ten.

Ida—I have been reading these nerve-tonic testimonials and I think I will send for a bottle.

May—Do you think there is any faith in those testimonials?

Ida—There must be; they are all from book and life insurance agents. —Chicago Daily News.

Broad Comparison.

"That little Miss Twitters is as dainty as a bird," said Chawlie Jones as he reached for his fifth roll.

"It's a rather broad comparison," said the philosophical boarder. "There are birds and birds, you know—and some of them are sparrows!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern which is not afraid to be generous. The proprietors of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles, and have the satisfaction of knowing it has cured thousands of hopeless cases. Asthma, bronchitis, la grippe and all throat, chest and lung diseases are surely cured by it. Call on A. C. Mason, druggist, and get a free trial bottle. Regular size 50c and $1 00. Every bottle guaranteed.

That Throbbing Headache

Would quickly leave you if you used Dr. King's New Life Pills. Thousands of sufferers have proved their matchless merit for sick and nervous headaches. They make pure blood and build up your health. Only 25 cents. Money back if not cured. Sold by A. C. Mason, druggist.

THE LOWER ORDERS OF LIFE.

The whale is a big fish in the sea only on account of his colossal proportions. As a navigator he is not much of a success. His utmost speed in swimming is only about ten miles an hour.

Snakes of all sizes abound in the Sumatra jungles. Monster lizards are there, measuring six and seven feet. The house lizard is about 12 inches long, and makes a noise like the bark of a toy terrier.

A camel, with an ordinary load of 400 pounds, can travel 12 to 14 days without water, going 14 miles a day. Camels are fit to work at five years old, but their strength begins to decline at 25, although they live usually until 40. They are often fattened at 30 for food, the flesh tasting like beef.

In the island of Minora, one of the Philippines, the humming birds are pugnacious little creatures. A hunting party had a novel experience with them. One of the huntsmen wandered off from his comrades, but soon his screams were heard. Thousands of the humming birds had attacked him, and wounded him in hundreds of spots on his face and neck. When rescued he was streaming with blood.

Spread Like Wildfire.

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare, a leading druggist, of Belleville, O., writes: "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years. You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickly, rundown man or woman. Price 50 cents. Sold by A. C. Mason, druggist.

DAVID CITY, NEB., April 1, 1900.
Genesse Pure Food Co., Le Roy, N. Y.:

Gentlemen:—I must say in regard to GRAIN-O that there is nothing better or healthier. We have used it for years. My brother was a great coffee drinker. He was taken sick and the doctor said coffee was the cause of it and told us to use GRAIN-O. We got a package but did not like it at first, but now would not be without it. My brother has been well ever since we started to use it.

The Cheerful Idiot.

"There is no show for the downtrodden poor man in this country," said the dyspeptic boarder.

"That's a fact. The man with only one suit of clothes has no redress at all," said the Cheerful Idiot.—Indianapolis Press.

Miss Flora Farley of this town and George Pratt of Medway were quietly married by Rev. M. J. Lee at the parochial residence Wednesday evening.

The increase in the corporation tax this year is not as great as some expected, the report from the tax commissioner being a little over $100 more than in 1899.

A number of deer have been seen by farmers living in the outskirts of Franklin the past few days. Walter Cook saw three in the vicinity of the golf links recently.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Fisher had the pleasure of having their oldest son, wife and two children with them on Thanksgiving day. Two more sons reside in Maine.

Mrs. M. L. Hubbard and daughter of Wellesley and Miss Ada Daniels were at L. W. Daniels' for Thanksgiving, and Mrs. Hubbard has been visiting at T. B. Allen's.

Through the kindness of George Frederick Grant in loaning his team the goods collected at the High school on Thanksgiving eve were distributed among the needy poor.

There will be a rehearsal of Christmas music at the Universalist church next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Members of the Sunday school are requested to be present.

C. M. Smith shows us an old newspaper which he found pasted on the inside of an old trunk, the date being 1811. It was in an excellent state of preservation, both as to paper and ink.

Alphonse LeClair of North Park street returned home Thanksgiving from the Massachusetts general hospital in Boston, where he has been confined the past few weeks with typhoid fever.

Local ministers have recently received two tickets each to "Quo Vadis," now being played in Boston. These tickets were sent to all ministers residing within thirty miles of Boston.

Dr. J. M. Crowley and bride have returned from their wedding trip and now occupy their new home on Central street. The doctor has removed his office from Dana block to his residence.

Miss E. M. Dunning, who has been assisting as apprentice teacher at the Horace Mann High school, was last evening elected to a position in the Wakefield High school at an excellent salary.

The selectmen met Friday evening and approved bills. The chairman, J. C. Gallison, was unable to be present and the telephone petition and some other matters were put over until next week.

Dr. John B. Koehne, who delivered those fine orations at the Congregational church here last spring, is giving the series to large audiences nightly at the Congregational church in Putnam, Conn.

Fifty three went down to Daniel Brown's in Wrentham last evening to enjoy the meeting of the Farmers' club with him. A most profitable evening was spent, a report of which will appear later.

"Remember the Maine" was played to a good sized audience at the Opera house on Saturday evening, the piece being fully up to the high excellence which Lincoln J. Carter has set for all of his plays.

Those who heard Rev. Dr. Sneath last Sabbath assert that he has never been heard here to better advantage, both in the morning and evening. At the evening service Mrs. C. L. Stewart sang very effectively, calling forth expressions of praise from all who listened.

Friday afternoon the mothers' section of the Alden club, at the residence of Mrs. E. D. Daniels, discussed "Division of Income." It is an important and interesting subject, even to the weaker male sex, especially when considered with the question of division of outgo.

"Do you want a transfer?" asked the Woonsocket conductor here at the switch. "What for?" asked the man with the alligator bag. "So that you can take another car." "No, sir. I have waited thirty minutes for this one, and I propose to hang on to it."

A number of the ladies of the Universalist church are arranging to attend the Universalist rally at the Roxbury church, Boston, on Friday at 2 o'clock. Stirring addresses will be made by prominent workers and it is expected that most of the churches of the state will be represented.

"Our New Minister," at the Opera house tomorrow evening, fairly bubbles over with genuine Yankee humor, which creates honest laughter, and the currents of comedy are forever meeting and intermingling with counter currents of pathos—a pathos which is natural, human and sincere.

A business meeting of the Y. M. C. A. will be held on Wednesday evening in the new rooms to perfect plans for the opening on Saturday evening and the banquet on Monday evening. Things are working in a most harmonious and encouraging manner and new friends are being secured daily.

Mrs. C. K. Sanger has just returned from a long absence in New York, accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. W. R. Stockbridge, and husband. The latter has returned to New York, but Mrs. Stockbridge, whose health is impaired, will remain for a time at the home of her mother in order to recuperate.

The following children of the Four Corners school were neither absent nor tardy during the month of November: Walter Bristow, Earle Conway, Ardis Corbin, Willie Dauphinee, Nellie Feeley, Lina Hamilton, George Joyce, May Keefe, Chester Ledbury, Leon Long, Jeremiah McCarthy, Richard Savage.

The praying band of the Upton M. E. church will take charge of the prayer meeting at the First M. E. church next Friday evening. An open-air meeting will be held previous to the regular service. These young men have earned the reputation of being earnest, faithful workers and a profitable time is assured all who attend.

The men's mission closed at St. Mary's chapel Sunday afternoon, when Rev. Father Cullen delivered the closing sermon and imparted the Pope's blessing as well as the blessing of the missionary fathers to the six hundred male parishioners who made the mission. The total number of parishioners, not including children, who made the mission was nearly 1,200.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Heath of Garfield street entertained many friends and relatives Thanksgiving, among whom were Charles Connley and Miss Kittie Connley of Dorchester, Mr. and Mrs. W. Turner and Wesley Ham of Plainville, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Mason of Norfolk and Mrs. C. W. Mason and family of Union street. During the evening the guests passed a most enjoyable time in playing games, with vocal and instrumental music.

One of the pictures that has been purchased to hang upon the walls of the Y. M. C. A. is a steel reproduction of the painting which attracted so much attention at the world's fair in Chicago, and was regarded as one of the finest bits of realism among the thousand of canvases there, "Breaking the Home Ties." Of course it will be admired here and add beauty to the room.

There was a fair audience at the Methodist church on Thanksgiving day to listen to a sermon by Rev. Mr. Cook, who took his text from Psalm 117. He dealt with the significance of Thanksgiving in a national way, the occasion for it, etc., showing also that the hand of God was surely manifest in the affairs of this nation in the past. He was listened to with close attention.

We were amused the other day when a travelling showman dropped into the office for some printing and proceeded to set the price himself. We wondered if he told the hotel man what he would pay, or the hall manager. How many of us go to the butcher and tell him what we will give him for a roast, or a steak, or other cut. He would invite us to walk out. That's what we did to the showman.

At the regular meeting of the Woman's Relief corps held in G. A. R. hall last evening the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Hattie E. Turner; senior vice pres., Mrs. Miriam Sleeper; junior vice pres., Mrs. Carolyn Frost; treasurer, Mrs. Hannah M. Corson; chaplain, Mrs. Minnie Jackson; conductor, Miss Georgia Whiting; guard, Mrs. Clara Crafts; delegate, Mrs. Hannah M. Corson; alternate, Mrs. Carrie Lowell.

The Trowbridge Piano company is doing a good business, with orders ahead for future delivery. The demand for the first quality work of the company is increasing, and the product speaks for itself when it gets into the homes in tones that win the hearts of the people. A practical evidence of this, aside from the commendations of buyers, is the comparison of the present factory with the 20x40 feet single room where the business started less than twenty years ago.

Every experienced or observing business man can make a fair estimate of the amount of trade in his line that can be worked up in the community in which he may reside. Every legitimate business is capable of a certain measure of development by newspaper advertising, and in a vast majority of cases the profits of the induced traffic will amount to many times the cost of the advertising. It depends on the trader himself what shall be the extent of his business within certain limits.

The town officials of Bellingham who refused to allow the hobby horses to be in operation on Sundays at Hoag lake now propose to enforce the Sunday laws. The Winnesuket country golf links are in the town of Bellingham, and some of the members of the club have been to the links on Sunday to play their favorite game. One of the town officials says that complaints of Sabbath breaking have been made by people living in the neighborhood and it is intended to stop Sunday golf playing in the future.

Remember that the selection of seats for the popular course of entertainments at the Congregational church may be had at the store of N. C. Nye tomorrow morning. Five seats only will be delivered to one person, thus giving all a fair opportunity to secure good sittings. The tickets are already going well, and when the Harvards open the course a well filled house is assured. As to the merits of the various entertainments there is no question, as there is abundant testimony at hand in regard to their excellence.

In all probability Franklin will furnish Medway with water, as the water commissioners of the latter place are working hard on the matter of securing a source of water supply from Kingsbury's pond, situated about two miles from Medway. The commission and its engineers have made one inspection of the pond, and while there are some doubts as to its ability to furnish a sufficiency, the quality of the water is of the best, and a survey will soon be made to find what approximate quantity could be obtained. Several other sources have been examined by the commission and its engineers, but the quality and purity of the water in Kingsbury's pond is far better than any source yet examined.

People are strangely careless and neglectful about the matter of insurance. A few cents each day will carry quite an insurance and you will sleep better o'nights if you feel that some strong hand stands between you and your last penny. Read your policy, read it again, read it carefully and see if it expresses just what you intended. If you are a farmer and have a few hundred dollars' worth of farm implements insured in a certain building do not think they would be equally insured in another building. If you have horses or cattle insured in a certain barn do not think the insurance would follow them into another barn which you may chance to own just across the highway.

"Our New Minister," which appears here Wednesday evening, has just played in Woonsocket and Milford, the papers there praising it very highly. Indeed, no stronger comedy drama will be given here this season. The scene is laid in a small New England village, and the plot centers about a discharged convict, who, coming back home at the expiration of his sentence, is firmly resolved to lead a better life, but is hampered at every step by the church deacons and others, who invariably "give him the cold shoulder." The new minister, however, comes to his aid, and, in rebuking the Pharisees, makes no end of trouble for himself. In the end truth, justice, charity and love triumph.

The entertainment given at the High school last Wednesday evening by the pupils for the benefit of the poor of Franklin was well attended and all who took part acquitted themselves most creditably. The following programme was rendered: Piano solo, Miss Bly; reading, Miss Metcalf; vocal solo, Miss Corbin; reading, Alden Abbott; piano and mandolin duet, Misses Billings and Daniels; reading, Miss King; chorus; reading, George Estey; comb quartet; reading, Arthur Stewart; chorus; reading, Miss Thompson; piano solo, Miss Billings; reading, Miss Ferrer; piano duet, Misses Nixon and Allen. The vocal solo by Miss Corbin, the reading by Miss Ferrer and the comb quartet were especially well rendered. About $25 worth of clothing and provisions were brought, which were distributed by the seniors on Thanksgiving.

Adjudged Guilty on Both Counts.

The two specific complaints of violation of the express law on which James McParland was adjudged guilty by Judge Doe in the district court on Saturday morning, were alleged to have occurred on two certain dates in September. Thomas E. Grover of Canton represented McParland, and Henry E Ruggles was the prosecuting attorney. The main argument was on the particular method the defendant employed in keeping a record of the business done by him. It was adduced from the evidence that McParland used a slip of paper from day to day in keeping an account of express orders received by him. This, Mr. Ruggles claimed, was a violation of the statute, which requires that all orders shall be written in a book. Mr. Grover contended that the defendant's method of keeping a record of the orders covered the law. After arguments on both sides, Judge Doe considered the points made by counsel and decided that McParland had been guilty of a violation of the express law on both counts as charged and imposed a fine of $50 on McParland on each count. Defendant's counsel gave notice of appeal, and bonds of $200 on each complaint were furnished for the defendant's appearance at the superior court during the December term. The case will be retried at Dedham in a few weeks. The charge of illegal keeping was dismissed.

Milford Selectman Gets Excited.

"If you drive another nail or turn another shovel of dirt until the selectmen give you permission, you'll do so over my dead body," is what Selectman and Deputy Sheriff A. A. Jenkins of Milford is said to have said to the foreman of the gang of men who were putting in a connection between the Milford, Attleboro & Woonsocket and Milford, Holliston & Framingham Street railway tracks on Main street, Milford, when the foreman bid defiance to Mr. Jenkins, who, as selectman, protested against the location of the connecting link and warned the foreman to stop work. Mr. Jenkins drew a revolver.

This incident occurred just before 1 o'clock last Wednesday morning.

The trouble arose over a dispute as to how near the middle of the street a frog should be laid. The selectman was aroused from his sleep by the sound of the men working and, when he discovered the frog being laid near the sidewalk, ordered the men to stop work. The foreman scoffed at Mr. Jenkins and the latter drew a revolver. Later the trouble was adjusted and the frog was laid in the middle of the street according to Jenkins' idea.

A Remarkable Offer.

Thank God for a Faithful Friend.

Monday morning while Secretary Stewart of the Y. M. C. A. was giving an order for curtains for the rooms of the association, the question of the number was under consideration, and he said: "We want seven, but I can only order four now;" and then after a second said "Wait a moment, I have not looked at my morning's mail, and that may mean something in connection with the curtains," and turning to his pocket he took out a bunch of letters. Right on top was God's direct answer to prayer, which, when opened, was found to read as follows:

"MY DEAR CHARLES:—I have been thinking over the work of the Y. M. C. A. and it is an easy matter for me to see how necessary it is that you have that other room, in order that people not interested in class work may not be disturbed. Now I will gladly pay the year's rent of it if you will include it in the suite, * * * the only proviso that my name is kept out of the fact.

Very truly yours,

————"

This letter contained additional favors, which mean much to the secretary, for all of which he sincerely thanks God and the kind friend of the association. As the secretary says, "May God's blessing attend him."

Farmers' Club.

The club met Monday evening, Nov. 19, with L. W. Daniels, Pond street, who read a paper on "Farm Machinery and Tools and Farm Practices of Fifty Years Ago Compared with the Present." He said in part: I am just a little too young to know by practical work the methods and tools of fifty years ago. Some of the first times I remember of going into the field with my father was to see him plough or harrow. The old fashioned wooden plough had straps nailed onto the mould board, and a point that could be taken off and sent to the blacksmith to sharpen. This with a harrow of eleven or thirteen teeth comprised most all the tools on the farm in those days. Two, four and six yoke of oxen were used on the plows and harrows. You can hardly imagine the small amount of land that was then worked over compared to what we can do now with our steel or sulky plows. A pair of horses with a good wheel harrow will go over more ground and do better work than six yoke of oxen did in the old days. Then take the mowing machine in comparison with the hand scythe. Three men today can get more hay with mower, tedder and horse rake than ten men could fifty years ago.

There are lots of small tools today that were not known then. There are lots of small tools today that were not known then. The tendency of the times is to have a tool or machine for every kind of work on the farm. This may be all right where a man has plenty of money to pay for them. There are many tools used on western farms that are not practicable here on our New England hills. For instance, a hay loader Some of our machines are so complicated that the strain of working them causes many a break and delay. The manure spreader, for instance, will not stand the heavy work required of it. I have had agents here to sell me one, but when I could count six or seven that were not in use within two miles they dropped the subject, as I had the best of them.

You must all admit that farm practices of fifty years ago as compared with today have changed as well as the machinery and tools. The old way of raising nearly all that the family consumed on the farm is gone by. I can remember when my father kept sheep for the mutton and wool. He would kill a sheep every few weeks in cold weather; the wool was spun into yarn and made our stockings, and it was a point in those days never to buy anything that you could raise on the farm. I think if we did so now many of us would be short of provisions at some time. I do not think it best to depend on any one crop, but have several that follow in succession, so that if it is a poor year for one, some of the others make up the difference. The old time barter trade has passed and gone. Most of us can find some crop that will bring in ready money, as potatoes, hay, milk, eggs or chickens. I think there is a good chance to raise and sell cows. A new milch cow always will bring ready money.

Relic of John Quincy Adams.

"Lord, thou hast kept me through the night;
I will praise Thee for the morning light.
O keep me from harm, from sin today
And guide me on my heavenly way."

EDITOR SENTINEL:—The above lines I took from a southern paper which claims that President John Quincy Adams is said to have repeated them every morning the last twenty years of his life. It occurred to me that it might be worthy of a place in the SENTINEL. Might not such a relic help some of our young men to follow in the steps of the old president? For more than forty years I have had for a help to my morning meditations some similar lines of my own, which have become a fixed and satisfactory habit.

"Our New Minister."

Denman Thompson and George W. Ryer, the authors of "The Old Homestead," have brought forth a new rural comedy of New England life, entitled "Our New Minister," which, like "The Old Homestead," is as clean as a whistle," as pure and wholesome and invigorating as the air which sweeps across our New England farms, and as sweet and elevating in its moral tone as a vesper chime. Laughter and tears have a hot race in about every scene, some of the strongest and most forceful lines and situations revealing the two elements of human emotion.

It is not a religious play, as the title might naturally suggest, but rather a simple narrative of every day life in a New England rural community, with narrow-minded, hard-headed and close-fisted piety on the one side, and warm-hearted, generous, broad humanitarian impulses on the other. The new minister arrays himself on the side of liberality and that broad Catholicity which preaches charity, love and redemption rather than niggardliness and hypocrisy. It appears at the Opera house tomorrow evening.

He Was All at Sea.

An old sailor visited friends at Duluth recently, and went out in a small boat for a sail. When out of sight of shore he encountered a squall that carried away his little sail and half mast, leaving him with only a small paddle to navigate with. The wind was off shore. There were no provisions in the boat and it was three days before the sailor was picked up by a passing steamer. "Of course I suffered," said he, "but I believe that my worst suffering was from humiliation after I was rescued. The first thing I asked for was a drink of water. One of the men in the rescuing boat looked at me as if he thought me delirious, but when I repeated my request he took a tin cup, leaned over the side of the boat, and, dipping up some water gave it to me. Then I realized for the first time that I was on fresh water instead of salt, and that I need not have gone thirsty a minute. You see I had been an ocean sailor, and Lake Superior is so big and ocean-like that I just took it for granted that I was in the same fix as in previous shipwrecks.

It was a generous Swede who, in consideration of getting a good wife, was willing to add to the sum "the law allowed" for performing the marriage ceremony, according to the New York Press. "A young Swede called on a minister in a western state with a blond sweetheart in tow and asked to be married. The minister performed the ceremony. 'How much do you charge for him?' the Swede asked. 'Dollar?' 'I don't charge for it,' the minister explained, 'but the law allows me a dollar and a half.' Ole took a silver half dollar from his pocket, handed it to the minister and remarked: 'Ay tank she mek yo two dollar.'"

The immense collection of fossil fishes acquired from Ohio fields by Dr. William Clark, of Berea, O., has just been purchased by the British museum. The whole collection weighed over three tons, embracing many rare genera and species that may never be duplicated, and as a whole were the most complete set of these interesting fossils in the world. Dr. Clark, who has a world-wide reputation as a geologist, has been developing the Ohio fields since 1884, and already has many new genera placed to his credit.

Lucy Havens, hailing from Galien, Mich., and weighing about 355 pounds, became a public charge at the county poorhouse, Laporte, Ind. Dr. Deeters, of Union City, Ind., offered to marry her and agreed to deposit $1[illegible] as a guaranty of good faith. Arrangements for the wedding were begun, but meantime a showman came along and persuaded Miss Havens to travel and be exhibited. She signed a contract to do so, and now Dr. Deeters has sued the showman, asking $5,000 damages for causing Miss Havens to break her promise.

A severe wind and hailstorm struck Tunnelton, Md., a few nights ago just after Charles Cozad and his family had gone to bed. The storm lifted the whole house except the lower floor from its foundation and carried the walls and roof up into the air, depositing the house right side up and complete, except for the floor, nearly 100 yards away. The family awoke to find themselves sleeping in the open air, the house having been literally blown over their heads. Not one of them was injured.

Judge A. Gay, of Arcadia, Ind., is framing a bill which will be introduced in the legislature next winter providing for the establishment of a whipping post in Indiana to punish wifebeaters. He thinks the same punishment should be meted out to habitual drunkards, to men who insult women on the streets and in other public places and to petty thieves who under the present law cannot be sent to the penitentiary.

Strength by Using Smith's Green Mountain Renovator.

Why Strength.

Because this famous Body Builder is made in Vermont, of pure, wholesome herbs, redolent of the fragrant woods, green hills and bracing air of the Green Mountains. These herbs and plants are so combined as to be powerful agents in assisting nature to impart bodily vigor to nerves, muscles and brain.

I write you from St Vincent's Hospital, East Lake, Tenn. The hardships of the campaign brought on typhoid fever. I recovered from the fever all right, but have been unable to regain my strength until I began using your Smith's Green Mountain Renovator. I knew of its reputation in New England, and sent for some. I felt its strengthening effects in a few days, and in a week's time gained four pounds. This was four weeks ago. I am now ready to leave the Hospital, and have gained 40 lbs., strength returned, appetite returned, muscles firm, and feel like a new man—better than ever before, and I am frank to say that I owe my speedy and complete recovery to your wonderful preparation.

Alice Nielsen is from California, but her opera company has not yet been heard in that state. Manager Perley has so arranged next season's tour that nearly the whole winter will be spent in California and the southern states this side of the mountains.

Mme. Modjeska says the tour she will make the coming season is one of farewell. She is now on her way to Honolulu for a rest of a few weeks. On her return the Shakespearean play "King John," in which she will appear as Constance, will be put in rehearsal. R. D. MacLean and his wife, Odette Tyler, will support the great actress.

Richard Mansfield will stage his Shakespearean play of the year, "Henry V," at the Garden theater, New York, on October 1. The scenery for the play is completed and all the costumes have been made. In addition to the 50 speaking parts in the play, a ballet and a chorus have been engaged. It is Mr Mansfield's avowed intention to make the play as notable from a spectacular as a histrionic standpoint.

Richard Reed will begin next season his fourteenth as a star in the Boston museum, with a new comedy entitled "A Modern Crusoe," by Sydney Rosenfeld. It is said to be in a different vein from other comedies in which he has been seen. He will have the aid of Miss Isadore Rush and a company including Charles Gotthold, Herbert Fortier, L. P. Hicks, James Devlin, Myrtle Myers, Carolyn White and others.

The Nation's Mustard.

Lompoc, in Santa Barbara county, Cal., grows mustard for the whole nation. In that region 2,000 acres are cultivated to the seed, the industry employing about 200 farmers. No one employs himself exclusively in cultivating the plant, because of its refusal to yield two successive crops upon the same land. Accordingly, the mustard raiser can only devote a part of his farm to it each season. The land from which he harvested his crop this year must next year be planted to beans or barley, corn, pumpkins or beets. Indeed, results show that it pays to skip two years in planting mustard, and only turn the soil to its use every third season. What active principle there is in the soil that is withdrawn by this exacting plant to the land's impoverishment has not yet been determined. When it has been learned how to feed the soil, in order to replace what the growing mustard withdraws, the industry is expected to assume larger proportions.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The Incubus of Debt.

"People do not know what troubles they are brewing for themselves when they run into debt," says Smiles. "It does not matter for what the debt is incurred. It hangs like a millstone round a man's neck until he is relieved of it. It presses like a nightmare upon him. It hinders the well-being of his family. It destroys the happiness of his household. Even those who are in the regular receipt of large incomes feel crippled, often for years, by the incubus of debt. Weighted down by this, what can a man do to save—to economize with a view to the future of his wife and children? A man in debt is disabled from insuring his life, from insuring his house and goods, from putting money in the bank, from buying a house or a freehold. All his surplus gains must go toward the payment of his debt."—Success.

The Young Girl's Confidante.

A girl is easier to "talk to" than a boy; her confidence is easier to win and harder to hold, and most of her troubles will be of her own making. There is so much frivolity, so much light handling of the serious matters of love and life, that she is often as discouraging as she is lovable. Slowly the better nature asserts itself; slowly great ideas germinate and bear fruit. Is there nobody to help her, to reveal to her a knowledge of the grave values of living? This is a time when the minister's wife can counsel and advise.—Ladies' Home Journal.

What a Cat's Tongue Suggested.

A cat's tongue is rough and carries milk from dish to mouth, as we all know. Who would ever suppose that a man would invent a water carrier which should be a giant cat's tongue! Yet this very thing was done in England many years ago. At the top of a mine shaft was placed one roller, at the bottom another, and an endless length of cloth was wound over them. The standing water in this mine was drawn up the shaft by machinery. The water was lapped up by the cloth tongue.—Boston Globe.

The Czar's Most Trusted Servant.

Gen. Alexei Nicolaievich Kuropatkin, the Russian minister of war, is probably the most trusted, the most powerful and most faithful servant of the czar. His rise to rank and power was gradual but sure, and in 1898 he was made absolute master, under the czar, of the armies of all the Russias. He began his military career in Turkestan when a youth, and has served with distinction in all Russia's wars for many years.

Nothing Tastes Good

And eating is simply perfunctory—done because it must be.

This is the common complaint of the dyspeptic.

If eating sparingly, leaving much of the light meal provided, would cure dyspepsia, few would suffer from it long.

The only way to cure dyspepsia, which is difficult digestion, is by giving vigor and tone to the stomach and the whole digestive system. It is therefore cured positively and absolutely by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

The testimonial of Frank Fay, 106 N. Street, South Boston, Mass., voluntarily given like thousands of others, should lead to a trial of this peculiar medicine. "My niece," he writes, "was a great sufferer from dyspepsia for six years. She tried many medicines in vain. She had no appetite and was troubled with sour stomach and headaches. After taking two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla she was well."

CLARENCE'S CHANCE.

CLARENCE is all right in some ways, but he's got the political germ. That's what's the matter with Clarence. The last time he was in the hospital they must have inoculated him with the Demosthenes virus. Now he thinks he's the original font of eloquence and he's shaping up for the campaign. He's got the orations of Patrick Henry bound in morocco and the eloquence of William J. Bryan bound in calf, and the poems of Edward Atkinson bound in yellow dog.

The Topfloor Debating club gave him the chance of his life the other day. He'd been spouting around there till most of us were threatened with this fancy new ear disease and we appointed a committee to devise ways and means of shoving a spoke in Clarence's cogs. It was Bill that put up the game. Bill goes down to Fourteenth street every now and then and pulls a salary out for looking pleasant. Right next to the office where he'd work if his father wasn't head of the firm, so that he gets the same salary without the trouble, there's a sort of one-act assembly room. All kinds of societies that have got the price to pay in advance go down there and reform things. Last week there was a scrap for the room between the Society for the Suppression of Insect Life in Our Midst and the United Greek Peddlers' Five-Dollar-a-Week Police Benefit organization. That's just to show you what kind of belfry bats flit around that locality. When the Insects and the Greeks got through with each other the assembly room was suffering with abrasions and severe internal injuries. The agent for the joint turned them all out and let his place for three days to the Society of Silent Thought. Bill Pratt took a look in at their first meeting and came out with a smile on his face like a long drink on a hot day. He saw that outfit was just made to order for Clarence.

You might think that Bill would put the rest of us on at the start. That isn't Bill. Bill has an anise-seed bag smothered to death when it comes to foxiness. This was his game, and he did the Silent Thought act as if he was a member of the gang. All we had to know was that Clarence had been invited to deliver an address before the Society of Silent Thought and that three or four of us were to go along to see that he got a fair shake from the referee and nobody rubbed oil of mustard on his legs. There wasn't much time for preparation, but that didn't change the odds on Clarence. We all knew that he had his winter's supply of oratory stored away from wind and rain. Knew it? Why we hadn't had a chance to forget it for ten weeks!

"I'll give 'em 'The Influence of Monetary Fluctuations on the Rights of the Common People,'" said Clarence.

Maybe he didn't have the hot debate with the club looking glass that evening. The rest of us stood around and gave him an occasional hand on his good work, but it was a wild night upon the sea pilot. Clarence is one of those windmill orators. When he gets fairly huzzing the air is fuller of arms and legs than a trussmaker's show window. He took two hours to that rehearsal, and when we dragged him off for fear of laryngitis the mercury was peeling off the back of the looking glass. The next night we boxed him up in a frock coat and escorted him to the Silent Thought meeting.

"Now, Clarence, my boy," said Bill Pratt, "these people are a little on the freak, but they're all right at that. Their stunt is to sit very still and think very hard. That's the way they absorb ideas. Don't be discouraged if they don't give you the glad hand. They'll appreciate you, all right."

Then he led Clarence in and turned him loose on the Silent Thinkers. There wasn't any silence doing around there for the next five minutes. Clarence opened up with a few of his megaphone whoops and then he began to do calisthenics. Say, you never saw anybody more pleased than that bunch of queer ones. They were just tickled pink. What seemed to suit them best of all was Clarence's ground and lofty calisthenic gestures. He'd wave and waggle and twiddle his fingers, and pretty quick they began to get awake and respond. For a man that's always been reasonably sure of getting home before six a. m. that was a shaky experience. We fellows on the outside began to wonder what Bill had run us up against. It looked like a signal corps doing fancy practice without their official wigglers.

It might have been half an hour, or it might have been an hour, and Clarence had begun to break into the rights of the people line when Bill Pratt said to the rest of us:

"Here's where we adjourn. I think the society's had enough. Do an exit when I give the signal."

Then he broke loose in a yell that made Clarence sound like a penny whistle and let loose a lot of those big torpedoes, and down the stairs we all went, yelling: "Fire!" "Murder!" and "Police!" Clarence passed us in the stretch, though we'd left him at the post. But it struck us all as very much on the twist that none of the society came along. It didn't seem like it was any occasion for silent thought. Anyway they stuck, and when he found that out Clarence had a powerful hunch to go back and have a relapse. We hollow-squared him and took him back to the Topfloor Debating club to talk it over.

Theories were thick and plentiful about the Silent Thinkers, and the general opinion was that Bill and they had put it all up. Some way, though, the finish didn't fit with that idea. All the time we were discussing it and Clarence was getting fretty and humid around the collar, Bill did the wise owl and never said a word. Finally Bob Binks said that unless Bill opened up and gave us a full diagram he was going back home to have the place raided as a private annex to the House for Associated Maniacs.

"That's all right," said Bill, comfortably. 'Don't worry about their not being sane. When it comes to sanity they've got Clarence in a padded cell."

"Didn't you get 'em in the Eden Musee?" one of the fellows asked.

"Now, here, it's this way," Bill said. "Clarence has been having the seven-year itch to blow himself to some oratory and I promised I'd get him the chance. When I found out about the Society for Silent Thought I knew he couldn't do 'em any harm, and it would be good practice for him."

"What do you mean about not doing them any harm?" said Clarence, doing a Roman candle sputter.

"Why, they're a club of deaf mutes," said Bill.

Afterward none of us could remember just what Clarence said, but it was oratory all right. Patrick Henry would have thought he was a deaf mute himself if he'd gone up against that spiel. When Clarence went away with that proud and haughty look of his we asked Bill what the Silent Thinkers thought they were in for anyway.

"Oh, that's all right," said Bill. "I told em that my friend would give 'em a comic lecture in the sign language."

Clarence says he's going to resign from the club.—N. Y. Sun.

A Rude Shock.

He—I know your family does not like me, but—will you be my wife?

She—Well, I should say not!

"Whew! That's rather a—"

"I repeat, I should say not; but, as a girl in love doesn't generally do as she should, I'll say 'yes!'"—Catholic Standard and Times.

The Best He Could Do.

"Read that to me, will you?" said Mrs. Sterlingworth to her husband as she handed him a fragment of a Hebrew newspaper.

"I can't read it," replied Mr. Sterlingworth; "but if you'll wait until I get my flute I'll play it for you."—Judge.

SELECTED VERSE.

The Baby 'Cross the Way.

There's a little bunch of dimples at the window 'cross the street,
Just the cutest little stranger that you ever chanced to meet.
And it's good to sit and watch him at his cunning baby play,
That little imp of sweetness, the baby 'cross the way.

How we love to sit and watch him as he laughs in baby glee,
Or see him playing horsey on his papa's sturdy knee,
And his papa is the proudest when he hears his youngest say,
"Oo! oo! goo! goo!"—the baby 'cross the way.

When he bites the ring of rubber or pounds his tiny boot,
There never was a baby half so cunning or so cute,
And he is a gloom dispeller, like the sunshine of the day,
That little king of honey—the baby 'cross the way.

But when we cling to downy pillows and the icy streets are still,
And a wail of piercing anguish floats across the other sill,
And he bawls away incessant till the morning east is gray,
Then we feel that we could smother the baby 'cross the way.
—Chicago Daily News.

The "Crick."

Give me a taste of the Crick to-day
Up where it is dark and still,
Up where the bass and pickerel stay,
Where the sun peeps thro' in a stealthy way,
Where the sunbeams dance when the branches sway
Close under the towering hill.

Give me a boat with an idle oar,
And a fishpole light and strong;
With a friendly thrush on the near-by shore,
And a lucent sky where the fishhawks soar,
And I would ask for nothing more,
O not for the whole day long.

My heart goes out to the Crick to-day,
It is cool and clear and calm;
The throb of the town lies far away,
The mink and the muskrats doze and play,
While the waters sweep in a friendly way
The shores of my old home farm.

Give me a taste of the Crick I miss,
A song of the spinning reel;
Where stream meets stream with a loving kiss,
Where song birds tell us of bird-like bliss—
O, a heart grown cold to a scene like this Is a heart of the hardest steel!
—Joe Cone, in N. Y. Sun.

The Time That Didn't Turn Back.

Backward, turn backward, O Time, in your flight,
Make me sixteen again, just for to-night!
Let me go tearing around as of yore,
With my own joys to think of and not a thing more,
With no one depending on me to make good
For house rent or coal bills or clothing or food,
With father still doing the stewing, and I
Not caring a cent nor inquiring why.

Backward, turn backward, O Time, and permit
Me once more to sit here believing I'm "It"—
Put in my heart the delusion again
That I know the whole thing, as I thought I did then!
Fill me with dreams of high honors in store
That I'm always too busy to have any more;
Let me depend upon others instead—
Oh, yes! yes! I'm coming! I'll put 'em to bed!
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Times-Herald.

Growing Old.

A little more gray in the lessening hair
Each day as the years go by;
A little more stooping of the form,
A little more dim the eye.
A little more faltering of the step
As we tread life's pathway o'er,
But a little nearer every day
To the ones who have gone before.

A little more halting of the gait,
And a dullness of the ear;
A growing weariness of the frame
With each swift passing year.
A fading of hopes, and ambitions, too,
A faltering in life's quest;
But a little nearer every day
To a sweet and peaceful rest.

A little more loneliness in life
As the dear ones pass away;
A bigger claim on the Heavenly land
With every passing day.
A little farther from toil and care,
A little less way to roam;
A drawing near to a peaceful voyage
And a happy welcome home.
—Los Angeles Herald.

Happiness.

I followed Happiness to make her mine,
Past towering oak and swinging ivy vine.
She fled, I chased, o'er slanting hill and dale,
O'er fields and meadows, in the purpling vale.
Pursuing rapidly o'er dashing stream,
I scaled the dizzy cliffs where eagles scream;
I traversed swiftly every land and sea,
But always Happiness eluded me.

Exhausted, fainting, I pursued no more,
But sank to rest upon a barren shore.
One came and asked for food and one for alms;
I placed the bread and gold in bony palms.
One came for sympathy and one for rest;
I shared with every needy one my best;
When lo! sweet Happiness with form divine,
Stood by me whispering softly: "I am thine."
—H. Ward Burleigh, in Monthly South Dakotan.

Achievement of the Pessimist.

He didn't like the world.
"'Tis cruel, crass," said he;
"All men are base or coarse,
Unfit to stand with me!

"I'll quit the crowded ways,
I'll leave the noise and strife;
I'll seek a hermit's cave
And settle there for life.

"My own companionship
Is all that I shall claim—
It only may I hold
Without a pang of shame."

And so he found a cave
And there he hid his face,
And bade the world farewell—
The thoughtless world and base.

At last men learned of this,
And, with becoming grace,
Admitted that he'd made
The world a better place.
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Times-Herald.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know it.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail, address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.

Pneumonia Prevented.

Among the tens of thousands who have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for colds and la grippe during the past few years, to our knowledge, not a single case has resulted in pneumonia. Thos. Whitfield & Co, 240 Wabash ave, Chicago, one of the most prominent retail druggists in that city, in speaking of this, says: "We recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for la grippe in many cases, as it not only gives prompt and complete recovery, but also counteracts any tendency of la grippe to result in pneumonia." For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3 75 a pound, and another cost $2 65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit. The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save. If your druggist can't supply you, it will be forwarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS.

Prince Tuan is a man of letters as well as a Chinese warrior. He is the author of a romance entitled "The Night Flower of the Anshu Valley." He is a patron of Chinese art and has one of the finest porcelain collections in the empire.

The Chinese began to write books before they migrated from the region south of the Caspian sea. Two of their greatest literary productions are a dictionary in 5,020 volumes and an encyclopedia in 22,937 volumes.

Dr. J. H. Breasted, professor of Egyptology in the University of Chicago, has just been appointed by the emperor of Germany to superintend the publication of his new Egyptian dictionary. This lexicon will enable students of ethnology to study the hieroglyphics in the museums throughout the world. This is an excellent compliment to an American scholar.

Another interesting English literary landmark is soon to disappear in the shape of the house in Richmond to which George Eliot and Mr. Lewes went to live in 1855, and which was their home for more than three years. During that time George Eliot wrote her "Scenes from Clerical Life" and "Adam Bede." The house is soon to be demolished.

Florida, Cuba and the South, Mexico and California.

The Southern railway, the great trunk line of the south, offers the most perfect service for reaching the principal cities and resorts of the south, southwest and the Pacific Coast. Three through trains daily operate perfect dining car service, with through Pullman drawing room sleeping cars, New York to New Orleans, Atlanta, Memphis, Tampa, Jacksonville, Savannah, Aiken, Augusta, Asheville, Chattanooga, Nashville, Pullman tourist sleeping car Washington to San Francisco without change. January 14th, 1901, New York and Florida Limited resumes service between New York and St. Augustine. Finest train in the world, composed exclusively of composite dining, library, observation, compartment drawing room and sleeping cars, electric-lighted, steam heated. For descriptive matter of the route, rates and general information regarding the resorts of the south, apply to Geo. C. Daniels, N. E. P. A., 228 Washington street, Boston.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Compressed air cars are not a favorite in New York. Passengers say the motion is like a "ride on a mowing machine over a rocky field."

The female mosquitoes are normally without much doubt plant feeders. Why they should draw blood at all is a question which has not been solved.

It is estimated that 250,000,000 microbes can stand on a postage stamp without crowding. The name of the man who counted them is not given.

Frost flowers, composed of the ice which forms on frosty mornings in late fall and early winter, are found on only 26 species of plants. Among these are the frost weed and the heliotrope.

The New York board of estimates and apportionment has authorized the expenditure of $200,000 for the botanical garden and $150,000 for an addition to the American Museum of Natural History.

The first bank of the school savings bank system was established in 1885 at Long Island City. In January, 1900, there were 97 banks in 15 states; of 179,630 pupils, 52,694 were depositors, with deposits amounting to $280,806.

The collection of curios in the Philadelphia mint contains a coin bearing on one side the profile of a woman closely resembling the goddess of liberty of American currency. "Demos," Greek for "the people," is engraved below. The other side shows a design of the goddess Diana arching her bow, and the inscription (translated) reads: "Diana, friend of the Philadelphians." This coin, minted over 2,000 years ago at Philadelphia, Asia Minor, was discovered by Joseph Mickley, of Pennsylvania, and presented to the Philadelphia mint.

An authority on cats says that blue-eyed cats are always deaf, and that pure white ones are afflicted in the same manner.

An old Chinese proverb says: "The error of one moment becomes the sorrow of a lifetime." That unfortunate country now knows how to appreciate the truth of the proverb.

In the county of Kent, England, it has long been usual for farmers to lose immense quantities of fruit for lack of railroad transportation. They now engage automobile cars, which they load in the evening and take to London during the night. The arrangement is working well and railroad officials are busy devising plans to head off what may develop into serious rivalry.

We presume that there are some people in New England who do not see the Boston Herald from day to day or from Sunday to Sunday. It should be a matter of regret, however, that so good a newspaper is not a part of the reading matter which finds its way into the family of every intelligent citizen of New England. The character of the paper is such as to commend itself to people of refinement and culture—a really high class publication. In its editorial page are discussed all the topics of the day. Its news pages team with the latest stories of the world's doings. Its department experts contribute the highest thought in special lines. The Boston Herald is also an illustrated newspaper, in the true sense of the word, in contradistinction to the paper with pictures. There never has been so good a newspaper in New England as the Boston Herald, and no New England home should be without it. It is sold by all newsdealers, and an order to have it delivered at your home will meet with a quick response if sent to the local agent.

The Seaboard Air Line Railway,

Always Took Food Before Pleading.

Dr. Brunton, one of the most famous physicians of London, tells of a patient of his who was a noted barrister and who always took a full dose of cod liver oil before pleading a case. This barrister did not believe in stimulants and never used them while engaged in mental labor. Yet he always took his dose of cod liver oil because he said it rendered his mind much more active. Without doubt cod liver oil is a most remarkable food, especially when partly digested as it is in Scott's Emulsion. It certainly strengthens the memory and feeds and builds up the whole nervous system to a most remarkable degree.

Mortgagee's Sale.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Lawrence McGinnis of Medway to Margaret H. Kenney of said Medway, dated August 6th, 1895, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, book 744, page 522, will be sold at public auction, upon the premises, on

MONDAY, the SEVENTEENTH day of DECEMBER, 1900,

at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely, three certain parcels of land situated on Village street, in said Medway, and bounded as follows:

The first lot southerly by said Village street, easterly on land late of Edward Eaton, now Medway Savings Bank, northerly on land of E. E. Carpenter, westerly on land of grantor, containing five acres and three-fourths, more or less.

The second lot situated opposite and bounded northerly on Village street, southwesterly by Charles River and easterly on land of Mrs. A. H. Clark and another.

The third lot is the grantor's homestead, bounded southerly on land of Peter Foley and Village street, easterly on lot first described above, northerly on woodland of W. A. Jenckes and westerly on land of Ellen McGill and Peter Foley, containing eight acres, more or less, being the same as lands described in the following deeds recorded in the Norfolk Registry to A. P. Phillips, book 398, page 315; to grantor, book 300, page 185, book 313, page 188, book 366, page 88, except a small piece conveyed to Peter Foley.

Excepting what was released from the grantor's homestead estated seventy feet on Village street and one hundred and fifty feet deep as per mortgage from John Bondo to Medway Savings Bank; excepting and reserving from the operation of this mortgage eight acres since released, described above as lot No. 3.

Terms of said sale will be made public at the time and place of sale.

GEORGE HART,
Assignee of said mortgage.

Owing to the unusual excellence and interest of the Farmers' club paper we reproduce it entire.

The last flag over the quarantined cases came down today, and the board of health feel correspondingly relieved.

Many of the young people are anxious to see now a little more snow, while many of the more aged are as anxious to see less.

The amount of taxes received by the collector to date is somewhat in advance of the amount to the corresponding date last year.

The Christmas festivities are now occupying the juvenile mind, and the churches and the homes will see to it that none are disappointed.

Mrs. Mary Newell and Miss Angie Marion were recently called to Walpole to attend the funeral of a friend, Mrs. Amelia Newell Boyden.

The gymnasium outfit for the Y. M. C. A. arrived Thursday and is being set up today. The boys say "It's all right" and they ought to know.

Mrs. Abbie Sage Richardson, who spoke very entertainingly at the High school here two or three years ago, died in Rome on Wednesday, aged 63.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Richardson left yesterday by the Mallory line of steamers from Boston for Fernandina, Fla., where they will remain till spring.

The cold season so far has been an excellent one for highway work, and good progress has been made in cleaning up the traveled ways for the winter.

Christ Church Guild of Medway are conducting a cake and candy sale at the house of Mrs. Maria Treen, Village street, this (Friday) afternoon and evening.

Under a law passed last spring, when interest is charged on unpaid taxes the rate is not to exceed 6 per cent. This law does not affect the taxes of 1899.

The members of the New England Order of Protection will hold a social dance next Wednesday evening, in Red Men's hall, from 8.15 to 12, and a good time is promised.

The American band orchestra is now one of the recognized needs at an opera house entertainment, and the music supplied between the acts is a very pleasant art of the evening.

Dr. Sneath presented a critical review upon Dr. Coe's new work, "The Spiritual Life," at the meeting of the Mendon association on last Tuesday, in the Y. M. C. A. building, Boston.

All who would avoid the rush at the Opera house Sunday evening should go early Remember the song service led by Mr. Geo. E. Knight of Hyde Park will commence at 7 15 o'clock.

The ladies of the Universalist church are arranging for a bazaar and fair in Central Square hall on Thursday and Friday evening, Dec. 20 and 21, further particulars of which will be given later.

Membership tickets to the Franklin Young Men's Christian Association are rapidly being taken up and as the young men visit the rooms for the first time, the remark frequently heard is "Well they are all right."

Have you secured your membership tickets. Remember it will be necessary for you to have them if you desire to attend the banquet Monday evening. The Secretary will be at the rooms this evening and Saturday evening to supply all who may desire them.

A friend dropped into the office on Wednesday night to announce that there was a three-masted schooner near Bachelor's corner to convey passengers across the pool which had been allowed to gather and remain. Surely it looks as if it must be some one's business to attend to a matter like that.

Some time ago it was hinted that Rev. Dr. Sneath had received a call to a Congregational church elsewhere and was considering it. We have it upon the best of authority that, while overtures were made to him, yet he gave no encouragement whatever, expressing a desire to remain here with this people.

The ladies of the Mary Warfield Missionary society were most interestingly entertained on Thursday afternoon by Mrs. Charles A. Richardson, mother of Mrs. William F. Ray, who spoke upon the glimpses of missionary work which she had seen in a recent trip abroad, especially in England, France, Italy and Spain.

"Our New Minister" was played to a good sized audience on Wednesday evening, and was the best presented play seen here in a long time. Every participant was thoroughly competent, and the stage setting was remarkably true to life. The acting and sentiments expressed evoked continuous and hearty applause.

About as comfortable a place for cold weather as any is the almshouse. Under the present administration everything appears neat and trim, and the steam heat makes all parts of the house comfortable. Those of the inmates who are able to get about have a comfortable sitting room, where they can enjoy an interchange of the news of the day or the discussion of social affairs.

Frederick A. Sawyer and Mrs. Georgie A. Holmes of Franklin were united in marriage on Thursday afternoon by Rev. Mr. Sneath. The ceremony was performed at the home of Mr. Sawyer on Daniels street, in the presence of a number of guests. Mr. Sawyer is a farmer by occupation and moved here from Everett about two years ago. Mrs. Sawyer was formerly a resident of Holliston.

A very pretty home wedding occurred at the residence of Bliss Cook on Lincoln street Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock, when Jennie Miller and Bliss Cook were united in the holy bond of wedlock, the Rev. Mr. Cook officiating. The house was prettily decorated, and a number of friends and relatives were present. The happy couple left Thursday morning for a trip to Maine, taking the good wishes of hosts of friends.

The Franklin lady equipped for a walk in the rain with sensible shoes and short skirt is a vast improvement over the old style, clutching her voluminous draperies with one hand, while the other side of them drags in the mud, and balancing her parcels and umbrella in the other. Mothers as well as daughters are adopting the abbreviated skirt. Why should they not, indeed! Sensible styles and health giving sports should never be the exclusive property of the young.

There was an interesting old folk's service at the Baptist church last Sunday forenoon and a large attendance. Rev. F. B. Sleeper emphasized the importance of continual usefulness, of sweetness of character and of wise and kind judgment on the part of those advanced in years. There are none that outlive true service in this world if they will only think so. The constant study and aim should be to make life's last days on earth the best days of unselfish consecration. There is no one more loved and respected than the aged man or woman filled with divine sweetness.

Most newspaper advertisers know that they do not need to entrap people into reading their ads., but have only to tell a straightforward tale. The same impulse that leads people to look into a shop window causes them to read the advertising columns. There they often discover a want that has not occurred to them, besides gaining a great deal of varied and sometimes useful information. It is always profitable to look carefully over the advertising columns of the SENTINEL, especially those of our local advertisers. The better patronage merchants receive the larger and more varied stocks of goods they will keep.

A Franklinite writing to the Woonsocket Call intimates that the recent decision of Judge Doe in the McParland case is not a "victory" for the temperance element of the town. We fail to see it in that light. Had the decision been favorable to McParland surely it would have been regarded by McParland and his friends as a defeat for their opponents. What may be the decision of the higher court does not at present enter into the case here. It was a "victory" pure and simple, so far as this court was concerned, and beyond that no one is in a position, in this particular case, to predict.

The first regular meeting of the Practical Improvement section of the Alden club was held at the residence of Mrs. Gertrude Thayer on Thursday afternoon, fifteen members being present. Miss Frances King was chosen chairman, and Mrs Annabelle Woodward secretary. Mrs. Margaret L. Ray explained fully the object and plans of the section, and it was decided that the meetings should be informal and the subjects discussed practical. Miss King gave a very entertaining and instructive talk on "The Power and Authority of School Officials,", referring to the compulsory school age, discipline, employment, and courses of study, and explaining many laws, both local, state and national. After a short discussion the section adjourned to meet with Mrs. Gertrude Daniels on Thursday afternoon, the second week in January.

There was a large attendance at the services of the Congregational church on last Sabbath. In the morning it was noticeable that the percentage of men present was a very large one. Dr. Sneath, taking the psychological division of men into four classes according to temperament, addressed himself especially to what is known as the "choleric class," or men who are appealed to most readily in the sphere of the judgment rather than that of the emotions. He urged these men to declare themselves publicly as followers of Christ and find the lines of Christian activity congenial to their temperament. In the evening the largest audience that has attended the journeys to the Holy Land was present. Dr. Sneath took the people on an imaginary visit to Samaria, Shechem, Mt. Gerizim, Joseph's tomb and Jacob's well.

Mrs. Catherine Desmond, widow of the late Jeremiah Desmond, died Wednesday afternoon at her late home on West street, aged 76 years. She had been in failing health for some time past, but had been confined to the house only for the past week. Mrs. Desmond, with her husband, was among the early settlers of Franklin, and was loved and respected by a large circle of friends. She was one of the oldest and most consistent members of St. Mary's parish, being among the first attendants here before a house of worship had been secured. She leaves one son, James W. Desmond, and one daughter, Mrs. Margaret Scanlon, widow of the late Edward Scanlon. The funeral took place yesterday morning from St. Mary's chapel, where a requiem mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Reardon of Medway, a large number being present. The bearers were James McCormick, John Murphy, John Costello and William Doherty.

Amicably Arranged.

President Geo. W. Wiggin, treasurer E. K. Ray and directors Tyler and Shippee met attorneys Grover and Fairbanks, counsel for the town of Bellingham in the street railway matter, at the court house in Dedham on Wednesday. After a conference of three or four hours a memorandum signed by both parties was agreed upon.

Today the parties meet at North Bellingham and go over the entire line, and the company will begin at once to fix up the streets and grade. The North Bellingham grade crossing matter and the time card will also be considered.

Mr. Ray declared that if he could get a crossing at North Bellingham he would immediately push for a franchise through to South Framingham, and if the selectmen would move to abolish the crossing he would guarantee to do it. In regard to a box car the builders promised new cars early in the fall, but now say they cannot be furnished until Jan. 1 next. The question of income on the line as at present managed was not discussed. The officers of the road declared that a great many of the grievances complained of they were in ignorance of.

Alden Club.

The next open meeting occurs on Monday evening, when Mrs. Mabel Loomis Todd, who has been heard here with pleasure before, will give her deeply interesting lecture on "Carthage." It is hoped there will be a large number of members and gentlemen present to enjoy this treat.

Y. M. C. A. Opening.

The following is the program arranged for the opening of the new Y. M. C. A. rooms:

Saturday evening, Dec. 8—Consecration service, at the new rooms, at 7.45, conducted by Geo. E. Knight, secretary Hyde Park association. All men are invited and members are requested to attend the service.

Sunday, Dec. 9—Morning service in the churches at 10.30, with speakers as follows: Congregational, W. D. Fellows, secretary of Fall River association. Baptist, James S. Girdwood of Woonsocket, R I Methodist, George E. Knight, secretary at Hyde Park.

Afternoon Men's meeting — At 4, at Association rooms. Good speakers, good music, an attractive service. All men are invited. Come and invite your friends.

Mass meeting—At 7 30 p m., at the Opera house. Stirring addresses by leading Association men of Massachusetts. Special music by quartet, soloist and men's chorus. Song service will commence at 7 15. No services in the churches Sunday evening Come early and avoid the rush.

Monday evening, Dec 10—Reception to guests and members. R. M. Armstrong, general secretary of the executive committee of Massachusetts, will be present with other well known Association men. Membership tickets will admit to the banquet.

The secretary will be at the rooms this (Friday) evening and Saturday evening to supply tickets to all who may desire them.

Thursday afternoon, Dec. 13—Meeting for the formation of Ladies' auxiliary will be held in the rooms, at which Mrs. Oliver Durrell, president of the state organization, will be present and present the work of the auxiliary, at 2 o'clock.

The rooms of the association will be open after Saturday, Dec. 8, as follows: Week days, from 4 30 to 10 p. m.; Sundays, from 1 to 5 30 p. m. All are cordially invited to call and inspect the rooms.

An Unenviable Experience.

Dr. G. A. Martin had an experience with his automobile on Thanksgiving evening, about dusk, which was something in the nature of a "startler." He was returning from a professional call in Wrentham, and had just climbed the hill this side of the Lake Pearl gate. Ascending the next rise his machine was just rounding the top, when he "stripped" his gears, taking out all of the teeth, and of course, disconnecting his motive power. He at once applied his brake, but to no effect. He began to run slowly backwards down hill. He applied another and more powerful brake, but his machinery being damaged it would not work. There was nothing to do but to attempt to guide it backwards down hill as best he might. He could not jump out, for the moment he left his steering lever that moment he would be "slewed" over the embankment on one side, or over into the water on the other. Rushing backwards he managed to reach the bottom of the hill in safety, going up the hill the other side of the hollow some ways, and finally running down again into the hollow, where it stopped. The doctor kept his wits about him through it all, but did a "heap o' thinking." He is going to suggest to the makers of the auto that there should be an auxiliary hand brake attached for just such emergencies.

The Opening Night.

Next week Friday evening is the opening entertainment of the winter night's course at the Congregational church, when the Harvard male quartette and Miss Hennigar, reader, will appear. Already over 200 tickets have been sold, and many more are assured. The best seats are going rapidly and selections should be made as soon as possible, so as to insure satisfaction. The merit of the entertainments, the remarkably low price and the object for which the enterprise was planned, all combine to insure success.

Woonsocket Opera House.

The E. V. Phelan stock company holds the boards for one week, with a magnificent list of attractions, carrying all their own scenery, a fine ladies' concert orchestra, their own carpets, medallions, draperies, bric a-brac and elegant gold parlor furniture. Among the plays are The Ensign, The Fatal Card, Held by the Enemy, In Sight of St. Paul's, Too Much Johnson, The Great Randolph Mystery, Lady Audley's Secret, A Southern Romance, Led Astray, The Creole, Held by the Enemy and a vaudeville show in itself.

What We Have.

Now that Thanksgiving is over we shall pay special attention to meats, fine cuts, steaks, roasts, pork, lamb, veal, etc., pigs' liver 15 cents, home made sausage, fowls and chickens from 15 to 20 All the vegetables, spinach, radishes, lettuce, celery, etc. Canned soups of all kinds. Fine butter, fresh eggs, nice cheese. RICHARDSON.

Transient and regular patrons will find good service, clean and quick work at Oobee's barber shop, Opera house block.

Farmers' Club.

Franklin Farmers' club met Monday evening, Dec. 3, with Daniel Brown of Wrentham, about fifty going down on a special car. They had a most enjoyable time. Mr. Brown introduced Mr. Winter, who read a paper on "Fruit:"

The profession of fruit-growing has in all ages been considered an honorable and fascinating employment. It dates with the antiquity of the human race, and one of the first things Noah is said to have done after leaving the ark was to plant a vineyard. Down through the ages we find the grape holding a high place in the history of the nations, principally, perhaps, because the ancient nations whose histories have come down to us lived in that part of the globe where the Asiatic grape grew to its greatest luxuriance. Figs, also, are prominently mentioned, as holding a position second only to the grape. What the character of those fruits were we have no means of knowing, but the nations in whose possession they were were evidently quite satisfied with the profusion of Nature's bounties. Most of you have doubtless seen, on the covers of some of our religious magazines, a picture of two men carrying a pole on their shoulders, on which is hung a bunch of grapes, said to be a picture of the spies returning from Palestine to make their report to the Israelites. Tradition has it that the grape was the white Syrian, which is grown today, and has been grown under hot house culture to weigh twenty-eight pounds to one bunch.

Perhaps one of the great excavators among those Eastern ruins may make a rich find by unearthing the book which Solomon wrote relating to every plant that grew, from the hyssop that groweth out of the wall to the cedar that is on Lebanon, then we may get some knowledge as to the taste, or size, or character.

In modern times fruit growing has been pretty well reduced to a science, and I think I am safe to say that fruit growers know more about the best methods of culture than they are willing to give to the particular production they may be cultivating. There are hundreds, doubtless, who grow fruit to some extent and who are ignorant of the common methods of culture, and they will never know, because their interest is not strong enough to push them on to acquire a knowledge, which is spread all around them in farmers' papers and horticultural magazines. Like everything else, fruit farming needs energy, brains and a continual attention to little details, which make up the sum of what is called success. There is no arbitrary division between the methods of growing fruit for profit and growing fruit for pleasure, but it may be generally comprehended in the following words: To grow fruit for pleasure, a person simply grows such fruits, and in such a way, as suits his own taste; whereas for profit he ignores his own taste and does his best to suit the taste of his prospective customers. What he strives for in both cases is success. These two objects may be called the home garden and the commercial garden.

The home garden is dear to the family The housewife goes there for her supplies; the children go there for the early fruits; the husband, if enthusiastic, goes there for his daily lessons, which may be of practical value on a large scale, if this small venture is a success; and the family go there because it is a pleasant place. To make this garden a success, and profitable as well as pleasant, the caretaker will try to give variety to as far as quality will permit. In some cases this will be very limited, as with the grape, or more varied, as the apple and pear, but always have a due regard to the hardiness and excellence of the fruit to be grown For instance, if one grapevine is wanted let it be a Worden, because that is the best black ironclad variety, larger and better than the Concord and eight days earlier. It is at present at the head of the black section. Should a white be wanted, get the Pocklington. This sometimes turns golden yellow, and is handsome enough to be mistaken for a hothouse grape, and is good enough to please the palate of anyone accustomed to the Vitis Labrusca family. This list may be increased indefinitely, if good judgment and good situations are used for grapes not quite so hardy as those mentioned.

For currants, the Fay is the best, and if another red is wanted get Prince Albert, which is quite distinct and a long keeper, with a few White grape or Dana's Transparent to make a difference in color is sufficient. Of strawberries get the best you can, and get an early or medium, and a late, so that you may have this fruit for nearly four weeks. When planting pears buy a Clapp's Favorite, a Bartlett, a Belle Lucrative, a Sheldon, a Beuerre, a Bosc and a Beurre D'Anjou. This half dozen covers four months of time, from August 1 to December 1. The apple patch is, perhaps, as hard a matter to decide as any, because an apple tree takes room and is slow to bear, but a good selection to cover the season can readily be made. First is a Yellow Transparent, next a

A Protest.

MR EDITOR:—As one of the delighted listeners at the fine play of "Our New Minister," on Wednesday evening, I am sure it was an oversight on the part of Manager Partridge to allow the advertisement of a "rumseller" to appear on the finely printed programs he furnished his audience. Such advertisements are an offence to all decent people, as was the one on the curtain at Hoag lake last summer. Good, clean advertising is read with profit, but to force patrons to read the advertisements of "rumholes" is an insult to all right-minded people.

Duchess of Oldenburg and then the famous Porter. These are three of the best kitchen or pie apples in use. If dessert apples are wanted, the William's Favorite, Gravenstein and Hubbard Nonsuch will fill the bill. For winter and spring there is nothing better than the three old New England favorites, R. I. Greening, Baldwin and Roxbury Russett. If a large selection is wanted, there is plenty of room for enlargement of the list. A few Japan plums will be wanted, they bear so early and so full, and are not apt to knot as European varieties. Abundance and Burbank are among the best known and ripen in succession. Also Red June, Hale and Wickson. A great many are on the market comparatively unknown, but there seems to be a great future before this class of plums. A couple of Orange quince in a moist but not wet corner will add a toothsome dainty to the winter preserves.

Of blackberries, the Snyder for early, and the Taylor for late fruiting makes a good combination. We have not yet mentioned cherries or peaches, but can say from experience that if three cherry trees are wanted, there is nothing better than Black Tartarian, Governor Wood and Napoleon Bigarrean. Of peaches I would speak with great modesty, as I have seen more peaches grown this summer, and in this quarter, than I ever saw before. My practice has been in growing hothouse peaches, and that necessarily in limited quantities. I think, however, that the best peach I have seen is the Oldmixon, while the Early Crawford always makes the handsomest basket. Early Rivers seems to be a large, good and early peach, and the list can be almost indefinitely extended, as new kinds are easily raised, and many of them soon lost sight of.

We will now give a few words to the commercial garden or orchard, as it is usually called. If a peach orchard, the cultivator will choose his kinds carefully, plant them in light soil with a dry subsoil, head them rather low and manure with commercial fertilizers, principally bone, for phosphorus, and wood ashes for potash. This, with clean culture, will produce short, hard wooded shoots, more capable of resisting severe cold than if barn manure had been used, thus supplying them with an excess of nitrogen, which is better supplied to the vegetable patch and some of the small fruits. Should the farmer have a good local market he cannot do better than extend his home garden to suit an enlarged home trade, and by supplying firstclass fruit he makes more work and larger profits than by any other method. Should he be far from market then he wants but few kinds and those of the very best. This class grow mostly apples, and there is nothing here better than Baldwins, with perhaps a few Greenings and Russets, but a handsome Baldwin will sell itself. These ought to be sprayed about three times during the early part of summer; first, just before blossoming; then just after the bloom has fallen, and again when the apples are as large as marbles, or just before they take their pendant position. These must also have clean culture and commercial fertilizers, although if anyways stunted nothing will start them off like good manure.

Doubtless you have heard of the Pell orchard on the Hudson river, where 4,100 acres are, or were, devoted to one apple, the Newton Pippin. As this apple will only grow in a few places, he had almost a monopoly for its sale, and thus secured a fortune. Markets abroad are opening up to American fruit, and American growers are responding by planting more largely to supply this demand. On the Cumberland tableland in Missouri and in the Pecos Valley, New Mexico, orchards containing in some cases 20,000 apple trees have been planted. Such kinds as the Bahlut and Mammoth Twig, or Arkansas Black are the favorites there, and each section of the country finds its own specialties.

Besides the foregoing, there may also be said to be a garden of romance, where such men as Luther Burbank of California has spent a fortune and planted thousands of acres of seedling trees, plants, etc., and is now culling out the worthy kinds, and will revolutionize the growing of some fruits, notably the prune and Japanese plum. His efforts in this direction will probably eclipse those of any other man, and have already earned him the title of "The Wizard of Horticulture." You may have heard the story of the Fay currant. Mr Fay gave it to George Josselyn of Fredonia, N. Y., to sell on shares on a ten years' contract, and Mr Josselyn paid to Mr. Fay and his heirs in that time a little over $32,000 as their share of the contract.

The Moore's Early grape is said to have realized for Mr. Moore of Concord about $18,000, and in many other cases of a like nature show that even fortunes are made in fruit culture. Yet the fact 25 remains that the profits in this business are likely to be small, though the pleasure may be great; and while the effort to grow firstclass fruit and plenty of it may help much to develop what is best in a man or woman, their bank account will probably not keep pace with their nobler possessions.

Shirt Waists in Africa.

Helen Caddick, one of the few white women who have ventured into the heart of Africa, has recently written about her trip from Zambesi to the great lakes—a trip for pleasure. The cotton blouses or waists which she wore were washed and "ironed" by her native "boy," and the process was extraordinary. The laundryman first spread a mat on the ground. Next the clothes to be "ironed" were placed on it and smoothed out as well as possible. Then, placing a towel or some large cloth over the garment, he rubbed his feet back and forth over it until he thought it was smooth enough.—Youth's Companion.

ABOUT NEBRASKA.

Nebraska has no bonded debt.

Eighty per cent of Nebraska farmers own their farms.

The last bonds outstanding were redeemed and canceled June 2, 1900.

In 1898 1,190,000 sheep were fattened for market in Nebraska.

During the past 20 years the wealth of Nebraska has increased 155 per cent.

In Nebraska originated Arbor day. In a single year Nebraskans planted 66,937,494 forest trees.

Statistics show that in Nebraska only 31 people out of 1,000 cannot read or write. This is the best showing made by any state.

Her Reasonable Request.

When the beautiful girl's mother called her into the library for a little confidential chat the fair damsel was instantly on the defensive. She felt that she knew what was coming.

"I do not wish to be unreasonable," said the mother, "but that young man who calls here three nights a week must—"

"Enough!" interposed the beautiful girl. "I know what you would say. Harold is not wealthy, but he has excellent prospects, and I will not give him up. I love him."

"Yes, of course," returned the mother. "And naturally you have reason to believe that he loves you."

"He has told me so," said the beautiful girl.

"Exactly," asserted the mother. "Then it's all plain sailing. If he really loves you, don't you think you could persuade him to stop using hair oil or else to pay the laundry bills for the tidies on the backs of the parlor chairs?"—Chicago Post.

A Gift to Give.

It is often difficult to decide what to get your friends for holiday gifts. Here is a suggestion:

"Good morning, Jennie, I have brought you a nice present," said Gertrude, as she handed her friend a neatly wrapped package.

The pale, weary looking girl, who was slowly recovering from severe illness, opened the bundle and held up a large bottle of clear, rich medicine.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla!" she exclaimed. "I have been reading about it today and wished I had a bottle."

On New Year's day Jennie was able to be out on the street, and to her friends who remarked how well she was looking she simply said Hood's Sarsaparilla," and every one of them knew it was this great medicine that had given back her health.

Awards at the Paris Exposition.

Forty-two thousand seven hundred and ninety exhibitors out of 75,531 have received awards at the Paris exposition. The United States obtained 1,981 awards, of these 220 were grand prizes, 456 gold medals, 583 silver medals, 422 bronze medals, 270 honorable mentions, and a long list of gold, silver and bronze medals of collaborators. In the last exposition only 1,000 prizes, including those for collaborators, were given. The prizes were as follows: Grand prizes, 55; gold medals, 214; silver medals, 300; bronze medals, 246; honorable mentions, 229. The names of those who received grand prizes or gold medals have been made public.—Scientific American.

Peking's Big West Gate.

Eruptions

Dry, moist, scaly tetter, all forms of eczema or salt rheum, pimples and other cutaneous eruptions proceed from humors, either inherited, or acquired through defective digestion and assimilation.

To treat these eruptions with drying medicines is dangerous.

The thing to do is to help the system to discharge the humors, and to strengthen the digestive and assimilative functions against their return.

Hood's Sarsaparilla can be confidently relied upon to do that, according to thousands of voluntary testimonials.

It effects radical and permanent cures.

"I was troubled with eczema for some time, but have had no return of the disease since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla." J. G. Hines, Franks, Ills.

"I was troubled with pimples on my face and back and chafed skin on my body. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me of both troubles." Miss Alvina Wolter, Box 212, Algona, Wis.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
is positively unequaled—the medicine for all humors.

Hay Fever in Germany.

Hay fever is becoming more prevalent annually in Germany, and after carefully considering the matter physicians of that country have selected the island of Heligoland as the most suitable resort for such sufferers. Hitherto patients have been most frequently sent to the mountains, but the benefits of such a change have hardly been commensurate with the cost. Investigation convinces medical men that Heligoland has many of the curative qualities which hay fever patients have found in northern Michigan and a "Hay Fever Union of Heligoland" has accordingly been formed, with headquarters in Hanover. The union is rapidly gaining members, particularly in the northern and eastern sections, where grass and hay grow in abundance.—Chicago Chronicle.

In Memory of a War Horse.

The finest church at Posen, on the eastern border of Prussia, was built by Frederick the Great. For centuries it has done duty as a place of worship, and yet had it not been for a war horse it would never have been built. Close by a bloody conflict occurred between the king and the Russians, and the former, always in the thick of the fight, had his charger killed under him—a sturdy animal that had borne him throughout many battles. He felt the joy of victory to be modified by the loss of the horse, and put up to its memory the famous church in question.—London Daily Mail.

THEIR ISLAND FETE.

BY KATRINA KLAUSEN.

IT WOULD be hard to find a more beautiful place for a garden party than the summer home of the Lindsleys, who, besides having a bay all to themselves owned a dear little island in the middle of it, which Mr. Lindsley had bought and named after his youngest daughter, Helen. This summer had been one of the happiest the children had ever known at "Mount Pleasant." Swimming and tennis were the favorite pastimes, and on Saturday evenings Mrs. Lindsley, who was as beautiful as her daughters, chaperoned them to the dance at the hotel across the adjoining lake. The summer was drawing to a close to everyone's regret, and the first of August brought Helen's seventh birthday which was to be celebrated by old and young.

"I have written 30 invitations for the child's party," said Mrs. Lindsley, "and only six of them are for children. That is positively all there are around this lake, at least whom we know."

"Never mind, mother," said Kathryn. "Helen will have just as good a time, won't you, dear?"

"Yes, if you only have the supper out under the trees and have hearts with mottoes on, because I want to pick out a nice one for Mr. Archie," answered the child as she hurried out to see the lanterns strung among the trees.

The guests were asked to come at four o'clock; so at that hour Helen and some of the family were down on the pier to greet them. She looked like a little princess, in her dainty white dress and gorgeous red sash. Her dark curls were tied with a ribbon of the same shade and her blue eyes fairly danced as the Johnsons' pretty yacht made the landing. They gave her three cheers before anyone came ashore, and though she was somewhat abashed, the little lady made the prettiest little courtesy imaginable.

Each new guest brought some remembrance of the occasion for the little queen, and each was well paid for their thoughtfulness by the bright, happy smile with which she received them.

"She is her mother over again," said one, and no higher compliment could have been paid her, for everyone who knew her sweet-faced mother loved her. She was the center of all the mirth and good times that were known about the resort, and for everyone there was always a kindly, cheery, happy word.

When several sailboats and rowboats had landed their burdens the guests started up the hill towards the house, which was, indeed, a pretty sight, as well as the surrounding grounds, while the sweetest music was played by an orchestra hidden among the trees. It was a red, white and blue party, and flags were everywhere, even on the birthday cake. Everyone will remember that supper for years to come. Helen sat in state at the head of the table, with her favorite, Mr. Archie, and looked down the long line of faces, smiling upon them all alike. The most fun was when the hearts began to be passed back and forth.

"Mamma Lindsley," said Kathryn from one end of the table "the boys are sending you all the nicest hearts!"

And it was indeed true. "I love you dearly," "May I kiss your hand?" and other little candy hearts of like sentiment were piled up before "Queen Elizabeth," as the children called her, and she would carry on the fun by picking out suitable answers. After supper the guests wandered about, many going down in the hollow to see a famous game of tennis. It soon began to get dark, however, when some one asked for Helen.

"She went down the hill with Jamie Brooks," said one of the children.

"Why, I don't see them anywhere," said Kathryn, running to the top of the hill and looking toward the pier.

"Don't tell your mother," said Harold Marston, coming up behind her, "but I believe that youngster has taken her out in a rowboat—the one the Harts came in is gone, and by Jove, there's an oar afloat!"

They were half way down the hill when a child's scream came from the other side of "Helen's island."

"Oh, heaven help us! That was Helen's voice," cried Kathryn, staggering on, but Harold's boat was flung off and his fine muscular arms were pulling long strokes by the time the others were hurrying down the hill. Two other boats were soon started, and, as they disappeared around the end of the island, the agony of those on shore was terrible. Mrs. Lindsley stood on the very edge of the pier, straining her eyes in the dusk. A stiff breeze had come up and was swaying the lanterns to and fro, and the music of "Sweet Dreamland Faces" was wafted to them. Then came the first boat in sight. Some one called and then a little voice cried out:

"Mother! Mother dearest, I'm all right only so wet, and my new—" but Helen was in her mother's arms and the words were stifled.

When the excitement had somewhat abated an hour later, Jamie, the adventurer, told again how he wanted to show Helen an awfully big turtle around on the other shore of the island, how he had lost an oar and then, standing up to paddle as he had seen his brother do, had lost his balance and capsized the boat.

"I told her not to scream," said this would-be hero, "and I would save her, but she got right hold of my neck and yelled. I can swim, and—well, anyhow, I'm glad you fellows came; it was so kind of horrid out there."

"And now I have to end my party wrapped up in a blanket," said Helen, disconsolately, "and I was going to hold a taper to the first pinwheel, too."

The little children were allowed to stay until the fireworks were exhausted, when the others gathered from different directions to dance in the big dining-room, and "Queen Elizabeth" was the gayest of the gay, for she would not let her fright spoil the fun, which they never enjoyed as well as when she participated. She danced and sang for them, and, when at a late hour the guests went singing down to their boats, she took Harold aside and kissed him.

"How can I ever thank you, my dear boy, for what you have done to-night?"

"How?" said Harold, "I deserve no thanks, but you can do something for me if you will—don't let Kathryn forget me this year while I am off at school. I'm afraid she will, and, oh, Queen Elizabeth, I love her so awfully!"

"Why, Harold, you are only a boy—18 years old, aren't you?"

"Yes, but she's the girl for me, and when I'm old enough I'm going to ask her to have me—then—then I'll have you for my mother—won't that be jolly?"

"Well, I'll think about it," laughed Mrs. Lindsley, sending him off after the others.

She stood on the brow of the hill, listening to the laughter and singing as one little party after another embarked.

"Is it possible that 18 years have passed since I, too, was as young and care free as that?" she said softly to herself.—Detroit Free Press.

A Few Words about

Pain-Killer

A prominent Montreal clergyman, the Rev. James H. Dixon, Rector St. Judes and Hon. Canon of Christ Church Cathedral, writes:—"Permit me to send you a few lines to strongly recommend PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER. I have used it with satisfaction for thirty-five years. It is a preparation which deserves full public confidence."

New Jersey Fossils.

In the blue shales of a valley a few miles from Montclair, N. J., are found fossil fish of a kind which is almost extinct, only three specimens now surviving. They belong to the order of ganoids, which possessed no interior bony skeleton, but only an outside covering of bony or cartilagenous plates. They were the earliest known vertebrates. A number of excellent specimens show distinctly the shining, bony scales of this peculiar species of fish which, according to geologists, must have existed ages ago.—N. Y. Sun.

Just to Keep Them Quiet.

"Yes," said the young matron, "I believe in voice culture for children. It is undeniably true that many little ones have harsh and disagreeable voices, and I think voice culture would add much to the pleasures of existence. Don't you?"

The savage bachelor hesitated a moment before answering.

"Possibly," he said, at last, "as a substitute for more effective measures voice culture might be acceptable, but don't you think it would be better to cut out their vocal chords?"—Chicago Post.

First Known to the Chinese.

One of the greatest Chinese discoveries was a kind of iron ore which attracts iron—the magnet. Then they found that a bar of magnetic iron set free always points to the north. That is the mariner's compass, without which travel at sea would be almost impossible. They were the first people to dig canals and so find a cheaper way of carrying goods than even our railways. In building they discovered the greatest of all inventions—the arch.—N. Y. Sun.

The Verdict.

A coroner's jury in Georgia delivered the following original verdict on the sudden death of a merchant who had failed in business:

"We, the jury, find from the doctor's statement that the deceased came to his death from heart failure, superinduced by business failure, which was caused by speculation failure, which was the result of failure to see far enough ahead."—Atlanta Constitution.

When a woman doesn't take any interest in her housework—
When the least exertion tires her—
When her back aches constantly—her head troubles her—limbs pain, and she feels generally miserable, it's a pretty sure indication that her kidneys are not doing their duty.
That backache is simply kidney ache—
The poison the kidneys should take out of the blood is left in, and is breeding all sorts of dire diseases—
But you can stop it—

Doan's Kidney Pills

Act directly on the kidneys—strengthen them, help them to do their duty.

Read what one grateful woman has to say about it.

Mrs. S. Lake, professional nurse, residing at 39 Temple street, Nashua, N. H., says:

"It afforded me great pleasure early in the spring of 1896 to testify to the wonderful value of Doan's Kidney Pills. I had suffered for four or five years with severe pain across the small of my back and had been unable to obtain any permanent relief until I took a course of their treatment. It affords me greater pleasure now, and it is nearly three years since I gave my original statement for publication, to say that my opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills has been strengthened instead of weakened by the lapse of time. Not only was the cure effected in my case permanent, but I know of many others in Nashua who have reason to be thankful for the existence of this remarkable preparation."

Letting Down a Snob.

A plumber who was sent to the house of a stock broker to execute some repairs was taken by the butler into the dining-room and was beginning his work when the lady of the house entered. "John," said she, with a suspicious glance toward the plumber, "remove the silver from the sideboard and lock it up at once." But the man of lead was in nowise disconcerted. "Tom," said he to his apprentice, who accompanied him, "take my watch and chain and these coppers home to my missus at once. There seems to be dishonest people about this house."—Chicago Chronicle.

Pity and Beauty

The most beautiful thing in the world is the baby, all dimples and joy. The most pitiful thing is that same baby, thin and in pain. And the mother does not know that a little fat makes all the difference.

Dimples and joy have gone, and left hollows and fear; the fat, that was comfort and color and curve—all but pity and love—is gone.

The little one gets no fat from her food. There is something wrong; it is either her food or food-mill. She has had no fat for weeks; is living on what she had stored in that plump little body of hers; and that is gone. She is starving for fat; it is death, be quick!

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the fat she can take; it will save her.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other.
If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation," were the startling words heard by Mrs. I. B. Hunt of Lime Ridge, Wis., from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. Gall stones had formed and she constantly grew worse. Then she began to use Electric Bitters, which wholly cured her. It's a wonderful stomach, liver and kidney remedy. Cures dyspepsia, loss of appetite. Try it. Only 50 cts. Guaranteed. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

A Poor Substitute.

Physic is a poor substitute for exercise.—Chicago Daily News.

Your best feelings, your social position, or business success depend largely on the perfect action of your stomach and liver. Dr. King's New Life Pills give increased strength, a keen, clear brain, high ambition. A 25 cent box will make you feel like a new being. Sold by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

The Sultan's Expenses.

By slightly curtailing his vast personal expenses the sultan of Turkey could easily pay Uncle Sam's little bill and a good many others besides. His annual outlay is in the neighborhood of $30,000,000, of which $7,000,000 goes to clothe the ladies of the harem, $400,000 for his majesty's own wardrobe, $7,500,000 for presents, $5,000,000 for pocket money and $5,000,000 for the royal table.—N. Quest for Conquest.

A woman's quest is usually a conquest.—Chicago Daily News.

This Is What They Say.

Those who take Hood's Sarsaparilla for scrofula, eczema, eruptions, catarrh, rheumatism or dyspepsia, say it cures promptly and permanently, even after all other preparations fail. You may take this medicine with the utmost confidence that it will do you good. What it has done for others you have every reason to believe it will do for you.

Constipation is cured by Hood's Pills 25c.

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are too expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2.65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit. The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save. If your druggist can't supply you, it will be fowarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

Some Foolish People

Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say, "Oh, it will wear away," but in most cases it will wear them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose. Price 25c and 50c. Trial size free. At all druggists.

What Shall We Have for Dessert?

This question arises in the family every day. Let us answer it today. Try Jell-O, a delicious dessert. Prepared in two minutes. No baking; add hot water and set to cool. Flavors: Lemon, orange, raspberry and strawberry. At your grocers, 10c.

Mother Gray's Sweet Powders for Children.

Successfully used by Mother Gray, nurse in the Children's Home in New York, cure feverishness, bad stomach, teething disorders, move and regulate the bowels and destroy worms. Over 30,000 testimonials. They never fail. At all druggists, 25c. Sample free. Address Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

To the Deaf.

A rich lady, cured of her deafness in the head by Dr. Nicholson's Artificial Ear drums, gave $10,000 to his institute, so that deaf people unable to procure the ear drums may have them free. Address No. 5095C, The Nicholson Institute, 780 Eighth avenue, New York, U. S. A. jl27

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The members of the Epworth league committee will send a Christmas barrel of clothing, books, toys, etc., to the Epworth league house in Boston, and those wishing to contribute may leave articles at Waterman's laundry or with Mrs. A. M. Willard, 16 Dean avenue.

Owing to the prevalence of coal gas at the Thayer school on Friday it was found necessary to dismiss the school, some of the pupils being made sick and complaints coming in from parents. Monday forenoon there was no school at the Nason building owing to the extreme cold.

The Farmers' club meeting next Monday evening is at the town farm, when the subject of owning a farm for the poor will be discussed. Charles Atkinson, the superintendent, is expected to open the question personally or with a substitute, and no doubt the subject will prove of much interest.

We have been experiencing a taste of real winter weather, commencing on Sunday with a flurry of rain and snow. The thermometer sank rapidly, and by Monday morning it had dropped to about four above zero. During the day it went up to about 20, moderating noticeably during the night.

Oliver Longway seeks damages from the town for injury by collision of his team with an electric light pole on Fisher street upon a dark night some weeks ago. He alleges that something at the roadside startled his horse and the carriage struck a pole, which had no legal right in the place it occupied.

The praying band of the Upton Methodist church, consisting of eight male members, held an open-air praise and song service in Central square Friday evening Afterward the band went to the First M. E. church, where they took charge of the prayer meeting and held a most interesting service of song. There was a large audience present.

Florent D. Whitmore, at one time teacher at the High school here, was last week acquitted in the Eighth district court in Providence on the charge of assault on one of his pupils, by throwing him about and tearing his clothes. There was a good deal of interest in the case there, Mr. Whitmore being a teacher in the new school at Cranston.

At the meeting of the selectmen Friday evening Messrs. Clark and McCarthy present, bills were approved, and the petition of the New England Telephone and Telegraph company for extension of wires and poles was granted, no opposition appearing. Road matters received the regular attention and were discussed informally with the superintendent of streets.

The regular meeting of the Greenhalge Literary society was held Friday afternoon. After the business meeting the following program was enjoyed: Quartet, Misses Corbin, Ferrer, Daniels and Billings; reading, Miss Holmes; mandolin duet, Misses Daniels and Billings; recitation, Miss Ferrer; banjo solo, Miss Van Arsdalen; reading, Mr. Abbott; recitation, Miss Walsh; comb trio, Misses Ferrer, Corbin and Daniels.

Tax Collector Sherman reports having received from out of town business concerns letters of inquiry to towns regarding taxes, assessments or residents and enclosing no stamp. A good many men are willing to give paper and time in reply to such queries, but when it necessitates in addition payment of money to supply some one with information on which, it is reasonable to suppose, they think worth something to them and nothing to the other side, is more than all men will submit to a long time. And that is why many such requests remain unanswered.

Gorman's Alabama Troubadours will appear on Saturday evening at the Opera house. Twenty-five eminent Afro-American artists will combine in presenting all the pleasant features of Southern plantation life. All the dances peculiar to the ebon hued people of Dixie land will be given by strictly firstclass artists. They are so widely and so favorably known that mere mention of their engagement is sufficient to insure the attendance of hundreds of pleasure seekers who desire pure enjoyment furnished by entertainers of superlative merit. Tickets on sale at Dana's Wednesday morning.

One of the most well-known figures upon our streets is William A. Stanley, who celebrated his 86th birthday anniversary at the Crescent house on Thursday. There was no formal program of exercises, but he received the congratulations of friends and several memorials of the occasion. Mr. Stanley was born in Attleboro and learned the moulder's trade. His wife died some years ago. Two daughters remain, one the wife of Eugene R. Thayer, of Greeley, Col., and Miss Abbie Stanley, now living with Mr. Stanley. He bears the weight of years remarkably well and is in good health. He has been a resident of Franklin many years.

SUCCESSFULLY INAUGURATED.

A Strong, Forceful Y. M. C. A. Under Auspicious Conditions.

> "No life
> Can be pure in its purpose or strong in its strife
> And all life not be purer or stronger thereby."
> —MEREDITH.

Who shall say that the influences which shall reach out into the lives of the young men of this place because of the instituting of a Y. M. C. A. on Saturday shall not be as far-reaching as eternity itself? We are not independent creatures; each one is in a measure dependent upon some one else. Every life touches at some point the lives of others. If that contact be for good that influence never ceases. It is like the circle in the sea, set in motion by the dropping of a pebble, which radiates in never ending ripples till it is lost to sight and computation.

After weeks of earnest effort on the part of interested and devoted workers who have given of their time, their energy and their money, the institution was opened to the public on Saturday evening, the new rooms being dedicated by a consecration meeting, attended by a large number of the Christian young men of the place, a fitting initial for the work which it is hoped and expected will be done in this place. The service was led by George E. Knight, secretary of the Hyde Park association, to whom has just been entrusted a gift of $25,000 for the Y. M. C. A. there by a generous-hearted business man of that place. Mr. Knight is a spirited and pleasing singer and he led the song service in an inspiring and happy manner.

Prayer being offered, Mr. Knight spoke for a half hour or more upon "Consecration." He said it was no light thing to be consecrated; to devote all of one's God given powers to the Master's service. Consecration was not a thing to be done today, tomorrow and the day after. It should be done once for all. The Christian must place himself in the proper attitude and the consecrating would be done by God. It did not mean a half-hearted service, giving God the fag ends of one's life, but to give him the best that is in one's powers and continue the service until the Master shall say "Well done, good and faithful servant." An appeal was then made for the young men to rise and indicate their willingness to offer themselves for the work, most of them signifying their desire to do all in their power to carry on the work which has been begun in Franklin

After the meeting the members and friends enjoyed the gymnasium, went below and participated in the games in the parlor, or read the periodicals furnished in the reading room. Everywhere a most cheerful and inviting atmosphere pervaded. Greetings, handclasps and welcomes were heard on all sides, and the general tone of the place was helpful and uplifting.

On Sunday morning, at 9.15, a meeting was held at the rooms for the executive committee, the invited workers and the pastors, to talk over the plans and seek divine blessing upon the exercises of the day. At 10.30 the pastors of the Congregational, Baptist and Methodist churches gave up their pulpits to the visiting brethren, W. D. Fellows, secretary of the Fall River Y. M. C. A., occupying the desk at the Congregational church, George E. Knight of Hyde Park at the Methodist church, and James S. Girdwood of Woonsocket at the Baptist church. In the afternoon A. C. Cotton, who has been actively engaged in the work in Malden, spoke before the Episcopal people at the Baptist church.

Mr. Fellows held the closest attention of a large audience while he spoke of the work here in the state and elsewhere. He spoke with an earnestness which showed how deeply he had the matter at heart and how thoroughly in love with it he was. Alternately he moved his audience to laughter and tears, as he dwelt upon the theme of the hour. He cited the number of buildings, of individuals, the amount of money invested and the inception and growth of the work. He told how important it was that the young man should be started out right, and that no matter how humble an origin a man might have, that should prove no bar to advancement along material or spiritual lines. He referred to the curse of intemperance, and what a hold it had upon the young men of our land, and what proportion were in penal institutions as a result of it. He showed how ready were thousands upon thousands of parents throughout the length and breadth of this land to say from the depths of their hearts, as they looked upon the influence of this institution upon their own sons, "God bless the Y. M. C. A."

At the Methodist church Mr. Knight spoke largely from the theme of the evening previous, "Consecration," dwelling also upon the blessings and benefits of the work. The same line was followed by Mr. Girdwood and Mr. Cotton. Much of it was new to many of the hearers, but so interested were the speakers that a deep impression was made upon the hearts of all.

At 4 o'clock the reading room at the Y. M. C. A. was completely filled with young men, who listened to Mr Fellows as he spoke upon the wisdom of becoming a Christian and following in the footsteps of the Master. He spoke of the excuses which are offered for delaying the settling of the all-important matter and how rarely it would stand the test of honest questioning. He urged with telling earnestness the wisdom of starting at once and the danger of delay. The song service preceding the address was led by Mr. Knight.

With the thermometer at only fifteen degrees above zero outside, the Opera house at 7 30 was nearly filled with thoughtful men and women who had come out to hear how their sons might be benefited by the work which has been started here. The stage was occupied by the pastors, the speakers and the singers, a quartet consisting of the Misses Whiting and Messrs. Abbott and Sherman singing very acceptably, and the song service was led by the chorus in charge of Mr. Knight. President Daniels introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. Fellows, who covered many of the points of his morning address.

He said that the work had been going on for fifty years, had over 600,000 members, about 30,000 being railroad men. Twenty million dollars are invested in about nine thousand organizations. Work is also done among the Indians, the colored, the seamen and the soldiers.

Mr. Knight was called upon to ask for the offering, and he was very happy in his remarks. He alluded to the difference between an offering and a collection, saying the latter was something that we did not care for, while the former was something which we could use ourselves. He told how the young ladies could assist by encouraging the young men to support it with time and money, and advised the young ladies to look there for a husband if they wanted a good one. The audience was dismissed with "Work for the night is coming," and the benediction by Rev Mr. Sleeper.

On Monday evening a banquet was provided for the members and a few invited guests, more than 100 sitting down to a feast of good things, escalloped oysters, cold meats, rolls, tea, coffee, cake and ice cream. The following young ladies officiated most acceptably as waiters: Misses Lewis, Bacon, Hubbard, Bright, Ham, Martin, Fisher, Rockwood, Hosie, Daniels, Brock, Rounds and Mrs. Clark. After the banquet cheering words were indulged in, President Daniels acting very happily as toastmaster. Among those who spoke were Mr. Daniels, Revs. Sneath, Sleeper and Cook, Secretary Stewart, William A. Wyckoff and Editor Johnson. J. D. Sharman, secretary of the Woonsocket Y. M. C. A., was present and voiced warm words of greeting and good cheer, and E. W. Gallup, cashier of the First National bank of Woonsocket, delighted all by his witty and earnest remarks. Prayer and benediction was offered by Rev. Guy W. Miner.

After the speaking the guests returned to the rooms, where games, social chat, music, etc., were indulged till after 11, the entire occasion being one of extreme sociability, pleasure and profit. It brought the members into close touch with each other, new friendships were formed and a mutual bond of union established which must make itself felt in the organization.

On Thursday afternoon a meeting will be held at the rooms, at 2 o'clock, to form a ladies' auxiliary, addressed by Mrs. Oliver H, Durrell of Boston, whose heart is thoroughly in the work. A junior class will be formed later, taking in the lads of the town. They are very enthusiastic.

The following are the officers of the new association: President, Ernest D. Daniels; vice presidents, Herbert W. Thayer and A. H. Martin; secretary, Charles L. Stewart; recording secretary, R. J. Calkin; treasurer, Charles H. Prince. The executive committee is composed of the above board of officers. Much of the credit for the forming of an association here is due to Secretary Stewart, who has been indefatigable in his efforts, the idea of a successful association being possible here having been largely his own. His heart must have been made glad at the sight which greeted his eyes last evening.

While Y. M. C. A. work is a labor of love, it is also one of sacrifice. This was well illustrated in the case of Mr. Fellows, who came here Saturday night, spoke three times on Sunday, absolutely without pay, and that in view of the fact that his wife was to leave on Monday for a six weeks' stay in the West. Think you it required no sacrifice on his part? Yet he said he was more than repaid by the interest and the earnestness which he found displayed by the people of Franklin in this movement. And he is in constant demand all over the state for just such work as this, though he is careful not to allow these visits to interfere with the grand work he is doing in Fall River.

Now just a word for the work. Its influence is ever on the side of good. It aims to make young men better morally, physically and religiously. It rounds out their whole nature. Its uplifting influence is a power for good in every community where it exists Corporations of all kinds, mercantile, railway and others, encourage, foster and support it, notwithstanding they are charged with being "soulless." Great railway lines appropriate thousands of dollars that their employes may be brought within the helpful influence of the Y. M. C. A. Fathers and mothers encourage it because of its influence upon their sons, keeping them at night from places where vice and sin find small restraint or hindrance. What father, indeed, would upbraid a son who said that he had spent the evening in the Y. M. C. A. rooms, where clean, instructive literature, harmless games, helpful conversation and healthful exercise are to be found?

Contrast this with the average club room or billiard room where young men congregate of an evening. It is the exception where the room is not reeking with tobacco smoke, vulgar jokes abound, card playing is indulged in, tabooed books are read with openness and freedom, together with other influences which are the reverse of uplifting. Who would choose the latter in preference to the former?

But it is urged by some that religion is given undue prominence. This is not so. No one is compelled to take any religious stand that he is not perfectly willing to take, and that he does not see is for his good. Fully one-half of the members of the Y M. C A. in this country are unconverted men. That does not look as if there was any religious compulsion. At the same time the religious feature is never lost sight of; it is never subordinated; it aims to be what its name implies, a young men's Christian association. It is absolutely undenominational; no creed is discussed, and no person is shut out from membership in this grand organization because of his creed. It aims to send out into the world strong, healthy, intelligent, Christian young men, and it is succeeding in its purpose with a certainty which indicates that the hand of God is in it and its work is finding favor in his eyes.

Now what has Franklin got? Every speaker on Sunday said that the local organization had an equipment of which the town might be proud, and that is absolutely true. The rooms are situated upon the third and fourth floors of the Morse building on Central street. At the second landing a sign announces that the rooms are above. Step up stairs with us, and let us introduce you to the Franklin Y. M. C. A.

The first room is the parlor. A fine serviceable tapestry Brussels carpet is upon the floor; the secretary's desk is a new roll top; a number of handsome pictures grace the walls; a Trowbridge piano is free to anyone who desires to use it; the rooms are heated by steam and from graceful chandeliers depend electric lights; the easiest of easy chairs have been procured, not cheap things, but handsome, comfortable and serviceable; the secretary's desk has a typewriter and arrangements have been made for a telephone; games are found to suit the tastes of all. A general air of homelikeness and welcome pervades the room and causes the member or stranger to feel that someone is taking an interest in him.

Step into the next room. Here are long reading tables upon which will later be found the leading newspapers and magazines of the day, educational, mechanical, religious, etc. A writing desk with materials is at the disposal of any of the members; comparative quiet only is enjoined here, so as not to interfere with the reading or writing of others in the room. The next room is to be used as a class room, where devotional meetings and Bible study may be had, freed from interruptions which might possibly enter.

Upon the next floor is the gymnasium, where a room has been fitted up with many of the best athletic appliances for recreation, exercise and development of the muscles. Among these are the rings, trapeze, punching bag, Indian clubs, chest weights, dumbbells, etc. A shower bath is to be put in, and lockers have been provided for the members' clothing. Other appliances will be added as they are found to be needed. Indeed, every room appears to be admirably equipped for the purposes intended and for the convenience and comfort of the members.

Now where has the money come from to accomplish all of this work? Over $500 was donated, largely by friends interested in the young men of this place. Many a father has given because of his boy; mothers have given because they desire to feel that when their son is out of the house at night he is under good influences. Money has come in from unexpected quarters. Then again, over $400 has come in from membership tickets alone. Some have taken tickets with the idea it will help the institution and make it possible to continue in its work, with but little thought of personal benefit. That is where the idea of helping others comes in. Fathers who make no pretension to religion have taken a membership for their boy, so that he may be under helpful influences. Others have joined for "what they get out of it," and they will find that they will be amply repaid in the interest they will receive upon their investment.

But the work has but just begun. Indeed, the easiest part has been accomplished. From now on it means sacrifice, prayers, time, money, energy and thought. It is not all smooth sailing. Differences of opinion may arise, apathy may creep in and interest wane. Some of these are inevitable. Yet the work will go on. No matter how small it may appear, its ultimate results will be as far reaching as time itself. Earnest prayers will follow it, and consecrated lives will stand back of it. The result is left with God.

The First Entertainment

Of the Lyceum course will be held at the Congregational church on Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, and will be given by the Harvard Male quartet of Boston, and Miss Hennigar, reader. The vocalists have been heard here a number of times, and always with pleasure, and Miss Hennigar is one of the most pleasing readers upon the platform today. A large number of course tickets have already been sold at $1.00 and single admissions are 35 cents. Don't miss it.

Mirth and Music.

About one darky in every ten is a natural born entertainer. The manager knows he has a band of amusers who can create laughter so incessantly that every audience declares it has never laughed so much in all its life. Such an organization is that known so favorably throughout this country as J. W. Gorman's Original Alabama Troubadours, who come here next Saturday evening. Their darky diversions include buck and wing dancing, all sorts of negro specialties, little pickaninny dancers, banjoists, plantation jigs, comedians, male and female quartets, old time plantation scenes, camp-meeting shouters and the great cake walk that always arouses the wildest enthusiasm.

The New York Press has found the ne plus ultra of shockingness—not stockingness: "Moonlight bathing at Narragansett Pier, girls in Front Rock, Mass., going to the post office in bathing costumes, Larchmont women wearing duck trousers, Chicago women attending church without hats, people eating 'hot corn' where the butter is put on with a paint brush, all these one can believe, but think of 'Sockless' Jerry Simpson yelling himself red in the face for shirt waists for men!"

Some years ago a man ran up a bill of $200 in the Tremont house, Chicago, and then ran away without settling it. The trunk which remained in his room was unusually heavy, and when opened was found to contain specimens of ore, brought from the gold and silver mines of Colorado. After waiting out the legal time, the contents of the trunk were sent to an assayer, who returned two bits of metal valued at more than $100 in excess of the bill, after deducting his own fees.

A citizen of Lexington, Mo., claims fame by reason of the fact that on a postal card 3 by 5½ inches in extent he has written 14,685 words, consisting of this mixture: Declaration of Independence, 1,309; constitution of the United States, with preamble and amendments, 5,800; the articles of confederation of the original states, 3,460; the Lord's Prayer, 67; the 119th Pslam, 2,435; 145 lines of Longfellow's "Evangeline," 1,614.

In the "silly season" every possible diversion is hailed with delight. The "dollar tea" is a five o'clock function where the guests amuse themselves by trying who can spin a dollar the longest on a polished table, the successful one receiving a prize. The "baby tea" is another novelty. Men and women bring photographs of themselves as babies, and the person who identifies the greater number wins. The "baby tea" is rather amusing.

The pupil of a public school who had been absent from school for two weeks brought this written excuse from her mother: "Louisa was absent monday, please excuse her. Louisa was absent toosday, she had a sore throte. Louisa was absent wensay, she had a sore throte. Louisa was absent thursday, she had a sore throte. Louisa was absent friday, she had a sore throte. Read this over again for the next week."

It is related of the late C. P. Huntington that a young man once called on him to sell some much-needed rails at $75 a ton. Mr. Huntington said he had rails to sell, himself, amused the caller by a half-hour's chat and got him to sell at $66 a ton, with a six months' note for pay. Then before the man left Mr. Huntington discounted the note for six per cent. and paid the cash.

A Kansas man has struck a new way of getting a living. He has a flock of 600 turkeys, which, in consideration of board for himself, he moves from one farm to another, where they clean up the grasshoppers with which the farms of that section are infested.

A police judge in a Missouri town recently lectured the police for permitting gambling, and they promptly captured 30 slot gambling machines belonging to his brother.

In each of the past three years the corn exported from the United States has exceeded all previous records—$74,000,000 in 1898, $68,977,000 in 1899 and $85,000,000 in 1900.

Hospital employes of Chicago are said to give "tips" to undertakers when a patient is going to die. The undertakers sometimes arrive before the patient is dead.

Herbs and Plants Give Strength

The Greeks Believed This.

Used them and were Strongest of all People.

Smith's Green Mountain Renovator made of Herbs—The Best Medicine for Strength.

It's a fact. SMITH'S GREEN MOUNTAIN RENOVATOR is the best medicine for STRENGTH to muscles, nerves and brain. If you are weak, whether from natural exhaustion, or from ravishes of disease, this medicine will make you strong, make you well and happy. It is made in Vermont, of pure herbs, and is redolent of the fragrant woods, green hills, and bracing air of the Green Mountains.

"When I get on the farm," said young

"I'll arise in the morning [illegible]gh.
  I'll hoe the potatoes
  And gather tomatoes,
To say nothing of milking [illegible]h."

But his labors he found rat[illegible]h,

IN VARIOUS PLACES.

It is a curious fact that the identical gun-carriage invented by Capt. Percy Scott, to take the 4.7 gun of her majesty's ship Terrible to Ladysmith, was used again to take it to Tientsin. This naval "pet" silenced Gen. Nieh's big Krupp gun at the fourth shot.

On examining some of the alleged poisonous bullets brought home by Sir W. MacCormac, which the Boers were reported to have used, it was found that the charge was totally untrue. The green coating complained of was not verdigris, but a comparatively harmless product of the reaction of the metallic casing of the cartridge upon a wax coating used to prevent damp and rust.

A much needed reform has been accomplished in St. Louis. Heretofore the streets have been covered in summer with mud, caused by a too-generous sprinkling service. A measure has been passed by the city council requiring that sprinkling shall be performed by a perforated pipe device while sprinkling cars will make but two trips a day instead of deluging the streets four times daily.

Horsemen have discovered that while the bicycle and trolley car, as well as the automobile, have decreased the demand for horses, it is only for the common grades; fine bred animals are still bringing the usual high prices. This means that the common variety of horses is doomed to extinction. It will not pay to raise horses to sell at ten dollars a head, and consequently they will not be raised. Another feature is that the fine bred horses will increase in number until they can be sold at reasonable figures.

Mr. R. E. Foster, of Oxford university, scored 100 or over in both innings of the recent cricket match between Gentlemen and Players, being the first time that the feat has been accomplished in that match. He had previously scored two centuries in one match this year, and the repetition of the feat in one year in first-class cricket is a record for England. Last year he also made two centuries in successive innings—so that at 22 and in two years' play he has three double centuries to his credit, a record approached only by Dr. W. G. Grace, who has also made centuries in both innings three times, but in a cricket career covering 20 years.

WHAT UNCLE EB. SAYS.

From "Eben Holden," by Irving Bacheller.

When some folks call ye a fool it's a rather good sign ye ain't.

Ef Balaam's ass hed been rode by a woman he'd never 'a' said a word—wouldn't hev hed a chance.

Fact is a man he can be enny kind uv a beast, but a panther he can't be nuthin' but jest a panther.

Folks like fun. I kin' o' b'lieve 'at when God's gin a thing t' ev'rybody he thinks purty middlin' well uv it.

Never lied 'n a hoss trade er ketched a fish bigger'n 'twas, er swore 'less 'twas ne'sary, er cheated anybody but Eben Holden.

Kind o' resky business buyin' hosses. Got t' jedge the owner as well as the hoss. If there's any thing the matter with his conscience it'll come out in the hoss somewhere—every time. Never knew a mean man t' own a good hoss. It's a lame soul thet drives a limpin' hoss.

Nobody'll die in Heaven 'less he'd oughter. To my way o' thinkin' it'll be a good deal like Dave Brower's farm—nice, smooth land 'n' hil's 'n' valleys 'n' wheat 'n' corn 'n' white clover a plenty. Folks sayin' "how d'y dew" stid o' "good-by," comin' stid o' goin'.

OF INTEREST TO LABOR.

The servant girls of Watertown, N. Y., have formed a union and will demand a work day of 12 hours a day and four and five dollars a week.

A reduction of the hours of labor from twelve to eight hours per day for engineers employed in all Kansas City breweries has been effected.

A furniture firm of San Francisco has recently voluntarily reduced the hours of labor from nine to eight hours, and at the same time granted an advance in wages from $2.75 to $3 a day.

The men employed in the Muren coal mines, near Belleville, Ill., quit work because they claim the mules used to draw the cars of coal in the mines are not properly fed, and for this reason they are unable to draw the loads expected of them.

VAGRANT VERSE.

After the Stormy Weather.

It's after the stormy weather—camp's still and the fighting done.
And we're closer—thank God!—together in the joy o' the battles won.
Under the flag united—friendly as friends may be—
The man who marched with Sherman and the man who followed Lee.

It's after the stormy weather. See now where the skies bend blue,
And light the stars of the flag that waves
 splendidly over you!
The battle-thunders have died away—the folds of the flag float free
And fainter now are the echoes of the guns from over sea.

After the stormy weather! Peace on the plains and hills,
No crimson drops on the daisies, no red
 o' the rippled rills.
Only one thought for the country: "Wave the flag from shore to shore—
Wrongs righted, and love-united we are brothers forevermore!"

One thought! Let the sea winds wing it over the echoing deep!
One thought! Let the rivers sing it where the dreaming valleys sleep,
Thrilled to the stars in music, after the rough ways trod
We are all at home in the country under the smile of God.
—Frank L. Stanton, in Saturday Evening Post.

At Set of Day.

At set of day the long, lithe shadows creep
 From out the west where the last sunbeams stray,
Afar at sea the dark-blue grows more deep,
 The opal foam upon the waves turns gray,
 And the light breezes murmur low of sleep.

A subtle fragrance the calm air doth steep
 From lily bells and lilac plumes that sway.
While love-sick dews their pearly teardrops weep.
 At set of day

The lowing kine pass on their homeward way
 Through quiet fields and lanes where hedge-birds cheep.
My heart sings songs my lips could never say
 At morn or noon; but, ah! strange pulses leap.
And Love has many a passionate prayer to pray
 At set of day
—Constance Farmar, in Chambers' Journal.

The Kiss at the Door.

In the days of the lance and the spur,
 When the hero went forth to the fight,
Oft he carried a token from her
 Whom he worshiped as lover and knight.
And when fierce surged the battle around,
 And when close pressed the merciless foe,
'Twas that token that drove off despair
 And gave victory's strength to his blow.

Not a hero of knighthood am I,
 But a warrior in industry's strife,
Where the lance that I wield is my pen,
 And the ladye I serve is my wife.
Yet a token I carry each day,
 Full as precious as any of yore,
And it stoutens my heart for the fray—
 'Tis my love's morning kiss at the door.

For his faith will the martyr endure,
 By the sunset the artist's inspir'd,
At the blast of the bugle and fife
 Is the soldier to gallantry fired.
But whatever may others exalt,
 For myself I shall ask nothing more
As a prompter to worthiest deeds
 Than the kiss that I get at the door.
—E. W. Gray, in Newark Daily Advertiser.

Rheumatism in all its forms is promptly and permanently cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which neutralizes acidity of the blood.

PLANTS AND ANIMALS.

All the flowers of the arctic region are either white or yellow, and there are 762 varieties.

Ostriches are not the only swift-running animals that can outstrip the speed of a horse. There is a land crab in Cuba that can rival the ostrich, and go much faster than a horse.

Plants, like animals, are continually wandering to fresh fields and pastures new. Prof. Kellerman finds that of the present flora of Ohio no less than 430 are immigrants. Almost all are from Europe.

That plants when injured suffer from fever is a new discovery by a British botanist. Plants suffer in a similar manner to animals under like conditions. The rate of respiration increases and the temperature rises, reaching a maximum within 24 hours.

The Stimulus of Pure Blood

That is what is required by every organ of the body, for the proper performance of its functions.

It perfects all the vital processes.

It prevents biliousness, dyspepsia, constipation, kidney complaint, rheumatism, catarrh, nervousness, weakness, faintness, pimples, blotches, and all cutaneous eruptions.

It is assured by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla which acts directly and peculiarly on the blood.

This statement is proved by thousands of unsolicited testimonials.

W. P. KEETON, Woodstock, Ala., writes: "When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla my blood was impure and I had not been feeling well for some time. I was bothered very much with that tired feeling. When I had taken the medicine a few days I began to feel better, and after taking two bottles I felt like another person. That tired feeling was gone and I could do my work."

Hood's Sarsaparilla rids the blood of scrofulous and all other humors and all foreign matters.

Would You If You Could?

Would you live to be a hundred
  If you could?
There are rules and schedules made
To assist you, if obeyed
Age and death can be delayed;
  Could you,
  Would you?
Live to be a hundred if you could?

Would you live to be a hundred?
  Think a bit.
With the snow upon your hair,
And your eyes a vacant stare?
Life a sob—a sigh—a prayer.
  Could you,
  Would you,
Live to be a hundred if you could?
—M. L. Rayne, in Chicago Times-Herald.

An Admiration.

Does his best from day to day;
That's 'bout all that you kin say.
Wasn't built fur gittin' rich,
Never bought no bonds an' sich,
Never made no speeches fine,
Never quite could get in line,
In life's hurly-burly quest.
Goes ahead an' does his best.

Does his best. In hours of pain
Bends his head an' won't complain,
And afar from envy's sneer
Men an' children hold him dear;
Safe from praises misapplied
An' the mockery of pride.
He seems noble as the rest.
Goes ahead an' does his best.

ROYAL SMOKERS.

Germany's emperor confessed recently that of all his habits smoking had the greatest hold over him. "When I am not asleep I am smoking and when I am asleep I often dream of the 'subtle poison.' The sultan of Turkey sent me a few months ago a hundred boxes of his choice cigarettes. These are the boxes." His majesty pointed toward a row of delicately "got up" tins. "But the cigarettes are not in them; they have ended in smoke."

This pretty little anecdote about the boy king in Spain is now given: A short time ago the queen regent was telling her son how poor his country, Spain, was becoming, and what need there would be of reform and economy in many respects. "Mother," said the young monarch in embryo, "I have quite made up my mind that we must all give something for the sake of my country — some luxury. I, for my part, have determined to give up smoking!"

Margherita, the dowager queen of Italy, once said to the prince of Wales: "I can overlook many faults of a man and can make allowance for his shortcomings. One fault, however, I cannot overlook, and that is—his not smoking. When my husband, the king, is annoyed I give him his pipe; when he is good-tempered I give him a cigarette; when I want him to do something particular for me I give him a cigar. With a pipe I can console him, with a cigarette I can delight him, and with a cigar I can lead him anyhow and anywhere."

The duke of York is a cigarette smoker. He once said to the czar of Russia: "A short time ago I had an idea that cigarettes were bad for me, so I determined to limit myself to five smokes a day. The first day I managed to exist on the number I had determined upon smoking. The second day I smoked all five before luncheon and felt miserable during the rest of the day. The third day I smoked the five judiciously, but still felt a great 'wanting.' The fourth day I couldn't stand it any longer and so smoked 15 cigarettes to make up for my self-denial during the other days."

No one can reasonably hope for good health unless his bowels move once each day. When this is not attended to, disorders of the stomach arise, biliousness, headache, dyspepsia and piles soon follow. If you wish to avoid these ailments keep your bowels regular by taking Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets when required. They are so easy to take and mild and gentle in effect. ON THE DOORSTEP.

MISS CAMPBELL was from Philadelphia, and she did not approve of sitting out on the front doorsteps. Even on hot August evenings, when every sensible person on the avenue was out in the open air, wooing whatever breezes there were to be found, she sat in solitary state in her stuffy little bedroom or in the boarding house parlor. It is a serious thing to be a consistent martyr to one's principles.

One day Miss Campbell read in the afternoon paper that the extreme heat had driven fashionable London to its doorsteps—that even within the sacred precincts of Mayfair "doorstep parties" were the thing, and that honorable Algernons and Mauds smoked cigarettes and drank their cooling beverages out doors, regardless of the passing crowd. That evening, driven to it by a longing for fresh air, Miss Campbell decided to be English. It was a good time for her venture, for she was the only one at home. Most of the boarders had gone to the park; the rest were bicycling. She had the doorstep to herself. Really, it was not so dreadful, after all. The kindly dusk hid all but the light waists or gowns of the women on the steps opposite, while the men were distinguishable only by the sparks at the ends of their cigars. With a little thrill of self-congratulation Margaret Campbell realized that no one would know that she had departed from her principles.

Her principles had been the talk of the locality so often, and she was so highly respected because of them that she would not have liked to have people know she was sacrificing them for the sake of a few cool moments upon the doorstep. Her neighbors might take her to task for the advice she had given them in the past, and she did not wish them to know.

"I suppose I am old-fashioned," she thought, "John used to say that when I was only 20, and ten years of lonely life have hardly improved me."

The warm breeze fanned her cheek. She settled herself comfortably back on the cushions that she had brought from her room and lazily watched the phantom-like passersby. Troops of laughing girls and boys hurried along the sidewalk, followed by lover-like couples, creeping as though to retard happy moments spent together. Bicycles swept silently past in the street, their lamps flashing like gigantic fireflys; carriages rolled by, heralded by the muffled hoof beats of their horses; and, from time to time, automobiles whizzed by, weirdly.

A solitary man came slowly up the street. He stopped at the foot of the steps and then sat down not far from Margaret.

"Do you mind my smoking?" he asked, barely turning around.

Miss Campbell started; the voice seemed curiously familiar. "Not at all," she replied a little stiffly, "it will keep away the mosquitoes." Then she felt herself blushing at the foolishness of the remark, for there were no mosquitoes to be kept away. Ten years ago, one happy, never-to-be-forgotten summer, she had been often asked that question, and had made the same rejoinder, much more appropriately.

The man did not look at her while he lighted his cigar, and she, absorbed in thought, missed the brief illumination of his features which followed the kindling of the match. There was a long silence, broken only by the newcomer. "Rather cooler," said he, as though continuing a conversation.

"Yes," answered Margaret, still more puzzled by the voice. This was not one of Mrs. Lee's boarders. She must hear him speak again. It was not right that a stranger should make her tremble so.

"Were you ever at Long Branch?" she asked abruptly.

The man turned toward her, and she could feel that he tried to penetrate the darkness and see who it was that was speaking. Margaret was not the only one who had been agitated by a voice. Her heart beat almost audibly.

"Margaret, is it you?" he cried.

"Yes, John," she answered, with strange self-possession. She noted this herself, and marveled that she should do so at such a moment. How could she think about how she was speaking when she had not seen him for ten years. "How came you here?"

"I came up the wrong steps," John answered, slowly. "I am glad, since they have brought me to you."

It ought to have been bewildering—this unlooked-for appearance of the man who had gone out of her life so long ago, never to return. Yet Margaret took it as a matter of course.

"If you are glad, why didn't you come before? I have wanted you so."

"I didn't know where you were," faltered John.

"Then the other was a mistake?"

"All a mistake, dear, and I have come back to you."

He had risen, but now he sat down by her side and reached out to take her hand. Margaret let him have it, gladly, and they sat together and talked, as they used to talk. It was as though they had never been parted. Margaret did not ask for explanations, and John did not give them. Yet she felt that they understood each other.

There was a merry burst of laughter, a confused sound of voices; half a dozen people around her were talking all at once.

"Why, here's Miss Campbell," cried a lively girl, overflowing with good spirits, "Miss Campbell, who never sits on doorsteps."

"Gone back on your principles, Miss Campbell?" asked a frisky youth, who was an incorrigible tease. "I am amazed."

Margaret stood up, dazed. The young people had appeared suddenly. "Yes, the heat drove me out, and I am glad that it did, Mr. Young, for an old friend found me quite by accident. Allow me to introduce him. John—" she looked around, but John was not there.

"You were all alone, Miss Campbell," volunteered Mr. Young. "Fast asleep and dreaming, I declare."

Miss Campbell pulled herself together nobly. "So I was," said she. "Good night, everybody," and she turned around and went into the house. The others followed, with the exception of the two youngest and happiest.

"Poor Miss Campbell," whispered the girl, with keen intuition, "I think she was dreaming of her lover."

"Nonsense, Jennie; that's your fancy. Miss Campbell is as prosaic as you are imaginative."

"She is pretty," said Jennie; "she must have had lovers. And she isn't old—why shouldn't she have one now?"

"O, yes," answered Tom Young, "she is pretty and nice enough. But, Jennie, don't let's talk about other people. Did you mean what you said in the park?"

"Yes," whispered Jennie.

Miss Campbell looked down upon the steps from her dark window. She wanted to gaze on the spot where John had been. She saw Jennie and Tom acting "Love's Young Dream."

"God grant them a happier awakening than mine," she muttered, as she crept to bed.

MADE SOME QUEER WAGERS.

Harmon, at the Stanwix hotel, in Detroit, several years ago, bet he could hold his head submerged in a bathtub for 125 seconds without taking air He won.

A chap named Curtis, in Berkshire county, Mass., for a wager of a horse, ran five miles in 41 minutes, and wound up the race with a jump of 11 feet 6 inches.

An Englishman named Head won $5,000 by walking 600 miles in ten days, but the exertion so used him up that he never walked much afterward, either on wagers or otherwise.—N. Y. Telegraph.

In Philadelphia some years ago a gentleman made a wager of $100 that he could jump into water eight feet deep and undress himself complete Anyone who has ever made the attempt to remove his clothing after being thoroughly drenched to the skin, even when standing on terra firma, with plenty of room to "hop around on one leg" will at once realize the difficulty of accomplishing the feat while in the water. However, it was done in the instance noted

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2.65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit. The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save If your druggist can't supply you, it will be fewarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

ENGINEERING NOTES.

The tensile strength of a wet rope is only one-third the strength of the rope when dry, while a rope saturated with grease or soap is weaker still.

A cap nut lock for propellers has been invented by Capt. Lewis Davis, of Liverpool, and is intended to prevent the loss of blades at sea, says the Engineer.

A German method of constructing large balance wheels for high peripheral speeds consists in making the rim by winding a rectangular section steel wire on a cast iron spool.

A raft of remarkable size was started down the Mississippi river from Stillwater, Minn., for St. Louis, Mo. The raft is 256 feet wide, 768 feet long, contained 9,000,000 feet of lumber and has loaded on its deck 60 car loads of shingles.

The engineer in charge of the improvement of the Yellowstone park denies that the geysers are approaching extinction. An article to this effect appeared in a French paper and was widely copied throughout the United States. It tends to create an impression that the Yellowstone wonderland, as far as regards the hot springs and geysers, is practically a thing of the past.

In a paper on "Fly Wheel Explosions" read before the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the author, Mr. C. H. Manning, gave some figures relating to wood-rimmed wheel for this purpose He stated that for the same weight pine wood has a much more tensile strength than cast iron, and is, therefore, much safer for a fly wheel. An experience of ten years with many such

The Poorest Man in the World.

He has millions on millions piled
And tens of millions more;
He has millions in ships and mills
And other millions in ore;
But he never bounds
When the dinner bell sounds,
And he looks on a meal as a bore.

He never sleeps while the sun
Creeps over the eastern hills,
He tosses and waits for the dawn,
And thinks of his mines and his mills,
And always he feels
Disgust for his meals,
Which are largely composed of pills.

He has millions on millions piled.
But the days of his youth are fled,
And he runs from a good, square meal
As though 'twere a thing to dread—
He must live just so,
And is envied, but oh
What things writhe around on his bed!
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Times Herald.

My Mother.

She gave the best years of her life
With joy for me,
And robbed herself, with loving heart,
Unstintingly.
For me with willing hands she toiled
From day to day.
For me she prayed when headstrong youth
Would have its way.
Her gentle arms, my cradle once,
Are weary now;
And time has set the seat of care
Upon her brow.
And, though no other eyes than mine
Their meaning trace,
I read my history in the lines
Of her dear face.
And 'mid His gems, who showers gifts
As shining sand,
I count her days as pearls that fall
From His kind hands.

Pneumonia Prevented.

Among the tens of thousands who have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for colds and la grippe during the past few years, to our knowledge, not a single case has resulted in pneumonia. Thos. Whitfield & Co., 240 Wabash ave., Chicago, one of the most prominent retail druggists in that city, in speaking of this, says: "We recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for la grippe in many cases, as it not only gives prompt and complete recovery, but also counteracts any tendency of la grippe to result in pneumonia." For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

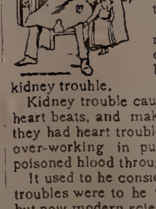
Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.



The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood. If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

The New Century.

When in the dim gray east shall rise
The morning of thy birth—
When thy first dawn steps from the skies
Upon the hills of earth—
Shall waiting nations breathless stand
Oppressed with haunting fears,
Of what thou holdest in thy hand,
Thou coming Hundred Years?

Or shall a glad world welcome thee
With laughter and a song—
Thou unborn child of Destiny
Whose reign shall be so long?
Who knows—we only know that thou
Shalt enter like a king
Into thy courts—that we must bow,
Whatever thou dost bring.

What matter whether war or peace
Thy heralds shall proclaim—
The story of the centuries
Is evermore the same!
Thy children-years shall tell abroad,
Through all thy mighty span,
Naught but the Fatherhood of God—
The Brotherhood of Man.

Little Willie's First Visit.

I hear no shouting in the hall,
No pounding on the floor.
He isn't marking on the wall
Or swinging on the door;
His battered toys are put away,
The cat is deep in dreams—
He's been away a week to-day,
And, oh, how long it seems!

His books are not strewn on the stairs,
His gun is hid from view;
His paints are not left on the chairs,
The rugs are not askew.
He went away a week ago,
He's coming home again—
To-morrow he'll return, but oh,
How can I wait till then?

"The Helmet of Navarre,"
A great novel, full of life adventure and action, the scene laid in France three hundred years ago, began in the August, 1900, Century, and will continue for several months in 1901. Critics everywhere are enthusiastic over the opening chapters of this remarkable story. "The author's fame is apparently established with this, her maiden effort," says the Boston Transcript. The Critic calls it "a remarkable performance."
FREE. New Subscribers to The Century Magazine who begin with the number for November, 1900, will receive free of charge the three previous numbers, August, September and October, containing the first chapters of "The Helmet of Navarre," or, if these numbers are entirely exhausted at the time of subscribing, they will receive a pamphlet containing all of the chapters of "The Helmet of Navarre" contained in the three numbers.

It is considered very doubtful if the Pennsylvania railroad will adopt nickel steel rails for the points of severe service. At the famous Horseshoe curve the nickel steel rails have been replaced by those of the ordinary steel type, for it was found that the rails diminished the tractive power of the engines on account of their hardness.

A special car for invalids is being built for the Saxon state railroads for the transportation of those who can afford the expense of a whole car. It consists of three apartments, with a corridor on one side. One is for the sick person, and one of the others for the physicians, and the third for attendants. Cooking apparatus and refrigerators are provided. It may be hired for use on any railroad in Europe provided it is not needed at home.

A curious railway accident occurred in India lately. While a train was in Ruxaul station a terrific storm commenced, and, although the brake was applied on the van and the engine, the force of the wind was such that the train was driven along the line. The engine dashed through the buffer stop at the end of the line and traveled along about six lengths of rail laid end to end without fishplate fastenings. After leaving these rails the engine plowed along the embankment and then came fortunately to a stand still, no great damage having been done.

For some years past Corea has maintained a domestic postal service, under the supervision of a French postal expert, using stamps printed in this country. A new issue has now been ordered from Japan, but they are simply a modification of the old Japanese stamps and are not pleasing to the Coreans. At present, as Corea has no steamship service of sufficient regularity to permit of a regular mail service with China and Japan, a contract has been made whereby the Corean mail pouches are received at the Japanese post offices in Corea and forwarded with the Japanese mail.

Mortgagee's Sale.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Lawrence McGinnis of Medway to Margaret H. Kenney of said Medway, dated August 6th, 1895, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, book 744, page 522, will be sold at public auction, upon the premises, on

MONDAY, the SEVENTEENTH day of DECEMBER, 1900,

at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely, three certain parcels of land situated on Village street, in said Medway, and bounded as follows:

The first lot southerly by said Village street, easterly on land late of Edward Eaton, now Medway Savings Bank, northerly on land of E. E. Carpenter, westerly on land of grantor, containing five acres and three-fourths, more or less.

The second lot situated opposite and bounded northerly on Village street, southwesterly by Charles River and easterly on land of Mrs. A. H. Clark and another.

The third lot is the grantor's homestead, bounded southerly on land of Peter Foley and Village street, easterly on lot first described above, northerly on woodland of W. A. Jenckes and westerly on land of Ellen McGill and Peter Foley, containing eight acres, more or less, being the same as lands described in the following deeds recorded in the Norfolk Registry to A. P. Phillips, book 398, page 315; to grantor, book 300, page 185, book 318, page 188, book 366, page 88, except a small piece conveyed to Peter Foley.

Excepting what was released from the grantor's homestead estate seventy feet on Village street and one hundred and fifty feet deep as per mortgage from John Bonds to Medway Savings Bank; excepting and reserving from the operation of this mortgage eight acres since released, described above as lot No. 3.

Terms of said sale will be made public at the time and place of sale.

GEORGE HART,
Assignee of said mortgage.

FRANKLIN NEWS IN BRIEF

Latest Local Events and Personal Items of Interest to Readers.

Concert tonight.

Alabama Troubadours Saturday evening.

Miss Dora Cargill is visiting friends in Dorchester.

The selectmen will hold a regular meeting this evening.

H. W. Thayer has been spending a few days at Cottage City.

The friends of Dr. J. C. Gallison hope to see him out again before many days.

Palmer A. Woodward is doing his duty as juryman at Dedham this week.

G. F. S. Singleton is again confined to his residence on Main street with illness.

Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Rockwood were made happy by the birth of a boy last Saturday.

Marston Sanborn has begun work on the interior of his store for Christmas decoration.

Maroney Bros. of this town have opened a branch bakery on Harrison avenue, Boston.

The coal supply bought for the schools last summer is not yet all delivered. A few tons remain to complete the bargain.

Mrs. H. B. Haslam, who has been attending her sick daughter in Milford, is quite ill at her residence on East street.

F. E. Dudley will commence next week with a large force of men roofing the new Christ church parish house in Medway.

J. J. Stewart is out with a fine new heavy teaming wagon, which embodies a number of new features and is "up to date."

Don't forget that the Red Men are preparing to entertain you on New Year's eve with a fine social dance. A good time is promised.

The Jordan river is one of the most interesting in the world. Dr. Sneath will take his congregation in an imaginary journey down the river.

Clarence E. Griffin, now a resident of Washington, D. C., and at one time town clerk of Franklin, has been appointed judge of a police court.

The teachers and the public are invited to listen to Dr. Hudge's talk on "How to Read With Profit" at the High school next Monday evening.

E. S. Cook has just purchased a number of wood lots to cut off, one of the finest being near the City Mills post office, bought of J. F. Torrey.

Members and friends of the N. E. O. P. enjoyed a very social dance in Red Men's hall Wednesday evening, the occasion calling out a generous number.

Rev. Mr. Sneath united in marriage in Cambridge on Wednesday evening Mrs. George H. Alexander of Cambridge to Mrs. Addie Lucy Main of Somerville.

Rev. F. B. Sleeper's theme at the Baptist church Sunday forenoon will be "The Father's Infinite Love for the Son," and in the evening "Four-Cornered Duties."

Mr. Frazer and Miss Reilly, instructors in our public schools, visited the schools of Pawtucket and Providence on Wednesday, securing a number of valuable suggestions.

The collector is nearly ready to settle with the town for the 1899 taxes, and only a few cases remain to be completed before that desirable object can be accomplished.

The Y. P. S. C. E will hold a social at the Congregational church next week Wednesday evening, at which an entertainment will be given and light refreshments served.

The term concert, which is to be given at Dean academy next Monday evening, promises to call out a large audience, as these affairs are always interesting and no admission is charged.

D. C. Coates, who recently sold his farm to remove to New Hampshire, has decided to remain here, after having a few days' wrestle with the snows and cold of the Granite state.

The Ladies' Benevolent society of the Congregational church will meet in the parlor next Wednesday, at 2 p. m. This is simply an afternoon meeting for work and a large attendance is desired.

Dr. Solon Abbott was in attendance at the meeting of the Massachusetts Surgical and Gynaecological society held in Boston on Wednesday. He reports a very helpful and interesting meeting.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Miss Alice May Brock to Mr. Reuben Smith, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr and Mrs. Albert L. Brock, 64 School street, on Tuesday, Jan. 1, at 4 o'clock.

At noon today Rev. Dr. Sneath united in marriage at the parsonage Elias F. Tyler and Miss Maria A. Ahlberg, both of Franklin. The couple will reside on West street. Mr. Tyler is the coachman of Addison M. Thayer.

Edwin T. Fisher of Pawtucket, a native of Franklin and for many years a resident here, who was badly injured a year ago by falling from a heavy wagon, has recovered so he can walk a little with the help of two canes.

The school committee have decided upon opening the schools fifteen minutes earlier than the summer schedule, on account of the short days. Pupils like it fully as well, as it allows them more time for after school sports.

"Don't forget the basket ball game between the Deans and the Pawtucket Y. M. C. A. tomorrow evening, at 8 o'clock, as a fine game is assured. The visitors will doubtless look into our new Y. M. C. A. rooms before they return.

Mrs. Nellie Noyes held a social in Foresters' hall Monday night after the dancing class hours. It was largely attended by friends of the class and others. Mrs. Mabelle Tracy and Miss Bertha Razee furnished music for the dancing.

Walter C. Rose of South Franklin reports the loss of twelve hens from his henhouse Tuesday night. They were White Wyandottes and pure bred. Mr. Rose lives on the John Kenney place at the corner of Washington and Spring streets.

The Y. M. C. A. rooms have proven fine places from which to escape the cold these winter nights, with their genial warmth, light, games, music, sociability, etc. They are open from 4.30 to 10 p. m. week days, and from 1 to 5.30 Sundays.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Rathbun were among the guests at the brilliant debutante reception for Miss Deborah Clark Sayles, daughter of Hon. Frederick C. Sayles, in Providence Tuesday evening. There was a large company of distinguished guests.

Treasurer Ramsey of the Heliotype Printing company was injured at the factory Tuesday. The particulars were not obtained, but in some way he was hit by some substance or a drop of acid, and one eye badly injured The wound was dressed and Mr. Ramsey taken to the eye and ear infirmary at Boston.

The ladies of the Universalist church are arranging for a bazaar in Central Square hall, Morse's block, on Thursday and Friday evenings, Dec. 20 and 21, from 4 to 10 p. m. In connection with the sale there will be a supper served from 6.30 to 8 o'clock, with a different entertainment each evening, and dancing on Friday evening. Among the attractions will be domestic, fancy, doll, handkerchief, necktie, confectionery, package and children's tables, beautifully decorated, etc. No admission will be charged in the afternoon, but in the evening a small fee will be charged.

Chester M. Whiting goes to New York the last of the week to consult with parties interested in the building of a railroad in Cuba, and may make arrangements to take charge of a part of the work. Mr Whiting's long residence in Cuba has given him an intimate acquaintance with the Cuban character and the tendency of affairs in the island, and he does not expect to see complete self-government there for some time to come. Among the educated class there are too many who want to be first chief ruler and are not content to wait for the second chance, and there seems to be a strange idea of the obligation of the United States to pay war debts contracted without United States authority.

If you want to see a real Southern darky in his true colors he may be best observed on Saturday evening at the Opera house. A grand number of these natural born artists are seen in all sorts of Dixie land diversions, such as buck and wing dancing, negro specialties, pickaninny dancing, banjo solos, plantation dancing, jubilee singing, male and female quartets, old time plantation scenes, and for a brilliant finish a magnificent cake-walk, which includes every member of the company in some uproarlously laughable scenes. This exceptional company contains some prime entertainers, who are responsible for oceans of melody and waves of mirth. Nothing is more enjoyable, or better inclined to put an audience into the best of spirits than the darky diversions of these dark-skinned people of Dixie land.

Dean Academy Benefits.

Gen. Olney Arnold, a former trustee of Dean academy, who died in Pawtucket Oct. 3, left $1,000 to Dean academy, among other bequests. The will was filed on Monday and was a surprise. It had become an accepted belief of the heirs of the deceased that he had died intestate, as after his death nothing could be found among his papers which would indicate that he had left a will.

It was generally regarded strange that a man of the business shrewdness of Gen. Arnold should have died without a will, especially as it was known that such a document had been drawn. The will was found in the basket which the general invariably carried on his arm when going to and from the bank, and which was supposed to be for the purpose of carrying purchases from the stores. The basket was in the general's private safe, and was the receptacle for the valuable papers, and perhaps money, which the owner desired to carry, no doubt believing that the basket would not be so apt to attract the attention of a robber as would some other form of receptacle commonly used for the carrying of valuables. This basket was as much a part of the general's equipments as were his gold-bowed spectacles.

But he was an original man in many ways, and in what better way could he have carried his treasures than in the tightly-woven basket, with its cover always closed? The will was dated July 14, 1899.

Concert Tonight.

A fine entertainment is promised all who attend the opening of the Lyceum course in the Congregational church this evening, when the Harvard Male quartette of Boston will sing and Lillian Peirce Hennigar, one of the brightest readers upon the platform today, will read. The program has been selected with unusual care, and a rich treat is promised. Those taking single admission tickets only should go in good season in order to secure the best seats remaining.

Alden Club.

On last Monday evening a large audience welcomed Mrs. Mabel Loomis Todd. All who heard Mrs. Todd last year were anxious to hear her again. We were very delightfully entertained by a trip to Carthage, although absolutely nothing remains of the splendor and magnificence of old Carthage, we were much interested in the ruins and the excavations which are being made.

After the lecture an informal reception was given Mrs. Todd. The hospitality committee served delicious cocoa and crackers from a beautifully decorated table. The evening was pronounced a success. S.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

There will be a brief praise service at the rooms of the association Saturday evening at 9 o'clock. All men are invited to come in and join in this service of song.

Sunday afternoon, men's meeting at 4.15; speakers to be announced from the pulpits Sunday morning. Special solos by J. Ray Wyckoff; also a bright song service. All men are earnestly invited to attend this service.

The Ladies' Auxiliary.

More than seventy-five enthusiastic ladies of our town gathered at the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. on Thursday afternoon to consider the advisability of forming an auxiliary to the new Y. M. C. A. The meeting was opened with a brief song service, conducted by Secretary Stewart, after which Mrs. I. W. Sneath was elected temporary chairman. On taking the chair Mrs. Sneath read a selection from the scriptures and offered a brief prayer asking God's blessing upon the work, after which Mrs. Oliver H. Durrell of Cambridge, president of the state organization of women's auxiliaries, gave a very interesting talk upon association and auxiliary work, and the great blessing it was to her. She particularly emphasized the fact that it was not to be thought of apart from church work, because it was part of it, and the most earnest association or auxiliary workers were always found to be the most active in church work.

After her address Mrs. Durrell answered questions for some moments, and then a vote was taken to ascertain whether it was thought best by those present to form an organization. This resulted in a large vote for an auxiliary. Next came election of of the following officers: President, Mrs. I. W. Sneath; secretary, Mrs. Chas. L. Stewart; treasurer, Mrs. Samuel H. Frost.

The date of the monthly meeting was fixed on the second Thursday of each month. A large number of those present signed the list of members, and, after a unanimous vote of thanks to Mrs Durrell, the meeting adjourned subject to the call of the president.

The ladies carefully inspected the home of the association and expressed themselves as delighted with it. Several of the mothers present were enthusiastic over the work stating that they believed it to be one of the best institutions ever started in town.

Far From the Madding Crowd.

The old long hill road, so called, is forgotten, except by the lovers of nature and occasional lovers of each other, who wander that way in summer. There are beautiful views, shady retreats and sylvan places along where the old stage coach used to lumber along.

Down in the southeast corner of the town, where William F. King enjoys the life of the free from crowding neighbors, except woodchucks and other denizens of the forest, in old times a road stretched through the woods to the old factory at the Bush, before that locality became celebrated for the production of felt goods, and flourished like a green bay tree to the enrichment of the butcher, the baker and the candle-stick maker, and then sunk again into a small and quiet hamlet.

And another quiet path is from the Jordan place, near Indian rock, to the Wrentham road. Hunters wander that way, and occasionally one in sympathy with woodcraft strays along the path listening to the soft voices of Nature telling the story of the changing year.

From Wadsworths to Unionville is another overgrown way that tells of bygone times and of the present by the signs of the woodsman's axe, which has, no doubt, filled some pocketbook, added to the commercial enterprise of the day and warmed many a fireside, but desolated the way of its beauty and opened the forest nooks to the blaze of the sun.

From Kingsbury's pond, now in the town of Norfolk, a quiet and romantic way leads by the shore of the pond, over hills and through hollows, to the Medway flats and Charles river. It winds along the western shore of Populatic pond, and presents many spots where Nature is but little defiled by art and attempts at civilization, but the woodsman has also been busy along the route, and large tracts that were beautiful with trees and vines are now stripped of their adornments and show bleak and drear.

But much is left for the dreamer and the student, for along the quiet path lingers much of tradition, something of history and something of Nature's soothing spirit. All of the growth and progress of the past hundred years now at hand is hidden, and one can easily imagine the mouldering stump in the distance is a lurking copper colored original owner of the soil, or a still older claimant of the right of way—a black bear.

Over the Mount into Sheldonville used to be a common way to reach that placid hamlet celebrated in years gone by for boats, jewelry and straw bonnets Now it is overgrown and the roadbed left for Nature to cover with the velvet green. All the silver that may be hidden under the rocks and ledges is undisturbed, and the chance pilgrim who strays that way can see little but Nature in her rugged and rocky form, with her jewels of moss and wild roses in their season to lend enchantment to her form and attractiveness to her features.

COMMUNICATIONS.

[The editor assumes no responsibility for matter under this caption. This column is entirel at the disposal of the public, avoiding, as far as possible, trivial and controversial matter.]

MR EDITOR:—The old Town hall as it is at the present day is certainly an object of ridicule, and a few words of enlightenment may not be amiss. The land on which the Town hall stands reverts to the original owners when it ceases to be used for a Town hall. The building is large enough for all town purposes exept one town meeting a year, and the Opera house is ample and convenient. Why should the people of Franklin tax themselves $50,000 for a new Town hall when the old one can be repaired and made neat and tidy for $1,000.

Farmers' Club.

Last Monday evening the club met with George W. Bacon, North Franklin Mr. Bacon said he had no paper to read, but would give a talk: "In the first place I want to welcome you all here and assure you all that we are just as glad to see you as you are to come. Our lessons and experiences are so common that I have but little to say about them. Our first parents were placed in the garden of Eden and had to dress and care for it. A week ago tonight we listened to a very fine paper on "Fruits," and in those early days the fruits were the staff of life and later they were called bread. In the first great famine we read that Jacob sent his sons down to Egypt to buy bread; what kind of grain that was we do not know; it might have been wheat or perhaps barley. We have the same old measures as they did in those days, three barley corns one inch; it was so in the beginning of the Christian era and it is so today. Some of the lessons the past has taught is in the new machines and methods we now use compared with those of even fifty years ago. This country can feed 1,000,000,000 The old iron plow is past date, the new steel sulky doing the work much easier. Another thing that I think we might do is to think more and not act so strange. People will think and talk temperance, and then go to the polls and vote just in the opposite way. They are like a cow that will give you a good pail of milk, then kick it all over before you can get up from milking.

"There is another lesson we can learn from the past presidential campaign. The talk of imperialism and expansion is misleading, and the fact that the Philippine Islands drop into our hands as the result of war is no excuse for the cry of imperialism, I do not think I will say any more now, but want to hear from others."

J. M. Parker said that one lesson he had learned was not to put cabbages in cellar to keep them. Another thing: Last year I did not think it paid to raise corn to husk and feed out as grain. This year I do, and shall try and raise more next year. I will not discard the silo, but we farmers do not raise and feed corn enough to our horses and hens. A general discussion followed and a social hour was spent, spiced with hot coffee and doughnuts. D

Alabama Troubadours.

Concerning Gorman's entertainers, who appear at the Opera house Saturday evening, we clip the following:

"The company consists of a score or more of good singers, some of them being also clever comedians and graceful dancers, and the events on the long program follow one another so rapidly that there was something doing all the time. There were choruses, male and female quartets, duets and solos; some remarkable acrobatic feats by one of the company, who seemed as much at home when standing on his head as when on his feet; a naval drill and a cake walk, done as only colored people can do it. Most of the specialties were very pleasing and helped, with the singing, to make the entertainment entirely satisfactory."—Burlington Free Press.

FERNANDINA, FLA, Dec 11, 1900

MR JOHNSON—DEAR SIR:—We are always glad to hear from our friends, and think our friends will like to hear something of us and of our surroundings. We left New York Dec. 7 by the steamship Rio Grande, which is 300 feet in length and capable of carrying 2,500 tons and 100 passengers. Mrs. Richardson, not being accustomed to sea fare or sea sickness, did not enjoy the first twenty-four hours as she had anticipated. The Rio Grande made an unusually quick passage with favorable wind and weather. We were landed at Fernandina Monday, Dec 10 Fernandina is the shire town of Nasau county, with good school and church privileges The colored people outnumber the whites and have their own schools and churches. They number something over 300 scholars and the whites have 165, each school employing four teachers. Fernandina is at the north-east corner of Florida and claims to have the best harbor on the east coast of the state. The city is situated at the north end of Amelia Island, which is about twenty miles long and one to two miles wide, and I believe is the only city in the county.

A Bride's Merry Send-Off.

A pretty story has just come from Berkeley, Cal., of how some of the university girls [illegible] a march on one of their [illegible] who was about to be married. A week before the time set for the wedding when the bride was "up to her eyes" in work there came one day about a half-hour before luncheon, a smart pull at the bell, followed by the entrance of a dozen of her classmates, who announced that they had come for luncheon. The natural consternation of the hostess at this unexpected addition to her family was assuaged when each girl produced [illegible] the component part of a most [illegible] meal [illegible] dainty individual [illegible] and saucers as well. When the merry feast was ended the dozen cups and saucers were left behind as souvenirs of the occasion. Nor was this all. Carefully wrapped in tissue paper and tied with baby ribbon in the Berkeley colors, blue and gold, were a [illegible] of small kitchen conveniences—egg beaters, potato ricers, [illegible], a set of silver skewers and the like. These were stealthily tucked into the interstices of the wedding chest which was being packed, as other practical reminders of the happy college days of comradeship.

A woman in Mi[illegible] made a pet out of a pig, and [illegible] for it. The pig insisted on following her, not only around the house, but all over the town. At first it was funny, then it got to be annoying. She tried shutting him in a pen, but he squealed so pitifully that she relented, and he could always get out of the garden some way. The climax came when the pig followed her to church one Sunday, and ran grunting into her pew. She really couldn't endure that, and the pig was sold.

An undertaker at Sunbury Center, Mich., had a number of coffin boxes stored in an outside shed. Needing one of them he and an assistant went to the storehouse, and, selecting one, proceeded to lift it out. Immediately they got themselves out of the shed, pursued by a flock of bees which had established their home in the box, having gained access through a knothole. After the insects had been driven away by fumigation, sixty pounds of first-class honey were found in the box.

The value of negative blessings, so to speak—the things that do not happen—is seldom taken into account, yet one might not unreasonably figure them as "assets." For instance, an insurance expert estimates that 2,500,000 accidents, involving a money loss of $117,000,000, take place in this country every year. Turning this statement about a little, it would seem that the people who met with no accident last year saved thereby, on an average, $46.80 cents!

A martyr to rheumatism, Chris Outlette, of Menominee, Mich., tried all sorts of remedies in vain. The other day he allowed himself to be buried in wet sand as a panacea. He assisted his wife in digging a trench, took off all his clothing and was covered up to the chin. At the request of neighbors a police officer took the man from what in a short time would have been his grave. He is now in a helpless condition as a result of his wild experiment.

These are the days when docile husbands remain at home and with soap and wash rag purify the children while their mammas are out in the highways and byways purifying politics

Kansans are so busy that it is mentioned as a sacrifice that a Dickinson county farmer stopped harvesting long enough to attend the weddings of his three daughters.

COUGHS KILL

We know of nothing better than coughing to tear the lining of your throat and lungs. It is better than wet feet to cause bronchitis and pneumonia. Only keep it up and you will succeed in reducing your weight, losing your appetite, bringing on a slow fever, and making everything exactly right for the germs of consumption.

Better kill your cough before it kills you.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

kills coughs of every kind. A 25 cent bottle is just right for an ordinary cough; for the harder coughs of bronchitis you will need a 50 cent bottle; and for the coughs of consumption the one dollar size is most economical.

"My cough reduced me to a mere skeleton. I tried many remedies, but they all failed. After using the Cherry Pectoral I immediately began to improve, and three bottles restored me to health. I believe I owe my life to it."

Padding for Footmen's Calves.

One of the greatest essentials with regard to the recommendation of a London footman is not only his height, but the size and form of his legs. To suit the needs of those who have not been gifted with a well-formed leg the livery-makers supply artificial calves which pad out the legs to a respectable size. A pair of these pads cost about $1.25.—N. Y. Post.

But a Good One.

"What are you buying all those traps for?"

"Doctor's orders. He tells me I need a little recreation and insists that I should go duck-hunting with him."

"Huh! Seems to me that's a sort of quack remedy."—Philadelphia Press.

No Consolation There.

"There, now, Clara, how would you like to be these people who can't get home from Paris because their funds gave out?"

"Well, dear me, Clarence, they are better off than we are, whose funds gave out before we got started."—Indianapolis Journal.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN.

On an average every woman carries 40 to 60 miles of hair upon her head.

The British Women's Emigration society offers free passage to western Australia and profitable places when they have arrived there to good, strong domestic servants. But it advises servants who are seeking light places, with no scrubbing, a regular evening out, as well as all day Sunday, to abide by the mother country

It has been estimated that there are in England some 540 women editors authors and journalists, and of these a well known publisher has declared that five have an income of £4,[illegible]0 a year. In journalism women have met with immense success. At least one lady journalist receives a salary of £7[illegible]0 a year, and there are not a few who have no difficulty in making from £[illegible]00 to £[illegible]0. The last census in the United States showed that there were [illegible],000 women engaged in literary, as apart from journalistic, work

Women have superior rights in China even to the privilege of fighting in the wars of the country. In the rebellion of 1850 women did as much fighting as men. At Nanking in 1853 [illegible] women from various parts of the country were formed into brigades of 1,000 each, under female officers. Of these soldiers [illegible] were picked women, drilled and garrisoned in the city. But they not only fought as men but took their share of the drudgery, digging moats, making earthworks and doing all the things that fall to the lot of the common soldier in any war.

Voracious Birds and Fishes.

Birds are big eaters. The much-admired robin can give points to most of his kind. He can easily manage two-thirds of his weight in earthworms in a day. The common pigeon goes one better. He consumes his own weight in grain within a day. Fish are great gluttons. A single American bluefish has been known to kill and partially devour ten great cod, each as big as himself, in rapid succession.—London Mail.

Broken Bric-A Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3 75 a pound, and another cost $2 65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit. The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save. If your druggist can't supply you, it will be forwarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

CHRISTMAS CHIMES.

From yonder belfry, old and gray,
Where thick the frosted ivy climbs,
Now sweet and slow, now blithely gay,
Along the shining, wintry way,
There comes the sound of Christmas chimes;
Across the sunlit snows that lie,
A glittering fleece of jewels rare,
Now grandly rising far on high,
Now borne in tenderest whispers nigh,
They fill with joy the morning air.

In tranquil calm the landscape smiles;
The spirit of all peace is here;
The simple life no passion wiles,
Nor storm, nor stress the heart beguiles
From paths by duty rendered dear.
When flashed o'er Judah's plains the light
Whose luster with the ages swells;
The joy, that sweetly solemn night,
Revealed to man on Bethlehem's height,
Seems echoed here in Christmas bells.

Warmed by the yule-log's cheery blaze,
With friends around the hearth-stones wide,
In simple sports, or old-time lays,
Or legends quaint of other days,
The village keeps its Christmas tide;
Or, seated 'round the ample board,
Exponent true of prosperous times,
From hearts with life's contentment stored,
In homely phrase, are praises poured
That blend, perchance, with Christmas chimes.

Within the manor's stately hall
Kind hearts with Christmas cheer keep pace,
And children's merry voices call,
And bounteous gifts for one and all
From loving hands the season grace.
With rich or poor, with old or young,
Within each heart some memory dwells
Of bliss the by-gone years may hold
Which now, like some sweet tale retold,
Comes back again with Christmas bells.

Sweet Christmas bells, through every land
Ring out your message, far and wide;
That faith, by Love Divine, be fanned,
And God's sweet peace with men may stand,
And charity with all abide.

Martha Dean's Doubt

By Mary Sweet Potter.

"So long have I prayed and waited for prosperity—nay, even a sufficient income to yield my children and myself the common necessaries of life—without receiving an answer to my prayers, that I am tempted to believe that God does not redeem His promises, but to a few favored ones." So spoke Martha Dean.

The very essence of bitterness must dwell in the heart of one who gives utterance to such a sentiment, and, indeed, Martha Dean was in a bitter and desperate mood, which was quite unusual with her, for she had never lost faith before.

She sat there before her fireless kitchen range, her dull eyes watching the progress of a great snowstorm. She saw nothing of its white, fierce beauty, however, but gathered only the one harsh idea that it was the inevitable cruelty of winter, for by bitter experience she had learned that to her and hers, these later years of her life, winter brought little but cold, privation and general discomfort.

It was not yet dark, but to keep the children from taking cold she had tucked them as warmly as possible into their beds; for there was so little fuel that she had allowed the fire to die out as soon as she had cooked the simple supper, thus insuring a little warmth and comfort for the next day, as well as a blaze to cook their meals.

Now she heard them calling to each other across the room, and then a little later Jennie, the oldest of the four, was telling a story to little Edith, who lay beside her, and trying to keep her voice up to a pitch high enough for the two little boys, Tommy and Johnny, to hear also over across the room.

Here was one source of bitterness for Martha Dean. She wanted her children chatting and playing about her in comfort and happiness, but her pinching poverty forbade even that.

The words of Jennie's story came now and then to her mother's ears; it was an extravagantly generous Christmas story, and Martha Dean's lip curled in a smile of bitterness as she listened.

"My poor babies!" she murmured. "Theirs will be a sorry Christmas time, with not even a fire to keep them warm."

For the next day would be Christmas, and being, for the time, faithless, she felt sure that no Christmas cheer awaited them—nothing, indeed, but privation and misery. The hours passed, the children's voices were hushed in sleep, and she could no longer watch the storm, but she knew by the light patter against the window, with now and then a fierce fling of the sleety snow, that it was still raging, and she sat in silence and darkness thinking—not of some plan to work out of the difficulty they were in, for it seemed to her that every outlet was closed—but of the past, when she and her little ones had been surrounded by comforts and blessed and protected by the love and care of the husband and father, who had died and left them four years before.

Suddenly there came to her ears plaintive cries and a noise at the door. Martha Dean hastened to light her lamp.

"Whatever it is that wants to come in out of such a storm, it shall come," she thought. "I can at least give shelter to any creature that is without, be it beast or human." And she hastened to throw open the door.

A little child stood there, covered with snow, its face uplifted in anxious inquiry, its breath coming in quick gasps.

Not a poor-looking child in thin clothing, with a pinched face, as one might expect to see out upon such a night, but a child weighted down with rich, cumbersome wraps, with a face round and rosy and beautiful.

Fearlessly she stepped inside, and in so doing disclosed the one fault in her dress which had rendered her short exposure to the storm dangerous and uncomfortable. Her feet were clad in light slippers, and in wading through the snow she had wet them through and through, though she had walked only a short distance.

"You dear little one!" cried Martha Dean. "How did you come here?"

"I was all lost till I said my prayers," was the quick reply. "We were going to see grandpa, and I tumbled out of the big sleigh into the snow. Then the horses wouldn't stop, so I told the Lord, just as mamma told me to, and He helped me to get here."

"And didn't you get hurt anywhere, you poor babe?" inquired Martha Dean, blushing at the little girl's simple declaration of faith.

"No, ma'am; the snow was nice and soft; it didn't hurt me one bit, but my toes are freezed, I guess." And she sobbed with pain as Martha chafed her little, chilled feet, from which she had immediately removed the cold, wet covering.

Underneath the damp outer cloak the child's clothes were dry and warm, and, having put the cloak over a chair to dry, Martha wrapped her in a heavy shawl and sat holding her and gently rubbing her chubby feet, watching the blue eyes slowly closing in sleep and wondering to whom she belonged and if the child's account of her mishap were really the true explanation of it.

"Won't mamma come soon to get me? I want to go to my grandpa's house," murmured the little girl, drowsily, and just then there came a clamorous jingle of sleighbells and a loud rap upon the outer door. Almost simultaneously with the knocking upon the door it was opened and the snow-covered form of a man stood before Martha Dean for a single instant; then, turning hastily, he shouted to some one outside:

"She is found! She is here!" and hastened out.

Then there entered into that plain little kitchen a company of people the like of which it had never contained before.

First a tall, beautiful lady, fur-clad from top to toe; then a gentleman, also stately and fur-clad, and behind them came bustling and panting an elderly gentleman, neither tall nor handsome, but, like the others in regard to outer wraps, he was as furry as any Santa Claus, and very like that mysterious old personage in many other respects.

The lady's lips were quivering and she seemed speechless with joyful emotion, and the tall gentleman stooped and lifted the child up to her with reassuring words, as if to let her see that her darling was unharmed. As for the elderly gentleman, his sharp, restless eyes swept the room and its contents in a trice.

"No fire, ma'am, such a night as this? Why, why, pray? It's a wonder my little granddaughter didn't finish freezing after she got in here."

"Oh, no, father, the lady has her well wrapped up, and her wet things all removed," said his daughter, for she noted the flush that rose to the cheek of Martha Dean.

"Yes, and it was perhaps better that she was not taken in by a hot fire when so near freezing," said the younger gentleman, who was evidently the father of the little girl. He now turned to Martha Dean.

"We were driving from the station to the home of my wife's parents, madam, two miles beyond here, when the horses became excited by the wind and storm and somehow managed to tip the sleigh so that little Annie was thrown out, though all the others stayed in. The horses were unmanageable and ran, yet they kept the road, and when they reached home stopped. Of course, we returned as soon as possible after getting control of the horses. This explains our intrusion upon you, and no words can express our thankfulness to you for your kindness toward our poor little girl."

"It is nothing," replied Martha. "I would be glad to do more. I will now build a fire, so that you may get warm and dry before going out into the storm again."

"Needless trouble, madam; we are not cold," quickly replied the old gentleman. "James and John are waiting and we must go. Just tell me one thing, madam, if you please, how many little ones have you? I see several pairs of peepers in yonder."

Martha Dean informed the old gentleman as to the number of her family, while busily engaged in dressing the little girl's feet in some shoes and stockings belonging to her own little Edith, while the child clung tightly to her mother's neck.

"Two boys and two girls, the oldest a girl of 12, the youngest a girl of four; Tommy and Johnny between," he repeated, as he turned to go. "I will see you again to-morrow, madam; good-night and a merry Christmas!"

Then, with the little Annie wrapped until she made an enormous bundle, the whole party took their departure.

"Our name is Lewis and father's is Ray; we will see you again; I will call to-morrow if you do not forbid me," were the lady's parting words, and soon Martha Dean stood alone in her little kitchen, the sound of the departing sleighbells ringing in her ears, her senses almost whirling.

"He looked exactly like Santa Claus!" declared little Edith.

"But she didn't look like Mrs. Santa, and he hasn't any little girl," objected Tommy.

"Besides, he didn't leave a thing for anybody," dolefully supplemented Johnny.

"Mamma, what does it all mean?" inquired Jennie, the serious-minded one, for she with the other children had slept until a few minutes before the midnight visitor left the house.

Then Martha Dean told as briefly as possible the story of little Annie's adventure, meantime hurrying the children again into bed, herself soon following them.

But it was long before she closed her eyes in sleep, her mind was so full of the unexpected event which had just taken place.

While she was lighting her fire the next morning a large box was delivered at her door, followed a little later by a load of coal and sundry other articles.

"With love and a 'Merry Christmas,' from Miss Annie Lewis," was marked upon all the packages, and even the man who brought the coal said that little Miss Annie sent it.

From such a source it could not be refused, and Martha Dean felt the barrier of pride go down in her soul as one contribution after another was left on her premises.

Her home was soon filled with warmth and a goodly number of comforts and luxuries, and the children were glowing and happy over numberless toys and books and articles of wearing apparel that fitted everyone in a most remarkable way.

Santa Claus' sharp eyes had taken notes to some effect the night before.

In the afternoon there came (in the course of Mrs. Lewis' call, which was made according to her promise of the night before), a panacea for such wounds as her pride had received.

Her new-found friends, learning that she was a normal graduate and had previous to her marriage followed teaching for a profession, assured her that she should be established at the head of a primary school, private and select, by means of which all reasonable desires for herself and her little ones might be gratified and such of her present plenty as she chose to deem merely kindly lent to her by good friends might be paid for to her full satisfaction.

And to-day she is prosperous and happy, and the thing she is most ashamed and pained to recall in her past life is the short season of unreasoning distrust of her Heavenly Father's will and power to help her in the time of her extreme need.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

REAL LESSON OF CHRISTMAS.

There Can Be No Love for God Which Is Unattended by Love for Man.

"Too often in our Christmas religious observances is this thought almost entirely lost sight of, or not sufficiently emphasized," writes Edward Bok in the Ladies' Home Journal. "There can be no love for God which is unattended with love for man. The final test of a Christian life is not the worship of God, but always the love of man for man. If the message of Him whose birth we celebrate at Christmas teaches us one thing above all others, it is not that that we shall try to do for Him as a person, but that we shall seek to do for one another. That is knowing Jesus and clearly understanding Him. And wherever this true conception of His life and teaching is reached, there we find men and women thrilled with the passion for giving. The little child wakes on Christmas morning with its heart full to overflowing with gladness, and by every gift in stocking, or beside cradle or bed, is taught anew the old, old lesson of love. Husband and wife, brother and sister, lover and sweetheart, friend and friend, as they receive their gifts are reminded once more that love is not a dream, but a reality—and a reality which grows more vital, more precious and more enduring with the years. The sick, in chair or in bed, as they open their Christmas packages, are almost reconciled to loneliness and pain. The friendless, the poor, the outcast, the waifs on the streets; those who have sinned and seem shut out from God and from man, all begin to feel strange thrills of hope and renewed aspirations as they are taken up and enfolded in the richness and fullness of the Divine love as it comes to them through human love or attention on Christmas day. That is knowing Christmas in its highest and noblest sense; in its truest conception; knowing it in that spirit from which we derive the surest happiness."

Christmas Surprises.

"Let me see," said Mr. Flickerson, "what is it you are to get me for a Christmas present?"

"Why, those new curtains for the dining-room, you know," his wife answered.

"Oh, yes. And what is it I am to surprise you with?"

"Henry, I don't believe you really take the enthusiastic interest one should in these things at this glorious time of the year. You are to get me a new carpet for the hall."

Then he started for the office, full of the sublime significance of the merry yuletide.—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Children's World.

This is the time divine and dear,
That takes the child to Eden's bower,
And proves the fairies yet are here,
And serve it well this happy hour;
So ask in faith, dear little ones,
And none your hope shall dare to mar,
For lo! the angels still look on,
And still is seen the Christmas star!

Behold the child on Christmas morn—
Awake to find the world his own,
And he to this great kingdom born—
Where all he wishes for is shown;
How precious is the pleasing sight,
As sweet as peace that follows war;
So then the angels sing at night,
So then returns the golden star!

CHRISTMAS IN AMERICA.

We Borrow from England and Germany Those Customs Best Adapted to Our Own Requirements.

If Christmas is peculiarly the festival of joy, the day when the gladness of the deliverance in which every Christian believes is expressed, the American people have certainly done well in continuing the festival where its celebration is native to them, and reviving it where it had become obsolete. The whole human race, and particularly the youthful part of it, is fairly entitled to a good deal of merrymaking. Wholesome fun helps to form a well-rounded character—to build up a complete man or woman—and to this extent is the handmaiden of religion itself.

Our own American people have rightfully inherited a good deal of fun. The English people, who supplied the first important ingredient in our national compound, were perhaps a little too jovial. At all events the settlers of New England found it necessary to be somewhat unduly sad by way of protest against their conduct. One form of protest was to banish all the old English church holidays, and Christmas with the rest.

Indeed, there is a great deal of historical evidence to show that the majority of the people in England had in a great measure forgotten the solemn aspect of Christmas in the festive aspect of it, and that the "lord of misrule," who reigned on Christmas eve and sometimes for a long while afterward, had things quite too much his own way.

But the wholesome reaction did not by any means extinguish the capacity for innocent enjoyment which is really inborn in the Anglo-Saxon nature. It has come out strongly in subsequent generations of Americans.

Meantime the jolly Dutch settlers of New York, the old-fashioned cavalier settlers of Virginia and the south, the good-hearted Germans of Pennsylvania and those who have come later, and the Irish people, who were merely sprinkled along through the earlier days of settlement but who came in copious, helpful showers more recently, have always believed in Christmas and kept it alive.

Now, every one believes in Christmas. The gospel of joy is preached every year in all our temples. The heavenly story which belongs to the day is heard by ears and sinks into hearts which have been well prepared for it by a great deal of unselfish gladness; for a true Christmas fills the heart more with the pure gladness of giving pleasure than with the poorer satisfaction of being given it.

Our American Christmas begins to take an American form, as is the case with the people, the ideas, the language, and everything else which has been brought here from the old world. We borrow from the Christmas festivals of European nations what seems to be best adapted to our own requirements. Santa Claus, the German, is naturalized an American, and the German Christmas-tree takes root in our soil. So does the English holly. English Christmas songs of course are easily sung by American voices; while, on the Christmas board, the native American turkey has never been known to quarrel with good British plum-pudding.

Good cheer, indeed, is a proper part of the gospel of joy, if it is shared. Music belongs in an especial way to Christmas, for the gladness that cannot express itself in any other way pours itself out freely in song.

Flowers, the earth's own expression of joy, should not be absent from Christmas celebrations where they can be procured; and where they cannot, the green boughs of evergreen trees may well testify to the universal faith, at the season when nature is cold and white, in the sure renewal of all the life that sleeps.

The coming of Christmas is to be hailed, then, by more than the young, for more than they may well have, when it comes, "the best time of all the year." Its coming is a token that there can be no gladness without benevolence—that "good-will toward men" is the very foundation of "peace on earth." And so, a Merry Christmas to all our readers, and to all the world —Youth's Companion.

Remember, Ye, the Poor!

Across the frosty Christmas-tide a mighty chorus rolls,
Clear as the peal of church bells ringing over mead and moor,
Hymned by the myriad heavenly hosts of saved and gladdened souls:
"Remember, at this giving time, remember, ye, the poor!

"Remember, ye, the Manger's Child at humble Bethlehem,
The Crucified! who spent His blood to ransom and to save!
Remember, ye, the needy, yea, for He was one of them!
At this, the giving time, remember, ye, what Jesus gave!"

Above the frosty Christmas-tide the chorus grandly soars—
Oh! human hearts, lift up to it! Lift up an answering strain
While from the holy host the peerless harmony outpours,
And stretch the hand of Charity to soothe where there is pain!
—Cluskey Cromwell, in Washington Star.

JUST ON THE BRINK.

BY H. C. WARREN.

"What news?" she shouted, waving, as he came within hailing distance.

He waved back and shook his head mournfully. Then, in a voice that carried far above the noise of the breakers, he called back:

"The same old story."

She was perched high up on the top of a big rock that projected almost into the sea. A light plaid shawl, thrown picturesquely over her, served as a partial protection against the foam, which splashed madly about, at times reaching even the height where she was seated. He hastened toward her, leaping from rock to rock, and scrambling up, arrived quite breathless.

"Nothing bad, I hope?" she queried, sympathetically, as he threw himself headlong at her feet.

"Yes, really, Emma," he replied, "it is bad; not so much in itself, but coming after all the rest, you know, it takes the starch pretty well out of me, I confess."

"What is it this time?"

"It's the 'Hermit to His Books.' I've tried it everywhere, and now even the Heathen rejects it. It is utterly hopeless, you see."

"It isn't in your best vein, I'm afraid, and you will simply have to try again."

"Well, what is my vein, then? Have I any veins anyway, or are they all arteries?" And he laughed, in a half-hearted way. "There was the 'Swinging Lantern,' which was dramatic and ghostly. I thought that would do. It was modeled after my prize poem in college. And there was the 'Ghost of Desdemona,' pitched in the same high key—both utter failures. Then there was the 'Switchman,' in the way of dialect—"

"But you know, Joel," she broke in, "that style doesn't suit you at all. It is like a red-headed girl trying to wear a pink waist. Dialect, unless it is written by a native, is as bad as a foreign language. It is either intensely humorous—to the initiated—or it is crude and pointless. You might as well try to write in German or Chinese."

Joel looked up at her and laughed; this time the laugh was genuine. "And yet," he replied, "you say you believe in me. You think I will succeed if I keep on with my writing. It's really more than I can believe myself just now, Emma," he added, more seriously. "To tell the truth, I am sick of it, and just about ready to give the whole thing up."

"But you did not work it over?"

"Well, no; what was the use? When a thing is written, it's written, as far as I'm concerned. I know that poem isn't all that it might be, but I don't see any way of improving it myself. It's like the Irishman's coffee: 'All right if I could take the 'ile out, bejabbers!' And that's just the trouble with all my work, I suppose: I can't seem to get rid of the kerosene taste. I have a gleam of thought, and I write; then my lamp goes out (excuse the mixed metaphor)! and I can't seem to light it again. Some men can spend hours polishing down a single line, but I can't. If I try, the whole poem loses its flavor, and it seems such wretched stuff that I am seized with a mad impulse to toss it into the fire at once."

"As you actually did with the 'Birth of Athena?'"

"Exactly."

"I wish you hadn't. I liked the 'Birth of Athena' so much. Only I did think you could improve those few lines about Hermes paying for compliments."

"Well, they were pretty poor, I know; I couldn't fix them up, anyhow, and the rest of it was no earthly use without them. Like the grayhound with the docked tail, it wouldn't have improved the dog to cut the tail off entirely. So what was the use? Do you think I might have made it passable?"

"I know you could," she replied, with conviction; "and just so with the 'Hermit to His Books,' if you will only try. I told you frankly where I thought it was lacking. Why don't you go over it carefully. Joel Deems, you have the soul of a true poet in you, but—"

"But what?" he asked eagerly, still gazing down at the tossing sea. And just then a great wave rolled in and dashed triumphantly far over the beach. Emma was watching him closely, searchingly, the while.

"Nothing, only I am perfectly sure you have not found your own field yet. Do you know—I believe—I have never said so before," she hesitated, "but I think—you might write—well, poems of sentiment, for instance. So far as I know, you have never tried that, and I don't see why."

"Oh, I simply couldn't. It's too absurd. You know the idea in this 'Hermit!' Well, it expresses my own feelings precisely. How could a man of my temperament write poems of passion, or love ditties, or anything of that sort? It would be like trying to graft a forget-me-not onto a wild locust."

"Yes, you can," she retorted; "you have the true sap in you, in spite of all your attempts to starve it out. Don't try to pose before me. I haven't forgotten the last part of your 'Athena':

"'Though clad in comely armor, heart well steeled,
With dauntless dart, should Eros pierce thy shield,
And sink his quivering shaft deep in that shrine,
Then, splendid goddess, were thou twice divine.'

"What real hermit would give utterance to such shockingly tender sentiments as those?" she cried, laughing.

"But that was before—" he began, then broke off suddenly, and bit his lip.

"Before what?" she demanded; then, seeing his pale face, she, too, stopped and glanced away at the sea. The waves dashed up in light spray, which scattered in the wind and quickly vanished.

"I used to write that sort of thing," he said, in a strained voice, "but it didn't seem to work, so I've sworn off."

"For good?" she asked, impulsively.

"Forever," he answered, in a bitter tone.

A slight tremor passed over her, as a great wave cast a few sparkling drops at her very feet. There was another pause, then she resumed, in the same cheerful voice:

"Well, then, if you can't do that, keep on in this way; only do your best every time. You will strike the right key sooner or later. Your last work is better than any I have seen, except the 'Athena.' Keep at it, Joel. Don't be discouraged now, of all times, when you are really just on the brink of success. Please don't."

Joel smiled at her gratefully.

"I was foolish," he said, warmly; "I will do my very best, and perhaps I may get somewhere still. Only there is so much that is crude and empty, and false in my work. I can see that myself."

He turned away again, and watched the tide, which rose and fell, now here, now there, ever battling, ever struggling against the stern, high barriers of the shore. And she, too, had turned toward the sea, and saw the waves beating vainly against the grim, cold rocks.

"But even these," she thought, "must wear away in time, and the sea will conquer."—Home Journal, New York.

Still a Chance for Him.

"So you reject me!" the young lawyer said, rather bitterly. "I wonder if it would do any good to appeal the case to your father?"

She shook her head.

"There is no appeal from my decision," she replied. "I am what you call the court of last resort."

"But I cannot give up the case in this way!" he exclaimed.

She dug the sand with the point of her parasol.

"Mr. Braxton," she said, softly, "might you not ask for a new trial?"—Chicago Tribune.

A Pathetic Appeal.

There is nothing gained by being too bashful; and the inserter of the subjoined advertisement does not need to be told so:

How He Got It.

"Did you ever get religion?" asked the revivalist.

"Well, I should say so—138 pounds of it," replied the man.

"A hundred and thirty-eight pounds of religion!" cried the revivalist. "How did you get that?"

"The only way that a good many men ever get religion," was the reply. "I married it."—Chicago Post.

"I will say," remarked the young woman, "that he is not afflicted with that self-consciousness which marks the person of deficient culture."

THAT CHILI SAUCE.

The household art is the only dower
I can bring save myself to him I wed,
Can you find the roof and earn the flour?
Then I can make home and sweet white bread!"
—Harpers.

The last scarlet bar of the glorious autumn sunset was fading out behind the tall poplars along Turkey creek when Barstow Brown's creaking old farm wagon turned the corner of the road which led to his lonely and ill-kept home.

"There's the light a-burnin' already in Mis' Elviry Richards' window," he commented. "It does git dark awful early nights now. Seems like her'n's the cleanest kep' an' the cheerfulest lamp in the hull township."

And indeed it did seem to illuminate with its friendly radiance the little one-story house by the roadside. It looked like a beacon—a star. It made Farmer Brown think in admiring but unformulated fashion of a steadfast love—pure, unwavering, brilliant. It attracted him. It drew him—the worn and harassed body and soul of him. Unconsciously he tightened the reins. But it was not until the plodding horses stood still in response that he wondered whether he might venture in—and what excuse he could give for his visit.

Suddenly he lifted his head and sniffed—once, twice. Then he hurriedly twisted the reins around the whipstock, clambered down from the high seat.

"Chili sauce! If she ain't a-makin' Chili sauce!" He was hurrying up the short path to the front door, at which he knocked. "I'll tell her I want the receipt for Susie Reilly to make some by. That's the ticket! O—howdy, Mis' Richards! I was goin' home from mill, an' the nicest smell come a-floatin' down the road! Seemed's if I was back in mother's again, and she was puttin' up Chili sauce." He sighed, and moistened his lips at the recollection. "So I thought I'd come in an' find how you make it. Our ripe tomatoes ain't all gone yet. Maybe Susie Reilly could make a quart or so!"

Forty placid and benignant summers had passed over the brown head of Elvira Richards, but where was the girl along Turkey creek who carried herself with more grace and dignity, and what matron could boast such a fresh complexion and bright eyes as she?

"To be sure!" she cried, heartily. "You come right in, Mr. Brown." She drew forward the best rocking chair with the battenberg tidies on the entreating red plush arms.

"'Tisn't much I need make, living alone as I do, but a good storeroom is a fine thing to fall back on. You'd need a lot in your house I'm thinking. I'll give you the receipt with pleasure—and a jar to take home for Susie to taste by. How does she get on, Mr Brown?"

Barstow Brown looked around the bright little room, at the shining glass lamp with the red flannel wick, which stood behind the row of freshly-potted geranium slips in the recessed window, then back at the plump, white-aproned figure opposite.

"Not too well, Mis' Richards. She's kind of shiftless. It comes natural to some folks to be shiftless. Seems like the work allus keeps a bit ahead of her. Seems like she can no more catch up with it than—than she could with a cotton-tail. But she means well. Most shiftless folks allus means well. I got to be movin'." He rose reluctantly. "The young ones—they'll be a-missin' me."

"Land's sake, now, an' you couldn't wait till I make you a cup of coffee? No? That's too bad. Wait till I get you the Chili sauce anyhow. What's that? Could you come out to the kitchen while I'm gettin' it? Why, of course, Mr. Brown!"

Twittering and stepping briskly, Miss Elvira tripped ahead, and Barstow Brown plodded after. He was aghast at his own temerity, but the appetizing smell of the Chili sauce drew him to the kitchen, as the white brilliance of the lamp had drawn him to the parlor.

"My!" he breathed, and stopped short. "This—beats—" He was looking around the gayest, coziest, most immaculate little kitchen he had ever beheld. From the black mirror of a stove, with its golden grin through the opened draft, to the shining plates on the dresser, the row of crimson-filled glass jars on the table, the dishpan that glittered like silver, and the cat asleep on the braided mat, all things bespoke industry, energy, comfort.

Something in his attitude of timidity, in his look of wonder that was almost one of awe, in his neglected personal appearance, went straight to the woman's warm heart of Miss Elvira Richards. He had been such a spruce, good-looking fellow 15 years ago! Her glance, that was keen if kindly, noted all things—the shirt with the band all but gone, the coat with holes at the elbows, more than all the hollows at his temples and in his cheeks. Those and the weak tears that came into his eyes! She busied herself writing out the recipe—and talking.

"It ain't any too easy, I guess, with only Susie. She never was a hand to look after children—and there's three to your place. I expect it ain't been like home since—since Cyrilla went away."

Barstow Brown was silent. It had not been a happy home before Cyrilla died. But he could not tell Miss Richards that—no, nor anyone else. Only he had meant—had honestly meant—to ask Elvira to marry him before the pretty, painted, flippant 'att' city girl had come down to the country town and taken his fickle heart captive.

"Here's the receipt and here's the j. Yes, you must take the big one; and—wh—Barstow!"

For there was a look in his eyes she h... not seen since those happy days before Cyrilla aired her city graces on Turkey Creek.

"I'm a good deal of a failure, Elviry," said Barstow Brown. "I don't know but you'll turn me out when you hear what I been wantin' to say ever since it would be right an' proper to talk that way. But the farm's a good one an' the house could be made the best hereabouts if 't was fixed up right, an' the children—"

"They're dear children!" declared Miss Elvira—and she meant it.

"Well, they like you awful well. You allus was a one to git around youngsters. I—I—" he dropped his eyes—"I guess you know what I mean, Elviry—what I want!"

"Of course I do!" she cried, cordially. "You want the receipt—and the Chili sauce."

"Now, Elviry! You know I want—you."

"Well, you got to take them if you take me!" Her tone was delightfully coquettish. "I got one in each hand!"

He stared at her—eager, half-incredulous.

"Do you mean it—really? There's been others—"

"There's been others," Miss Elvira agreed complacently, "but—I haven't took any of 'em—have I? There—now, Barstow Brown! Do behave! I reckon I might git ready in three weeks, but—your team will be clean froze waiting. O—Barstow! I didn't think 't was in you to act so dreadfully si..! Land's sake—look out! Let me set down the jar of Chili sauce, anyways! There—now—go! It'll be all of nine o'clock when you get home—Barstow—Brown!"—Chicago Tribune.

His, Certainly.

"It is a Rubens, is it not?" said the visitor, turning from an inspection of the painting of the hostess.

"My husband's name," replied Mrs. Gaswell, with cutting distinctness, "is William. It's his all right, though. He paid $7,000 for it."—Chicago Tribune.

Sardonic.

"No," answered Senator Sorghum. "He doesn't have to think. It has got to be second nature with him."—Washington Star.

The Whole Story in one letter about
Pain-Killer
(PERRY DAVIS'.)
From Capt. F. Loye, Police Station No. 5, Montreal:—"We frequently use PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER for pains in the stomach, rheumatism, stiffness, frost bites, chilblains, cramps, and all afflictions which befall men in our position. I have no hesitation in saying that PAIN-KILLER is the best remedy to have near at hand."
Used Internally and Externally.
Two Sizes, 25c. and 50c. bottles.

Might Be of Value.

"No," he said decidedly, "woman should not have the ballot."

"Why not?" she demanded.

"Because of her uselessness in case of a conflict. The one who votes should also be of service when it comes to fighting."

"I should think," she returned thoughtfully, "that woman might be of value in putting patches on the seat of war."

Thus again was woman's resourcefulness in argument demonstrated.—Chicago Post.

In Glass Jars.

"It is rumored that the pure food cranks are after the Chicago packers," said the first Texas steer, "to have them put their beef up in glass instead of tins, hereafter."

"Well?" remarked the second steer, indifferently.

"Well, wouldn't that jar you?"—Catholic Standard and Times.

TOWNS AND CITIES.

Of the 1,070 miles of paved streets in Philadelphia only 70 remain paved with cobble and rubble.

The population of Troy, N. Y., has decreased 305 during the decade. The inhabitants of the city now number 60,651.

The average annual price of an apartment with seven rooms is $500 in Berlin, $400 in Hamburg and $380 in Leipsic.

Only one city in Sweden would be classed with our larger cities—Stockholm, which is somewhat smaller than Pittsburgh.

The 95 per cent. increase in the population of East St. Louis in the last ten years suggests a recent tendency in population, almost as noticeable as the concentration in cities. This is the current that has set in from the cities to the suburbs. The growth of East St. Louis is a result of the growth of St. Louis. The improvement of means of urban transportation, fast express trains on the railroads and the swift trolley cars, running at frequent intervals, have led many people to flee from the dirt and noise of the city to the suburbs.

SPARKS AND FLASHES.

Electricity as a motor for regular railway trains has been found 15 per cent. cheaper than steam in the experiments recently made at Berlin on the Wanser-Bahn.

It is said that the electrical effects to be exhibited at the forthcoming Pan-American exposition in Buffalo, N. Y., will exceed anything of their kind ever shown before. The enormous energy of the Niagara power plant will be available for the contemplated illuminations, and this will mean that a flood of electrical energy will be poured in to maintain the really marvelous display of electric light that will be shown.

Mr. H. Edmunds, of London, has devised a means of insulating cables with paper. His idea consists of thoroughly impregnating paper with a mixture of resinous material and oxidized oils, which are reduced to a thin consistency by the application of heat. The paper is then immersed in this solution and allowed to become completely saturated with the mixture. When it is withdrawn from this bath the permeated paper is wound spirally round the conductor.

The most economical light is that whose spectrum is confined to the visible rays, and which does not involve the simultaneous emulsion of either infra-red or ultra-violet rays. Electric light marks in this respect a distinct advantage on the older methods of lighting, and electric luminescence decidedly so. But no form of light hitherto produced equals that of the glowworm in efficiency. The light of luminous organisms only contains an infinitesimal amount of heat.

A new telephone fire alarm system has just been patented, the whole system being operated by magneto current and dry batteries. After the system is once installed the only thing to get out of order is the burning out occasionally of a fuse, which may be quickly repaired. A separate wire is used for each fire district, and any number of telephones may be connected with any district wire. By means of this system every house and factory along the line of the wires can be connected with the alarm wire, and thus protection may be had at a low cost. The wires can also be used to connect with the long-distance telephone for other uses.

How Are Your Nerves?
If they are weak and you feel nervous and easily "fustrated," can't sleep and rise in the morning unrefreshed, your blood is poor. Strong nerves depend upon rich, nourishing blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the nerves strong by enriching and vitalizing the blood. It gives sweet, refreshing sleep and completely cures nervous troubles. Begin taking it today.
Nausea, indigestion are cured by Hood's Pills.

NO MAKESHIFT.
In This Case the Work was Properly Done.
Any reader who has had backache and found relief by rubbing the back with liniments and lotions, understands that the relief obtained was but a makeshift, for the ache returns. There's a way to do it so the ache will not come back. Read how it's done.
Mr. Fred A. Wood, of 103 Thurbers avenue, Providence, R. I., messenger for the Earle and Prews Express Co., says: "In the winter of 1897 I became so enthusiastic an admirer of Doan's Kidney Pills, after they cured me of kidney trouble, I wrote to the agents unsolicited, telling them about my cure and stating that if my recommendation would help the preparation along I would be only too pleased to furnish it. It has appeared in our Providence newspapers since, and now in the month of May, 1899, I emphatically state there is not one word I wish to retract. On the other hand, I am only too pleased to re-endorse a preparation which acts so faithfully to the representations made for it as Doan's Kidney Pills."
Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers, price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no substitute.

That Cough Hangs On
You have used all sorts of cough remedies but it does not yield; it is too deep seated. It may wear itself out in time, but it is more liable to produce la grippe, pneumonia or a serious throat affection. You need something that will give you strength and build up the body.
SCOTT'S EMULSION
will do this when everything else fails. There is no doubt about it. It nourishes, strengthens, builds up and makes the body strong and healthy, not only to throw off this hard cough, but to fortify the system against further attacks. If you are run down or emaciated you should certainly take this nourishing food medicine.

The Franklin grange are invited to visit Border grange of East Woonsocket Wednesday evening. The members will go on the 7.15 car to Woonsocket.

The Christmas goods begin to appear in the show windows and the children find increased delight in living and looking at the good things for good children.

Joseph Burk was arrested Saturday night in Medway for drunkenness and disturbing the peace. He was tried in Franklin Monday, being sent to Dedham.

The Congregational church will consider, on Thursday evening, the question of holding the annual meeting in the evening of Jan. 7, instead of the afternoon as heretofore.

The new Gladstone hotel in Medway was to have been sold at auction on Saturday, but an injunction was placed on [illegible] by Sheriff Fitzpatrick, necessitating a postponement.

Forefathers' day will be observed at the Horace Mann school Thursday, from 12 to 1, with appropriate exercises. The historic address on the Pilgrims will be given by Rev. F. B. Sleeper.

Mrs. Hennigar, the reader at the Congregational church last Friday evening, was entertained by Mrs. W. F. Ray, and A. M. Thayer and C. E. Whiting entertained the Harvard quartet.

Prof. A. W. Peirce is to have a paper on "The Ministry of Religion to Young Men," at the conference of the Rhode Island Universalist convention held at North Attleboro on Thursday.

Six inches of ice is reported on some of the ice ponds, and with about four inches more cutting would begin. After the experiences of last winter the ice that is 10 inches thick will not be cast aside.

Gorman's Troubadours appeared at the Opera house on Saturday evening, giving a thoroughly meritorious entertainment. The singing was unusually good and the specialties and cake walk all that could be desired.

Dr. J. Cushing Gallison was one of the Massachusetts Surgical and Gynaecological society about 1878. For three years he was one of the faculty of Boston university and instructor in surgery connected with Massachusetts Homœpathic hospital.

J. A. Elwood has tendered his resignation to the Worcester Textile company of Unionville. He has been employed as cloth and yarn bleacher, also cloth finisher, with many years' experience in this line both in Europe and in this country.

Bishop Lawrence will confirm a class in Christ church, Medway, Wednesday evening, at 7.45 o'clock. Franklinites who desire to attend, should note the change made in the hour of service. The car leaves from in front of Dean academy at 7.15.

Capt. George W. Miner has sold his place on Brook street, and will probably remove nearer the center. John K. Meek has sold his farm on Maple street to a widow lady and will remove to Rhode Island. Both places were sold through W. A. Pond's agency.

The Deans and the Pawtucket Y. M. C. A. played an interesting game of basket ball on Saturday evening before a good-sized audience, who vigorously applauded the many excellent points of play. The visitors returned home the victors by a score of 21 to 16.

Friday afternoon Messrs. Clark and McCarthy of the board of selectmen had a conference with George C. Dauphinee with reference to changing the line of the four corners schoolhouse lot so as to give more land on Cross street to Mr. Dauphinee. No decision was reached.

On last Sabbath evening Dr. Sneath went with his audience to the Jordan river, the ruins of Jericho, Dead sea and the mountains of Moab. He presented the sad conditions of the Bedouin tribes and the tyranny of the Turkish rule. Miss Eunice Crocker assisted in the musical portion of the service.

Walter A. Hawkins arrived home from Bohemia on Friday. Although he had an excellent and lucrative position there yet home interests appeared to make it wise to relinquish it and remain in the future in America. It is quite likely that he will ere long be connected with a prominent Boston mercantile house.

There were seventy men at the meeting of the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday afternoon at 4 15, Rev. Dr. Sneath making the address. He spoke very forcefully of "things that have happened in the night." The singing was in charge of J. Ray Wyckoff, who also sang a solo very effectively. There was a general feeling that the meeting was one of unusual helpfulness.

If you want to decide what will be nice for a Christmas present be sure and attend the bazaar given by the ladies of the Universalist church in Central Square hall on Thursday and Friday evenings. Many beautiful articles will be for sale, an entertainment will be given each evening, and dancing will be indulged in on Friday evening.

H. H. Gates, of the Sunnyside farm, is out with a handsome new wagon for transporting milk and spring water. It was made in New York state and is admirably adapted to the purposes intended. He will hereafter deliver the water in bottles, instead of jugs, which will be much more satisfactory to his patrons. Mr. Gates believes in having everything thoroughly up to date.

The M. A. & W. railway paid a tax to the state of over $1,600, which is distributed to Franklin, Bellingham and Wrentham. Franklin has six miles of track and resident stockholders holding $100,000 of the stock, while Wrentham and Bellingham, with very little if any of the stock owned within their limits, get over $1200. It is but fair that towns should have a tax based on track miles within their limits, but in addition to the above there is a tax coming direct to the towns and based on trackage, but less in amount.

Eight young men from the Pawtucket Y. M. C. A. came to Franklin on Saturday afternoon to play at basket ball with Dean academy. Upon invitation from Secretary Stewart they went to the rooms of the Franklin Y. M. C. A., where a number of the local members welcomed them, providing a lunch and otherwise entertaining them. They proved to be fine young men, manly, courteous and an honor to the Pawtucket organization. Sec. Stratton is to be congratulated on being able to send out so fine a representative body of young men.

On Tuesday of last week the different schools in town, with the exception of the high school, commenced their morning session at 8.45 and closed in the afternoon at 3.10. This will continue only through the winter months. The reason for this change from the old time is on account of the inconvenient times at which the cars run for children that patronized them. Some of the children would have to wait thirty or forty minutes for a car, especially for the Medway line. Another reason for the change was on account of the growing dusk so early in the afternoon.

The Culhane, Chace & Weston Big minstrels will be at the Opera house on Friday night This company has been giving highly-praised entertainments in this section and is one of the best known burnt cork organizations on the road. They give a thoroughly up-to date minstrel program, made up of new and novel ideas and ingenious effects, the comedy element being especially strong. The singing corps of this company is unusually clever and the entire performance strictly first class and up-to-date in every detail. The street parade on the day of performance is a big feature, the big band furnishing music galore. Seats are now on sale at Dana's. Best seats, 50c.

Glance

Into the door yards of the houses as you pass and note the flyers lying out in the rain and snow. This is money thrown away. Good flyers, well distributed are of value, but still do not have the force of a newspaper advertisement. Readers will say this. SENTINEL advertisements are carefully read, commented upon, and cannot be thrown away.

Violin Instruction.

Mentally Helpful.

"How to Read With Profit" was Rev Dr. Hodge's theme at the High school last evening before an interested audience of teachers and others. It was plain that he was thoroughly at home in his subject and gave his hearers many valuable points. He said in part: Read from choice and not from chance. Don't read at haphazard, simply because a book has been recommended and is said to be interesting, unless you have confidence in the judgment of the one advocating it. Read connectedly; take prominent events and read the history, the romance, the poetry, the drama about it; broaden your views of it.

We read too much, anyway. Multifarious and miscellaneous reading spoils our judgment and corrupts our taste for good reading. There is more relaxation in good reading than in all the light literature ever written. Reflect upon what you read; leave nothing that you do not understand, if possible. Mental culture is to be gained largely from books alone. It is not the province of the newspaper or the magazine to furnish it. Six well-selected books, mentally digested, will insure a cultured mind. Don't read simply for the story; plots are few and have been worn threadbare already.

Of making books there is no end, so don't feel that you must read everything that comes to your hand Read from selection, read broadly and digest what you read. Then you will read with profit.

Meritorious and Pleasing.

There was a good sized audience at Dean academy last evening to enjoy the term concert provided by the pupils of the institution. While individual mention might seem somewhat unfair, yet it is not too much to say that all the numbers were uniformly good, a few of them being of marked excellence. The violin solo by the instructor, Miss Edith Linwood Winn, was enthusiastically received. The following was the program:

Organ Solo—a. "Prelude and Fuge."
b. Allegretto."
Leroy P. Kirkham.
Song..........."Loch Lomond."
Miss Carmen Burr.
Reading..........."Military Steeple Chase."
Ellis M. Jones.
Piano Solo..........."Laendler."
Miss Minnie M. Walker.
Reading..........."Ole Bull's Christmas."
Miss Elsie R. Metcalf.

Miss Edith Forrest.
Piano Solo..........."Le Zephyr."
Miss May C. Hook.
Vocal Duet..........."Spring Song."
Miss Burr and Miss Johnson.
Piano Solo..........."Liebeslied."
Miss Florence G. Sanborn.
Reading..........."The Gossip."
Miss Florence J. Elwood.
Song—a. "Donna vorrei morir."
b. "Winter Lullabye."
Miss Ella Marshall.
Piano Solo—a. "Impatience."
b. "Valse Noble."
Miss M. Elizabeth Lamont.
Reading..........."The Minister's Black Nance."
Miss Maude L. Barron."
Violin Quartet..........."Prayer and Rondo."
Misses Forrest, Walrath, Tralton and Mr. Fales.

Practical Benefit.

Co-operation of teacher and parent was the subject brought before the Mothers' section at the home of Mrs. Alfred Farrington on Thursday evening. Many of the teachers were present, including Mr. Frazer, Misses Lewis, Dunning, Hood, Sullivan, Daniels, Tower, Ham and King, and gave many thoughtful suggestions as to ways in which the mother could assist the teacher in her work and also greatly benefit the child. Among them were visiting school, supplying pupils with nourishing food, seeing that children studied at proper hours and in a good light when obliged to do so at home, refraining from criticising the teacher in the presence of the child, taking an interest in the child's work without directly assisting, creating a public interest in the public school and increasing the school supplies. The meeting was very interesting and beneficial both to teachers and mothers. Light refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

A Christmas Suggestion.

Do you have to write a long letter every week or two to some friends north, east, south or west? Did you ever think that it would be cheaper for you to send them the SENTINEL, instead of trying to tell your absent friends all the local happenings? One copy of the paper contains one hundred times as much local news as an ordinary letter. A number of persons are SENTINEL subscribers for absent friends, and many complimentary letters from them attest to their appreciation. A year's subscription to the SENTINEL would be a good Christmas present for any absent friend still interested in Franklin.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

(On receiving a rare perfume sachet and returning the gift with a bunch of flowers

Perfume of violets, May-dew sweets
And heliotrope from sunny lands,
A rich, faint fragrance softly fleets
From Esther's hands.
In Persian wealth of rare brocade,
In blue from deeps of summer skies,
In golden cords my treasure lies—
That cannot fade.

Bound by no silken knot, my flowers
Just breathe their breath of life and sigh
Soft odors on the gale. Their hours
So swiftly fly!
Rose, mignonette and mossy fern—
How frail, how short the joy they give!
O Sweet, must we the lesson learn—
"Nothing can live?"

Nay! time shall mingle in one heap
Thy gift and mine and thou and I.
To ours the dust of men shall creep
And multiply.

And Persian odors lost in air,
And blown buds barren of their bloom—
Earth's natural claim and heritage,
Shall build their tomb.

But all the essence shall escape!
The kindness, peace, the thought, the glow,
In newer life, in angel shape,
In love shall grow.
Celestial countries! Atmospheres
Too pure for mortal lips to breathe
Around immortal joys shall wreathe,
With all that cheers.

Nor past, one throb of tenderness
From thee to me, from me to thee,
Nor lost one loving glance, nor less
One feeling, free.

Perfected, righteous, lifted, fair
As art can know or nature dream,
From face to face in radiance there
Shall friendship beam.

And that great festival whose light
Illumines all the world today,
Making our earthly homes so bright,
Our hearts so gay.

On all we longed for in the past,
Shall with supernal glories shine,
Eternally our own at last—
His gift divine.
CORA LINN DANIELS.

An Artistic Success

The opening night of the Lyceum course at the Congregational church last Friday evening was a decided success, as nearly every seat in the auditorium was taken, and many in the gallery. The chief ushers were N. C. Nye and W. S. Johnson, assisted by Messrs. Emerson, Wyckoff, Fisher, Cosseboom, Sherman and Ray.

The church looked exceedingly inviting, the stage being simply but tastefully decorated with flowers and the ushers being in dress suits The Harvard Male quartet added to their laurels, as every number was appreciatively received, many receiving encores. Mrs. Hennigar was charming, and captivated her audience from the first. She displayed rare rhetorical powers, coupled with a versatility which was very happy. Every number, both by the quartet and by Mrs. Hennigar, was in the best of taste and finely rendered, leaving a most pleasing impression. Indeed, it is difficult to see how the entertainment as a whole could have been improved upon. The next in the series is a lecture by Col. Copeland of Pennsylvania, who will speak on "Seeing the Elephant," Friday evening, Jan. 25.

"The Bronze Buddha."

We are pleased to note that the book which Mrs. Cora Linn Daniels wrote last year, "The Bronze Buddha," is finding excellent sale this year as a gift book. It breathes not the slightest hint of amateurishness; it reads as smoothly as words can be phrased; it abounds in mystery, happily cleared at the close, of course; it never defies probability; the plot is ingeniously woven and well sustained without effort, and the characters, true to life, move and act like living beings. Briefly, the book tells of the wanderings of a magnificent bronze idol, lost from its Oriental home, with an Indian prince interwoven into the story with rare deftness. The Oriental atmosphere has been wafted to our western shores and seems not out of place. Interest in the pages does not flag and few are able to lay it aside unfinished. It is written in exquisite English and has many lofty and impassioned passages. It is a book on no account to be missed.

Transient and regular patrons will find good service, clean and quick work at Ochee's barber shop, Opera house block.

Advertising is business news. It tells the things which are of great daily importance. It is of more account to the frugal housewife to know where to get certain necessary commodities at a less price than usual than to know of the troubles in Siam and Alaska.

A Chance for You.

Dear Santa:—I am a little girl eight years old. Will you please bring me a doll, a doll's trunk, a doll's carriage, some candy and some nuts—that is all I want this Christmas. My little sister wants a doll, a little stove, some nuts and some candy and a ring. Leave them at the SENTINEL office. Good-bye, Santa.

COMMUNICATIONS.

[The editor assumes no responsibility for matter under this caption. This column is entirely at the disposal of the public, avoiding, as far as possible, trivial and controversial matter.]

MR EDITOR:—I doubt if in any town or city the Y. M. C. A. has started off more encouragingly than in Franklin. Under the direction of our able, scholarly president and our faithful, efficient secretary, this society gives promise of large and grand things. There is a foundation principle never to be ignored. The divine center of all amusements must be Christ. If He is left out then recreations cease to re create and rush into ways that are not helpful.

Fun and laughter are necessary, especially to the young. Even the older men and women have need of such diversion. Merry sports, pure and innocent are health to the soul. People get dried up and morbid and cross without them. But if these things have no connection with the divine they are dangerous. This has been demonstrated over and over. The Y. M. C. A. offers pure athletics. It encourages laughter and sport consistent with God and the Bible and religion. It would render youth sincerely youthful and manhood more manly. It seeks to remove the blight of premature old age in those who are young in years.

It's ideal is to gather all the possible charm and sunshine of life into its organization and its rooms that shall be fully obedient unto the higher law of heaven. Here are fine apartments, well heated and lighted, and the best of reading Here are sports that are genuine sports and that leave no after sting. Here is an atmosphere entirely free from profanity or coarseness. We have reason to be proud of this institution and to bid it God speed for the sake of our youth.
A FRIEND.

Attractive Minstrelsy.

Concerning the Culhane, Chase & Weston's minstrels, which appear here on Friday evening, an exchange says:

"Culhane, Chace & Weston's minstrels gave the best minstrel performance of the year at the Lyceum last night to a crowded house. The singing contingent of this company is away ahead of the usual run of minstrel companies, the work of the Imperial four meeting with unstinted applause. The first part is bright and lively, Wm. H. Chace keeping the audience in roars of laughter. The olio is made up of bright and sparkling novelties, Bram and Terrill in a musical act meeting with great approval. The De Elmer trio in a comedy acrobatic act, created no end of fun while on the stage. The well known three St. Felix sisters in a blackface singing and dancing act were a great feature. The magnificent costuming of the act, the sweet singing and the graceful dancing have never been excelled in our city. The music by the Challenge orchestra was highly appreciated and the performance was voted high class by all present."

Property in a Face.

Recently a manufacturing concern in New York city secured the photograph of a [illegible] young woman, reproduced it in a striking advertisement of its wares and circulated it broadcast. The young woman, says a New York paper, was of a modest and retiring disposition, and had never sought publicity of any kind. Her sensibilities were wounded by the use made of her picture, and she brought suit for damages against the manufacturers who had appropriated it. The New York supreme court has ruled that she has just cause of action. The decision is based on two grounds: First, that any person has a right to a life of privacy, and that to print and post in public places the likeness of a person who wishes to avoid notoriety may injure the reputation as well as the feelings of the person concerned; second, that if a likeness, because of its beauty, has a value as a trade-mark or an advertisement, the value is the property of the person whose features are represented, and not of anyone who chooses to appropriate them. Lovers of social decency will hope that this decision may be sustained by all the courts, and become an established principle of law. Legal decisions have put it in doubt whether the relatives of a deceased person can claim damages for representations to which that person might have objected if living; and the limits, if there are any to the uses which may be made of the likeness of public celebrities have not been authoritatively defined. But that a living person who desires privacy is entitled to it, an ought to be protected against the invasion of it by the unauthorized publication of his portrait, is a principle which it is desirable to have established in these days of intrusive cameras and multitudinous half-tones.

Cuban English.

Over in Boston and thereabout they are telling amusing stories about the Cuban teachers who were recently receiving instruction there. One day the teachers were invited to some sort of an evening function. It happened that shortly before the hour for the assembly some ladies who were in front of that house were politely approached by a group of male Cuban teachers, who with their hats in their hands, stood bowing. "If you please, dear madames," said their spokesman, "we are invited at this house to-night. We wish to attend We were been on an excursion, to the distance, and have not the time to go to our house So that we wear, as you see, our day dress. Perhaps you can tell us if it would be permitted to us to go to the reception in our day dress? If it would not, then certainly shall we take the time to go to our house and put on our night dress! The ladies assured them that they would do much better to go as they were than to put on their night dress, and they bowed gravely and gratefully and withdrew.

During a thunderstorm in Philadelphia a few evenings ago lightning struck a marble statue of Diana at an entrance to Fairmount park. Immediately afterward the left leg of the statue turned brown. Next morning all the coloring had disappeared except one large spot, which so far has resisted persistent scrubbing and the application of powerful acids. The marble statue when struck was illuminated as though hundreds of electric lights had been arranged about it.

Devotees to vegetarianism are said to be increasing in America. They claim that the health of humanity is greatly benefited by an adherence to such a diet.

FACTS ABOUT TREES.

The orange tree is very fruitful; a single tree will produce 20,000 oranges fit for use. A good lemon tree will produce 8,000 lemons.

The eucalyptus trees in Australia penetrate from 180 to 220 feet into the soil with their roots, which absorb the moisture within a radius of [illegible] to [illegible] feet.

At the birth of a Japanese baby a tree is planted, which must remain untouched until the marriage day of the child. When the nuptial hour arrives the tree is cut down, and a skilled cabinet maker t[illegible] the wood [illegible] furniture [illegible] young people [illegible] of all ornaments of the house.

On a sunny day this "tree clock" insures a succession of shade [illegible] the house.

Two logs of African mahogany were sold by Messrs. Edward C[illegible] & Co. [illegible] for [illegible] They formed one tree [illegible] bought for the purpose of being cut into veneers [illegible] of [illegible] residences of [illegible] of the [illegible] princes of the United States. The veneers are used instead of wall papers and, being beautifully figured, give a rich effect. The prices realized for the two logs were respectively ten shillings three pence and seven shillings three pence per superficial foot, which is a record for African mahogany logs in the rough state as imported.

FRENCHMEN AND SPORT.

(From London Truth.)

M. Thiers hated game shooting.

Grevy shot like a Jura peasant, and before he rose to the presidency of the republic liked to bring back a full bag to his cook.

MacMahon's manner of shooting was manly and unaffected. He hated battues, which he looked upon as massacres. One just fired straight forward without taking aim, and the game fell on the ground.

Carnot, a mathematician and a man of etiquette liked the battues. They left nothing to chance and little to personal skill. Given the number of birds and fowling pieces, one could always [illegible] the amount that would figure in the tableau. The tableau is the French word descriptive of the show of birds laid out by the gamekeepers in a clearing of the forest at the end of the day. Sometimes it includes fur-footed as well as feathered game, and is quite a picture.

M. Felix Faure was a great slaughterer of game. His master of the game preserves was Maj. Lagarenne (Angl[illegible], Rabbitwarren—and no [illegible]ment. President Faure boasted [illegible] last year of his life that in the shooting season that had just ended he fired [illegible] shots. The shooting in presidential reserves goes on in parallel alleys, in which game is driven by beaters. The sportsmen blaze away. Things are arranged to enable the chief guest to kill the greatest number. When there is no guest of mark at a presidential chasse the president does the greatest execution. The late emperor's gun was always first in the Compiegne preserves, unless when another crowned head was with him.

A COLUMN OF FIGURES.

To complete their growth, the nails of the left hand require eight to ten days more than those of the right.

The total number of copies of newspapers printed throughout the world in one year is estimated at 12,[illegible],000,-[illegible]. To print these requires 781,260 tons of paper.

Many watches make five beats per second, [illegible]0 each minute, 18,000 every hour, or 432,[illegible] per day. Thus it will be seen that a half dozen turns of the key once a day, taking up a few seconds of time, stores up a modicum of power in the spring which is cut up into nearly half a million of beats. If we multiply the daily beats by 365¼, the number of days in a year, we find that the watch ticks 157,788,000 times while the earth is making one annual trip round the sun.

REBUILDING.

You would like to be as strong as an athlete. You would like to have muscles like his. You would like to have the Strength that knows no weakness. But you are all run down, miserable, can't sleep, no appetite, nervous, ambition gone, no zest for life.

What you need is Smith's Green Mountain Renovator. Why? Simply this. The Greeks were a strong people. They believed in the curative and strengthening power of the herbs of the field, and used them. Now the Renovator is made of pure, wholesome herbs, and is redolent of the green fields, fragrant woods and bracing air. It will give you Strength. You will find yourself a new person. This has been the experience of thousands. Try it.

"Your Smith's Green Mountain Renovator is all it is recommended to be. It's worth its weight in gold. It really is wonderful the way I gained strength after using the Renovator. I was completely run down, nervous and exhausted; could not eat, sleep, or do a bit of work; was depressed and discouraged. After using one bottle I felt its strengthening effects, and continued its use, until after using a few bottles, I now feel like a new woman. My appetite is splendid, and I sleep like a log. I [illegible] strong, and [illegible] nerves no longer set me on edge. I cannot say enough for your wonderful medicine, and [illegible] all in my power to help you [illegible] weak to use it."

The Best-Loved Woman.

The world loves a true and noble woman more than the greatest beauty that ever lived or the most brilliant intellect. Within the memory of every one there are noble, womanly lives, which have been dearer and better to us than the most brilliant women of history. Not for the beauty of a Helen of Troy or a Cleopatra, not for the brilliancy of a George Sand or a Joan of Arc would we sacrifice these lives. Indeed, if we had to choose between one or the other we would wipe from the slate of history those historic characters rather than destroy the sacred influences of a noble mother, sister or wife which have shaped and formed our careers.—A. S. Atkinson, M. D., in Woman's Home Companion.

Jamaica's Cleft Mountain.

In Jamaica there is a mountain, between Kingston and St. Thomas in the east, on the south side of the island, which bears the name of Judgment mountain, or Mount Sinai, because of the awful catastrophe which occurred there in 1692, by an earthquake. In the district of St. Andrew only one house was left standing. A mountain some 4,000 feet high was cleft perpendicularly for 800 or 1,000 feet from the summit, as smoothly cut as the housewife's knife could cut down through a cheese. The slice of the mountain thrown off covered 1,[illegible]0 acres in its fall, burying houses and herds and flocks and 13 persons.—N. Y. Times.

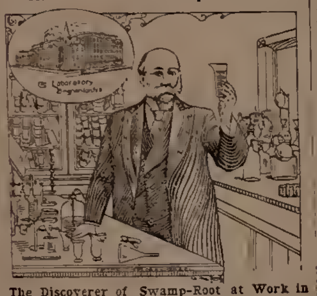
The Eminent Kidney and Bladder Specialist.



The Discoverer of Swamp-Root at Work in His Laboratory.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell. Then the richness of the blood—the albumen—leaks out and the sufferer has Bright's Disease, the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root the new discovery is the true specific for kidney, bladder and urinary troubles. It has cured thousands of apparently hopeless cases, after all other efforts have failed. At druggists in fifty-cent and dollar sizes. A sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling about Swamp-Root and its wonderful cures. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Christmas
1900
The Little Lord Jesus is born King to-day.

CAROLERS, chanting a song of pure gladness,
Worshipers, sounding a joyful refrain,
What are these tidings that conquer earth's sadness,
Echoing softly o'er city and plain?
Hark to the winds and the waters replying,
Jubilant, gladsome, their song seems to say,
Over the winter world floating and flying:
The little Lord Jesus is born King to-day!

* * *

FAR, where the Bethlehem valleys lay sleeping
Silent and calm in the peaceful moonlight,
Came there a burst of high melody sweeping,
Rhythmic and tender, one wonderful night;
Clearer it sounded, the silver stars brightened,
Softer, their brilliance faltered away,
Louder, the plain with fair angel forms whitened—
The little Lord Jesus is born King to-day!

* * *

SHEPHERDS, on guard where the tired flocks were resting,
Started at sound of the wonderful song,
Wise men rejoiced, as, their long-held faith testing,
Sweetly triumphant 'twas carried along;
Sages and toilers alike knew the glory
Of music and angels and heavenly ray;
Listen! We still hear their worshiping story:
The little Lord Jesus is born King to-day!

* * *

STILL to the thinkers and toilers who need Him
Comes the dear Christ-child when winter is drear,
Still, through His "little ones" we all may feed Him,
Clothe Him, and shelter, and cherish Him, dear.
So in the silence which follows earth's sadness,
Waiting, in faith, till the night pass away,
Angels shall come, with their message of gladness:
The little Lord Jesus is born King to-day!

ETHEL M. COLSON.

A RESURRECTED CHRISTMAS

By Elvira Floyd Froemcke

ON ONE of those misty, gray evenings so common to December, a certain street corner was suddenly enlivened by a gay whistle, a boy, a bundle of hand-bills and a bucket of paste. With the cold gaze of the electric eye upon him, the boy plastered a bill upon the tall wooden pole, and then stepped back to gaze admiringly on his work, and to give an extra dab or two at the loose edges which thereupon clung to their support in approved artistic style.

Three women were approaching from different directions, and, thinking to do a good stroke of business for his employer by attracting attention to his advertisement, he whistled very shrilly and quite off the key, as he slowly picked up his pail to leave.

One old lady stopped and exclaimed, impatiently:

"If you must whistle, why don't you whistle in tune?"

The boy only laughed good-naturedly, and took himself off in haste, but the two women approached uttering little expressions of surprise and pleasure; for they were old friends, and at the very moment of meeting each had been thinking over bygone days, when their lives were closely interwoven.

"Well, here we are," gayly exclaimed Estella; "three graces in ungraceful attire! Did you ever hear such a fearful whistle as that boy had? First he took me off my feet and then I frightened him into finding his. Do see him run," she added, as the youth disappeared round a corner.

"Are you going home?" she inquired

They simply answered: "Yes," and all turned to read the poster that had seemed to draw them together:

on
PSYCHIC MEANING OF CHRISTMAS.

"Well!" they all exclaimed, "what does he mean by that?"

"It seems to me easy enough," said Penelope. "It is having the spirit or soul of the season within. I used to think of these things once, but Christmas seems a dead season now. Funny, too," she laughed, "when I have here under my arm 15 proof sheets of Alton's new Christmas story, which I am to correct this very night."

"And I," said Estella, "never celebrate the day now; though I am teaching six new Christmas carols to my pupils, and have an anthem in my music roll to practice for Christmas service in our little church."

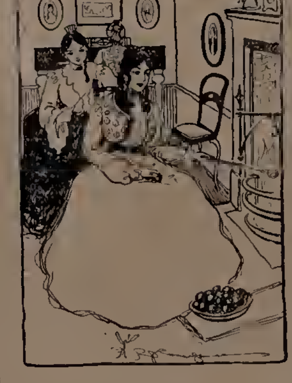
"And I," puffed Urania, "have ten pounds of dried fruits for the Christmas mince pies. It all goes to those greedy boarders of mine, and I am too tired to know what Christmas means in these days. It is a dead anniversary and practical people have outgrown it."

A flare from the electric lamp sent a light over the three keen, intelligent old faces, and revealed three hands clasped closely and sympathetically. They were all well over 60, and their faces bore marks of sorrow, courage and well-fought battles.

Penelope and Urania were what the world calls "old maids" (loving friends would have another name). In youth Penelope had had family, home, wealth and ease; now all these had passed from her. She was merely a book canvasser when "the firm" required her services, or a stenographer or proof-reader when that sort of work pressed. Her "home" was a back room in a shabby house, on a dull street in the sleepy old city; her only relative, a brother, remained. He, alas, was hopelessly insane; yet the brave woman supported him, always spoke of him as "my weak-minded brother," visited him on every holiday, and strove with love and gifts to recall the poor wandering mind. In this duty she never failed; remaining as loyally true to him as to her young lover who had been drowned at sea 45 years ago.

Urania had been an only child, motherless from birth. Her noble old father had laid down his life for his country on the battlefield of Gettysburg, and, after mourning him so sincerely many years (assisted by numerous impecunious relatives), she awakened to the fact that her money was spent, her house mortgaged, and she was on the verge of ruin through their "care and sympathy." She plucked up courage, swept her house of kinsfolk, and went practically into the business at which she had played too long. She was plump, rosy and motherly, with great soft hands, a tender heart and a kindly spirit—a great contrast to the pale, ethereal Penelope and the slight, nervous Estella, but her very dissimilarity was an attraction to the others, their different characteristics serving to draw out the best side of their natures.

Estella had lately returned to the old town where all had lived in their early girlhood, and she brought a spirit that stirred to life many tender memories. She had had her sorrows. Widowed and made childless in the second year of marriage, she had to face the world and turn the art that she adored into a packhorse to sustain her life and carry her over hard bridges.



FIFTY YEARS AGO.

Now the three had met, and—well, they felt young again, and acted so.

"Three old pieces of driftwood toughened by the tide," said Estella. "Too old to celebrate anything, even a day antique as Christmas."

"I have heard that driftwood makes a beautiful fire for warmth and color," said Penelope, softly.

"Yes," added Urania, "and an open fire is so comforting. Three logs and a pair of well polished andirons—"

An unexpected laugh rang out; Estella was certainly forgetting nerves, and cold, age and infirmity.

"Do you remember," said she, "that awful Christmas we were forced to spend at Miss Verplanck's boarding school? Bless me, girls, it will be 50 years this Christmas! Surely you remember it?"

"Well, I guess we do," chimed in Penelope. "I was exiled because of scarlet fever at home; you because your mother and father were called to London, and dear Urania, here, stayed lest we should be unhappy; bless her!"

"Yes," added Urania, with a slight flush, "and do you remember the feast in Estella's room? How you knitted something soft and white, and Estella played minor things on the piano, till a tear dropped on one of the apples I was roasting for supper, and how you stuck your knitting needle in that apple, so that I should swallow my own tear. Then how we danced the Highland schottische, till little Miss Verplanck put her head in the door, and said, with that little cough of hers: 'A little less noise, young ladies, if you please'"

"Let us do it all over again," cried Estella. "Come to my rooms on Christmas night at five o'clock. Urania may send the cooked chicken; you, Penelope, shall send the nuts and candies, and I will do the rest."

Prof. Wensel did not become richer in pocket through these old ladies, but if, as he said repeatedly in his lecture, spiritual rewards always found and enriched him, he must have been in affluence after this night.

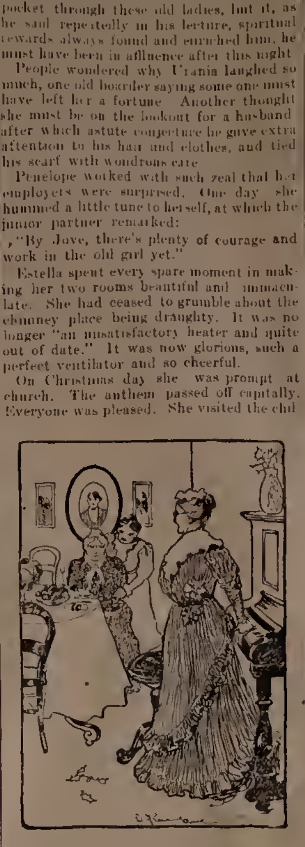
People wondered why Urania laughed so much, one old boarder saying some one must have left her a fortune. Another thought she must be on the lookout for a husband after which astute conjecture he gave extra attention to his hair and clothes, and tied his scarf with wondrous care.

Penelope worked with such zeal that her employers were surprised. One day she hummed a little tune to herself, at which the junior partner remarked:

"By Jove, there's plenty of courage and work in the old girl yet."

Estella spent every spare moment in making her two rooms beautiful and immaculate. She had ceased to grumble about the chimney place being draughty. It was no longer "an unsatisfactory heater and quite out of date." It was now glorious, such a perfect ventilator and so cheerful.

On Christmas day she was prompt at church. The anthem passed off capitally. Everyone was pleased. She visited the children's ward in the old hospital, and was so funny and lovely that the pale little creatures stretched out their hands to her, and laughed a little with their hoarse pain-laden voices. She had emptied her pockets of pennies to the beggars that beset her homeward path, and at three o'clock in the afternoon had dusted every article in the quaint room to a fine polish.



"TIME!" CRIED PENELOPE.

Two great broad windows overlooked a sloping hill and the roofs of many houses. Beyond lay the great gray ocean. A side window was shelved from top to sill, and filled with potted plants that bloomed profusely and overran the ugly red clay that inclosed them.

Across one corner stood the piano. It was the only really new thing at hand, and its polished surface took on shadows of the ancient grandeur about it, as if in apology for its presence here. Opposite the flower window was another recess filled with book shelves, where goodly reading was to be had between the shabby covers of many an old treasure.

A few easy chairs and tables lay cozily about; and the great brick fireplace with its brass andirons and high old mantel shelf was the heart and core of the room.

Estella laid the fine thin old cloth carefully on the round, polished table, garnishing it by pinning little sprigs of holly on its satiny surface.

She placed Urania's chicken by the warm hearthstone, and on a stool near by laid a basket of rosy apples and a pile of bread with the great toast fork on guard. With much pride of manner she turned out a glass of crab-apple jelly into an old glass dish, and flanked it by another dish of brandied peaches.

"That will surprise the girls," she said, and laughed a little as she showered Penelope's lavish supply of candies in every conceivable little receptacle she could find.

Estella looked queenly. Her black satin gown was old, but she had drawn over the patched waist a fichu of soft yellow lace, and fastened in its folds a bunch of pretty old velvet wall flowers. Her hair had a trick of curling itself into proper places, and a glint of its old auburn tint was in its white sheen. Her eyes were bright and her cheeks rosy with expectancy.

Toward five o'clock the shadows grew heavier. Day was almost gone. Estella went to the window, looked out a moment on the sea. "Even the great deep is quiet to-day," she said, "and there is no poor lonesly Estella this Christmas."

She drew the curtains, put a fresh log on the blazing fire and hurried to answer a timid little knock that came on her door.

As the gust of air rushed in she looked up to see Penelope and Urania with hoods off and hands extended, whilst they sang in nasal tones the old street waif's: "I pray you, merry gentlemen." Estella laughingly whirled them into the room, saying: "I am dismayed."

With many loving kisses, wishes for "merry Christmas," and soft little words, they were divested of wraps and furs and finally nestled down into easy chairs with the restful spirit of the hour floating lightly on their tired senses.

Penelope began knitting some soft, fluffy white thing that grew and grew in amplitude; and Urania, after examining the preparations for supper with pleased anxiety, busied herself with toast-fork and apples. Estella wandered about the room idly for awhile, saying a few words, and now and again touching the cheek or hair of her old friends with the tips of her slight fingers. Then, finding her seat at the piano, she drifted off into the land of music and ecstasy, a golden-haired child, softly beckoning the way.

Penelope and Urania kept a quiet accompaniment with needles and fork, and up the chimney tiny flame spirits danced, while the cheery logs sang a tune all their own.

As the last notes of "Chopin's Lament" fell on the air, a great tear splashed down Urania's soft cheek and fell into the snowy heart of the last roasted apple.

"Time!" cried Penelope, though her own eyes were moist, and she drove her knitting needle straight through the unsuspecting apple.

Estella sprang up and came laughing to the fireside. Then up jumped the others, and, singing the "Keel Row," danced about the table as in their school days.

The flames shot a pink light on the opposite wall, and made the dancing figures look like little girls. The old portraits on the wall took on a disapproving air, and the little flame spirits jeered; but the great logs sang a soft sweet song, and the dear Christ Child nestled close to the old hearts that had found Him, and caressed the wrinkled faces into images of love and peace.

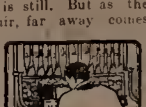
A REASON FOR CHRISTMAS

By Frederick E. Hopkins, D. D.
Pastor Pilgrim Congregational Church, Chicago

THERE is a reason for everything good and for everything bad. For everything that succeeds and everything that fails. There is a reason for every peal of laughter, and for every moan of sorrow. A reason why there are holly wreaths in the windows on this side the street and crape hangs on the door across the way. A reason why the midnight cloud that hung over Bethlehem is covered with gold as when the full moon shines upon the sea, and angels are singing their "Glory to God in the highest," and a reason why a pale woman beside a manger clasps her babe to her bosom and looks up in Joseph's face and with quivering lips whispered: "Does Herod know?"

The Old Sexton.

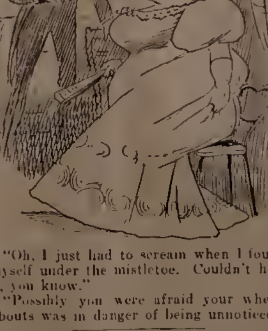
And so there is a reason for this great Christmas anniversary. We know why island calls to island, and nation responds to nation, and continent hails continent, and hemisphere salutes hemisphere. We know why the world heaves its hosanna like an Atlantic surge over the battlements of glory. Watch the old sexton of the ancient cathedral. He rises about four o'clock and trims his lantern. We follow him down the street and up the hill, and suddenly before us, out of the gloom of the early morning, rises the great Gothic temple. The door closing with a bang starts a long roll of echoes up and down the church aisles like a drum call. He climbs the belfry steps and sets his lantern in the recess of a window and a long thin ray shoots from it across the church and the sculptured faces of many saints are lighted up. It is five o'clock. The sexton grasps a rope, bends his body and bows his knees till they touch the floor, suddenly drops the rope and it swiftly runs upward, and the tower trembles and the great bell, like a huge gun, booms. "Awake!" He grasps another rope and rings a second bell in the chime which repeats the message of the first: "Awake!" The bell ringer grasps another rope, and rings a third bell, and it responds: "Awake!" Then all is still. But as the music dies upon the air, far away comes the answer from another watch tower of Zion: "Awake, Awake! Awake!" And then from another tower, and another, till you would think the gates of Heaven were opening one by one and the church triumphant was listening to the salutation: "Awake, put on thy strength, O, Zion, put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem the holy city, break forth into joy, for the Lord hath comforted His people, He hath redeemed Jerusalem." Look at that old bell ringer as he listens to the music of the bells on Christmas morning, and see the tears upon his cheeks and ask him what it all means, and he will answer: "Jesus." Watch the organist as he sits at his instrument and bows his head for a moment. Is it any wonder that the thought rushes over his soul, as an inspiration from on high: "Here beneath my fingers are a thousand voices and never so willing to speak as on Christmas morning when the theme of their praise is Jesus." And if ever ministers of the gospel feel that their pulpits, however humble, are a throne, and that their talents are enlisted as ambassador of a king, it is to-day when they can talk of Jesus. And behold the multitude that is keeping holy day. Roman pontiff and Greek patriarch, Protestant bishop and dissenting preacher, all join hands as did the wise men and offer their gifts to Jesus. Avenues of our great cities thronged with worshipers going to hear the story as told by eloquent lips, as sung by the great boy choir of old Trinity or told in the antiphonal chant by priests standing in their stalls. Truly this day belongs to no sect, and to no creed, and to no party. But the reason we celebrate the day is that Jesus came to all. He belongs to all. He unites us all. He loves all. And we love Him.



The Organist's Prayer.

In the Cathedral.

A TRIFLE TOO ACRIMONIOUS.



"Oh, I just had to scream when I found myself under the mistletoe. Couldn't help it, you know."

"Possibly you were afraid your whereabouts was in danger of being unnoticed."

The Night Before Christmas.

'Twas the night before Christmas and all through the house
Everybody was sleeping as still as a mouse,
No stockings were hung and no presents prepared,
No Christmas-tree ordered, but nobody cared;
Or at least no one seemed to be troubling
himself,
No turkeys were killed, no mince pies on the shelf—
No bright-berried holly was wreathed on the wall,
No mistletoe-bough had been hung in the hall.
'Twas surely the night before Christmas,
and yet
Everyone in the house seemed this fact to forget
But this happened in Norway, so nothing was wrong,
For their night before Christmas is just six months long.
—Carolyn Wells, in Judge.

Indispensable.

Mr. Billus—What are you going to give Bessie for a Christmas present?

Mrs. Billus—I think I shall give her a full length mirror for her room.

Mr. Billus—That settles the question easily enough for me. I shall give her a tough and durable floor rug to go to the front of it.—Chicago Tribune.

A MAID OF BERMUDA.

BY F. H. LANCASTER.

(Copyright, 1900, Daily Story Publishing Co.)

It had been six months since Harold Holcomb, much elated by the responsibilities of his position, had landed on the bit of coral rock known as the Bermudas. He had been sent in a semi-official capacity to examine the magnificent floating dock which Great Britain had built upon this tiny possession of hers, which is "20 miles square and the home of the largest floating dock in the world."

The fortifications were built in the good, solid English fashion, and the garrison with two regiments of infantry made the society of this miniature world pleasantly gay. Holcomb had the friendship of the soldiers, having rendered some service to one of their officers whom he had met abroad, and he liked them, for they were a set of hearty, loyal fellows.

That was before a certain maid of the Bermudas came upon the scene. A charming English girl, with fine flaxen hair and wide open eyes of trusty blue. She was the only daughter of a retired naval officer who had made his home on the largest of the 305 islands and lived in a quiet little home not far from the causeway which makes the two largest islands as one.

Holcomb had been made welcome at this house on the day of his arrival. The old captain had a penchant for anything American, as he was wont to declare. Harold liked the easy unconventionality of the old lady's tea, the strolls with Sir Rodney among his lily-fields and the games of tennis with the younger members of the family. But he had been a frequent visitor for several weeks before he learned of the existence of this blue-eyed, blond-haired daughter, and their first meeting after her return from England was awkward enough. Striding up the drive in his tennis flannels, swinging a racket and whistling a mess-room air, he had nearly run over the dainty little lady, and had stopped in hot confusion.

"Dear me," she exclaimed. "I'm sure I beg your pardon. That is the air Lieut Gaines whistles a good deal, and I—"

But Holcomb interrupted her hastily. "If there is an apology due, please allow me to make it, I was a little late for my appointment with the boys, and—"

"Oh, yes. Why, of course. Then please don't let me stop you."

"But you spoke of needing some assistance. If you will allow me—"

"Just that spray of oleander, then. Thank you."

"Not at all." He lifted his hat and moved away, slowly, too busy with his inward vision to notice that her blue eyes held a hint of admiration in their dancing depths. Without being a fop, Harold knew that he was a fine appearing young American, and looked his best in tennis flannels. The knowledge did not unnerve his play.

"Well," exclaimed Sir Rodney's heir, "that's your fiftieth game, Holcomb. You have played like a fiend. Let's go in and have some tea. I dare say sis is riding with Lieut. Gaines, but mother will have mercy on us."

"Thanks, but I've an engagement with a fellow at the club. So long!"

"Lieut. Gaines be hanged," he muttered, as the gate clicked behind him.

Harold Holcomb's report had been kindly commented upon by the men who were above him in authority, and he had thought himself a happy man. But he had not left Bermuda and truly did not feel particularly joyous as he strolled by Miss Grovner's side between the oleander hedges that inclosed the fields of calla lilies.

"I don't believe any other spot on earth equals our dear little Bermuda," the little lady was saying.

"No, I dare say not," he replied absently. Then rousing himself to the attentive. "Where else in the world could you see such fields as these—acres upon acres of golden headed lilies. How fortunate it is the bulbs are not harvested until the flowers fall."

"Yes, they are lovely. But don't you know, I like the oleander better than the lily. Just see that hedge—a mass of foamy pink."

"Yes," he replied, "it's an ideal spot."

"There are a good many like it in Bermuda."

"Are there?"

"You cannot know much about Bermuda if you ask that question." She was beginning to be nettled by his persistent preoccupation.

"I know only three things about Bermuda." Harold spoke sharply. For the past three month's suspense had been putting a keen edge on pain and now pain was beginning to make him savage. At that moment his only feeling toward the dainty little lady at his side was a bitter resentment. Why did she encourage his attentions, when she knew the restriction and knew, too, that he did not understand them when she first began receiving his jealous attentions. The English girl's quiet tones broke in upon such thoughts.

"And those three things are?"

"Your pardon. First then, your cedar trees live forever; second, your donkeys never die, and third, that your women never marry Americans."

"Rare bits of information, truly. May I ask of whom you gleaned them." The smile had faded from her lips and angry sparks were in her eyes.

Harold looked at her stupidly.

"I don't know," he said, slowly.

"Allow me to assist your memory with a suggestion. Lieut. Gaines?"

"Yes," he replied, still slowly. "At any rate, it was Gaines who told me that Americans were not allowed to become property holders here."

"Certainly, that is true. But the obligation of renouncing a paltry partimony would not prevent a girl of any sense—oh, let us talk about something else. We are both stupid this evening."

Holcomb drew a step nearer to her and bent down a long, foamy spray of oleander. Beyond the lily fields could be seen the snow-white stone houses of laborers and farmers gleaning in the slanting light. The drowsy drone of the sea among the coral reefs came soothingly toward them, and the myriad of lilies offering up their incense to the setting sun drenched the air with fragrance.

Holcomb stood silently bending the oleander with nervous fingers, watching that fair face for the faintest token of encouragement. None came. The girl was looking straight ahead.

"Sweetheart," the word was scarcely a sound even in that dreamy stillness, but the girl's level lashes lifted and fell.

"Sweetheart, I love you so much I will not live without you."

The exultant gladness of his tone seemed to wrap the girl's heart within its joyousness and ring an echo from her inmost being.

"Sweetheart—" and he drew her against his breast.

"Ah, they are the kings of lovers, these American men," she said.

There They Were.

This story was told by a Philadelphia man who dislikes nothing so much as to be asked questions: "My little girl is very fond of seashells," he said, "and, having been called to Atlantic City on business the other day, I took advantage of the opportunity to run down to the beach to see if I could pick up a few. I was strolling along the sand, gathering a few shells and pebbles, which I placed in my handkerchief, when along came one of those old idiots who ask questions with their mouths which their eyes could answer. He smiled upon me and said: 'Fine day, isn't it. Are you gathering shells?' 'No,' I snapped back, saying the first thing that popped into my mind, 'I'm looking for a set of false teeth I lost while in bathing.' He expressed his sympathy, and then his face lit up as he caught sight of a pink and white object on the sand. 'Well, I declare! Here they are now!' he exclaimed, and, sure enough, he picked up a set of false teeth lying right at his feet. I was too surprised to do anything but grab them and put them in my pocket. The funny part of it is that I never had a tooth pulled in my life. I wonder whom that false set belongs to."—Philadelphia Record.

For Politicians.

The following conversation was overheard on a railway train:

"Why, the time was," said the passenger with a gorgeous watch-chain, "when we had our county so well in hand that we could elect a brindle pup to any office we chose to nominate him for."

"And you can't do it now?" queried the other passenger, a man with a consumptive cough.

"I should say not. The other fellows have beat us three to one in the last three elections."

"To what do you attribute the change?"

"Well, I am inclined to think the reason is that when we had the power we elected too many brindle pups."—Youths' Companion.

Identifying the Class.

"I don't recall seeing you at college. I guess you must be before my time."

"Possibly, possibly. Who was at the head of the faculty when you were there?"

"Um—let me see—I don't just recall his name, but I was there the year Jenks played half back on the football team and kicked a goal twice from the field in the last half of—"

"Oh, sure; of course. That was the year our center rush carried most of the opposing team on his back for a gain of 30 yards. Yes, indeed. I wonder who was president then. I don't seem to be able to remember minor details of college life myself."—Chicago Post.

A Strange Compact.

An interesting and puzzling sight greets the visitor to Mount Moriah cemetery, Philadelphia. Some 20 years ago three eccentric men of wealth put up in the most secluded corner three tall shafts of rough hewn granite. They had been friends a long time and they agreed that as each died his shaft was to be broken and the fragments left where they fell. The second of this trio has just passed away and his column has been shattered, as was that of his former friend years ago. No fence incloses the strange monuments, and no names are carved on the granite.—Chicago Chronicle.

Terrapin for Slaves and Hogs.

Judge Page, of Maryland, commenting on a paragraph in the New York Press to the effect that in colonial times lessees of slaves were obliged by law to feed the negroes on terrapin at least twice a week, states that this was no studied compliment to the black men, for in those days the finest diamond backs were regarded as food fit only for slaves and hogs. In feeding them to the latter the terrapins were chopped up with a spade and served raw.—Chicago Chronicle.

The School for Him.

Doctor (to patient)—What ails you?

Patient—Indeed, I don't know. I only know that I suffer.

"What kind of life do you lead?"

"I work like an ox, I eat like a wolf, I am as tired as a dog, and I sleep like a horse."

"In that case I should advise you to consult a veterinary surgeon."—Harlem Life.

Grewsome Securities.

A small parish in Zurich canton has recently been endeavoring to procure a loan of $7,500, but is unable to offer any security other than the village cemetery and a suicides' morgue. Both of these being in use, the negotiations have hung fire, the bank declining to take in pawn such grewsome pledges.—N. Y. Sun.

Shamrocks for Soldiers' Graves.

A thousand packets of shamrock seed, the gift of a resident of Cork to the duke of York were lately sent to South Africa. Their contents will be sown upon the graves of Irish soldiers. —N. Y. Sun.

Cruelty to Animals.

Husband—Don't you think those young kittens should be drowned?

Wife—I don't think it will be necessary, dear. I have given them to the children to play with.—Harper's Bazar.

Dead Ancestors in China.

Dead ancestors are said to occupy too much of the arable land in China. Famines would be less frequent if the country was not one vast cemetery.—N. Y. Sun.

His Umbrella.

Never judge a man by the silk umbrella he carries; he may have left a cotton one somewhere in its place.—Chicago Daily News.

A PLATONIC AFFAIR AT THE SEASIDE

By Douglas Dunne.

Scene—A piazza table by the sea.
People—The Boy and the Girl.
Time—Afternoon.

THE Girl—Funny that we should meet here! I came in quite by chance. I was going down the Cliff walk.

The Boy—Yes, I saw you.

The Girl—I thought of you as I passed, but, of course, I couldn't look.

The Boy—Odd how things happen.

The Girl—We seem to meet so often afternoons—quite by chance.

The Boy—It's one of those coincidences—you go by a certain hour every day.

The Girl—And you are always there.

The Boy—And it seems as though we always have something to say.

The Girl—That's why our friendship is so delightful. I get so tired of sentiment!

The Boy—It's such rot—anyhow—but you know there are very few girls like you. Most of them expect a man to throw bouquets at them all the time. Now, you—

The Girl—Oh, I hate that sort of thing! When I first met you—and realized that you weren't that kind of a man—I was so relieved! I found myself interested in you, because I saw at once that you regarded me as a human being, irrespective of sex.

The Boy—Well, rather! I had met lots of girls, and they seemed so alike.

The Girl—That was my experience with men. They seemed to think a girl wanted silly compliments all the time.

The Boy—But we can talk rationally. I find myself wishing to consult you about even the most ordinary things. I find your point of view is more direct than my own. You look straight at things. I blink.

The Girl—You never do quite open your eyes, do you? Let's see—gray-blue eyes mean that you are very determined—you will be quite desperate when you fall in love.

The Boy—Never intend to—it's too slow! What does the color of your eyes mean? Look at me. I knew they were black. If you should ever love—there would be no half way about it.

The Girl—But no one does nowadays. It's not good form. In the twentieth century people will have outgrown such foolishness. Then friendships like ours will be more frequent. It will be a case of mutual—respect and—er—people won't remark it. Why, you have no idea what silly ideas people get sometimes. For instance, they suggest—oh, well, it's too ridiculous!

"LET'S SAY WE ARE ENGAGED."

The Boy—What?

The Girl—That we are engaged! Just fancy! Ha! ha!

The Boy—Ha! ha! But—by Jove—that doesn't seem fair to you!

The Girl—Oh, I don't mind it in the least.

The Boy—But there may be some other chap that—

The Girl—I don't care for anyone in that way! But I never thought that—well, there may be some other girl?

The Boy—No—really—I don't like girls as a rule. You are the only one that I can understand. Do you believe in affinities?

The Girl—I believe in mental magnetism. When I first met you—it seemed as though we had been destined to be friends! Your face—your smile—your manner were all my ideal of what a man should be!

The Boy—And I—when you came into the room—you remember it was at Alice's tea—I said to myself—that is the nicest girl I've ever met!

The Girl—I suppose commonplace people would call it—

The Boy—Exactly—but it's something more than that.

The Girl—You take the other sort of thing—there are so many unpleasant things about it—jealousy, for instance.

The Boy—We might have mistaken the sentiment and imagined we were in love—if your logical way of talking hadn't made me understand that it was a mental affinity.

The Girl—As it is we shall go on and on—forever, just being good friends.

The Boy—But suppose you marry some day—that would spoil everything. I don't suppose your husband would understand—

The Girl—I am quite sure your wife would object! Women are funny that way. Very few girls understand mental love affairs.

The Boy—Oh, I shall never marry. There's only one girl that I like well enough, and she—

The Girl (quickly)—It isn't Alice, is it?

The Boy—Alice! Now, you know better than that. I don't like those mousy looking girls. She's not my style!

The Girl—Alice is a well-meaning girl. How do you like her brother Jack?

The Boy—Good enough sort of a fellow—

The Girl—He used to call last winter. I thought him rather amusing. He tells such funny stories.

The Boy—But light-waisted, don't you think?

The Girl—Oh, I prefer a serious man!

The Boy—If you should marry, what kind of a chap would you pick out?

The Girl—Oh—ha—ha—ha! What an idea!

The Boy—But really! You will have to think about it some day.

The Girl—I shall never marry. The man I might like—well, he doesn't care for me in that way.

The Boy—Doesn't care for you? Well, I like that. He must be a chump. Do I know him?

The Girl—He has charming qualities—more so than any man I know!

The Boy (moodily)—Oh, then, I see—I'm not in it?

The Girl (softly)—Well, there's that girl you care for! After all, a mental love affair may not last any more than the other sort. I suppose I should get jealous—just like any other girl!

The Boy—But there is no other girl but you.

The Girl—Now, you are beginning to make love. Next thing you'll tell me I'm the only girl you ever—

The Boy—I know you've cared for lots of fellows. They accuse you of being something of a flirt—like to play with a chap's heart, and all that. Is it true?

The Girl—Not with a man I could respect.

The Boy—Oh, hang respect! Could you care for me?

The Girl—That way?

The Boy—Oh, there's only one way when you get to it.

The Girl—How can people tell when they're really—

The Boy—Up against it?

The Girl—In love!

The Boy—Oh, you know all right—when it really happens!

The Girl—But people confuse—all sorts of things with love nowadays. Magnetism and mental attraction and—

The Boy—Oh, look here—I didn't ask you for a cold-blooded analysis. I want—

The Girl—What?

The Boy—You!

The Girl—Perhaps you only think you do. Wait a few years, and then we will be sure. Then we may meet some other affinities. Some people have two or three, you know.

The Boy—Oh, say, if it's a joke to you—

The Girl—It's so ordinary to just be in love! A platonic affair is more up to date.

The Boy—I want an answer. You can't play with me. I'm no boy!

The Girl—Ha, ha, ha! I've heard that somewhere before!

The Boy—All right; I'm going.

The Girl—No, wait a minute. It's all new to me.

The Boy—Well, try to absorb the idea and tell me—

The Girl—What?

The Boy—Yes.

The Girl—It seems so funny—

The Boy—Yes, it's much jollier to be engaged.

The Girl—But I never thought it would happen like this.

The Boy—Neither did I. But have you ever thought what fun it would be to stop all the talk?

The Girl—About our being engaged? But how?

The Boy—Dead easy. Announce that we really are.

The Girl—Do you really care?

The Boy—Do I really? Say, does a man talk like this for his health, do you think?

The Girl—It's not a bit like a book or a play, is it?

The Boy—No, this is the real thing.

The Girl—Then we must have been in love from the first?

The Boy—Sure.

The Girl—Why didn't you tell me before?

The Boy—I was afraid you didn't care, and I knew it would break me all up if you didn't. Do you?

The Girl—Everything!

The Boy—Really? You're not jollying me?

The Girl—I've been dying to have you tell me. Ha, ha, ha!

The Boy—Honest? Ha, ha, ha! How long?

The Girl—Ever since!—St. Louis Republic.

How Are Your Nerves?

If they are weak and you feel nervous and easily "flustrated," can't sleep and rise in the morning unrefreshed, your blood is poor. Strong nerves depend upon rich, nourishing blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the nerves strong by enriching and vitalizing the blood. It gives sweet, refreshing sleep and completely cures nervous troubles. Begin taking it today.

Nausea, indigestion are cured by Hood's Pills.

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2.65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit. The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save. If your druggist can't supply you, it will be fowarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup seems especially adapted to the needs of the children. Pleasant to take; soothing in its influence; it is the remedy of all remedies for every form of throat and lung diseases.

Hard to Down a Philosopher.

A playful gust of wind came along and picked off his hat. It was of the straw brand, vintage of 1900, already out of date, although still quite presentable in appearance. That hat just got up on its rim and bowled merrily along the sidewalk, while the usual number of feet and canes were thrust out to check its progress.

"Never mind," called out the owner of the hat, cheerfully, "I'm going that way, anyhow."

So he walked on in the hat's wake without any hurry and overtook it within a block. Then it rolled into a gutter, which was dirty. This would have disconcerted anyone except a philosopher.

"Never mind," said he again, as he gave the hat a careless brush and put it on his head. "I was going to get a new hat to-morrow, anyhow!"—Chicago Tribune.

A Mother.

It rained all day the day she died.
And yet she thought it sweet and fair;
She said the sunlight kissed her hair,
And then she slept, all satisfied.

It rained all day; she woke again.
And whispered that the sky was blue,
Ah, me! thank God, she never knew
How cold and dreary fell the rain.

So like her life! It rained all day,
And yet she thought it all was bright;
She loved and toiled through day and night—
She never thought the skies were gray.

Consideration.

"Christmas is when people show how much they think of one another, isn't it?" said Mrs. Bykins.

"It is," answered her husband, with his characteristic glance of gloom. "It's when all the husbands begin to wear rag-time neckties and smoke rag-weed cigars because they love the giver."—Washington Star.

He Knew She Didn't.

A mountain farmer of New Hampshire, whose wife had died from epilepsy, received a visit of condolence from a neighbor, an eminent physician, who had a summer home in the vicinity. After sympathizing with him on the death of his spouse, the doctor asked regarding the symptoms, concluding with the question:

"Did you ever notice, Mr. Z., whether your wife ground her teeth in sleep?"

"No, no," responded the mountaineer, "I don't think she ever slept in them."—N. Y. Tribune.

HOW TO CARVE A TURKEY.

[From the People's Home Journal.]

Carve only from the side nearest you.

Serve light or dark meat and stuffing, as preferred.

Shave off the breast in thin slices, slanting from the front of the breast bone down toward the wing joint.

Insert the carving fork across the middle of the breast bone. Cut through the skin between the breast and the thigh. Bend the leg over and cut off close to the body and through the joint. Cut through the tip of the shoulder down through the wing joint.

Tip the bird over slightly and with the point of the knife remove the oyster and the small dark part found on the side bone. Then remove the fork from the breast and divide the leg [illegible] the wing. Cut through the skin between the body and breast and with a spoon remove a portion of the stuffing.

The Plant Line will sell Christmas Excursion tickets to Halifax, good going December 22d or 29th and returning within thirty (30) days, at fare one way, viz.—[illegible]. Where He Found It.

He searched for happiness,
  He roamed the whole world over;
He sought it on the mountain top
  And by the sunlit shore.

He searched for happiness
  In cloudy days and fair,
And, wiser grown, turned home, at last,
  And found it waiting there.

A Wonderful Presentation.

"Ben Hur," opens Thursday evening in the new Colonial theatre, where stood the old Boston Public library at Tremont and Boylston streets. The new structure is magnificent; the stage having been built expressly for this presentation is unusually large, affording splendid facilities for the chariot race. In this feature two heavy chariots, each drawn by four galloping horses, are shown in full view of the audience. This effect alone cost $22,000 to produce. The eight full-blooded Arabian horses seen in this race each cost $1,200. Some conception of the magnitude of "Ben Hur" can be gained from the statement that 350 people are employed in the drama, not including about 100 engaged on the stage.

FRANKLIN NEWS IN BRIEF

Latest Local Events and Personal Items of Interest to Readers.

Keep in mind the social at Red Men's hall on New Year's eve.

Lawrence J. Kelley has been drawn as juror for the civil term.

B. W. McCabe is entertaining his mother and cousin, John McCabe, of Glendale.

Miss Mary Hutchinson is home from her studies at Mt. Holyoke for the Christmas vacation.

Supt. McPhee and Principal Doring of the public schools of Woonsocket visited our High school yesterday.

Mrs. Annie L. Stebbins, of the SENTINEL force, starts for Northampton tomorrow to spend Christmas with her sister.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Franklin National bank will be held at the banking rooms on Tuesday, Jan. 8.

The Christian Endeavor social at the Congregational church on Wednesday evening was well attended and very enjoyable.

A goodly number from here attended the confirmation services by Bishop Lawrence at Christ church, Medway, Wednesday evening.

Holy communion will be celebrated Christmas morning at St. John's rectory at 9 o'clock and at Christ church, Medway, at 11 o'clock.

One of the schools in the Thayer school house, School street, was closed Wednesday forenoon on account of the gas from the furnace.

The members of Franklin grange who were the guests of Border grange of East Woonsocket on Wednesday evening report a pleasant and most enjoyable time.

The American Band orchestra will furnish music for the sunlight dance to be given by the Odd Fellows in their hall on Christmas afternoon. Dancing from 3 to 7.

The work of repairing the streets in Bellingham is being carried on by the M. A. & W. The fences are being moved back and railings put up in exposed places.

It is expected that all the machinery in the American Flax and Fiber Co.'s factory in Millis will start up about Jan. 1 and the full number of hands be employed.

Still more improvements in the post office. All of the window casings and other woodwork are to be grained in oak, the walls tinted and otherwise improved.

Next Sunday being the fourth Sunday in Advent, the Christmas sermon at St. John's mission will be preached and the music rendered at the Baptist meeting house the Sunday after Christmas at 3 p. m.

A Sunday school concert of the usual excellence will be given at the Universalist church next Sunday afternoon, at 5 o'clock, many of the children of the Sunday school taking part. There will be music also by the choir.

Clark Bros. machine works has received an order for a dozen picker machines to go to Europe, and the work upon them has begun. This order is probably a result of the exhibit at the Paris exposit[illegible] rs the machine received a gol[illegible]

The Sunday school festival of the Universalist Sunday school will take place Monday evening at Dean gymnasium. An informal good time for the young will be enjoyed and Christmas gifts will be distributed. There will be refreshments for all at 6 o'clock.

Next Monday evening the Farmers' club will close the meetings of the nineteenth century at Irving Trentham's on the Medway road, and consider how to feed and care for cattle so that the milk of the twentieth century shall be better and more plentiful than in the previous hundred years.

Hon. Maurice F. Coughlin, one of Holliston's leading citizens, and a well-known figure in state politics, died very unexpectedly at Fort Gartland, Col., on Wednesday night. He was interested two or three years ago in the removal of the Hughes Harness Co. from Holliston to Franklin, the plan falling through, however.

An electric snowplow of the wedge-shape design, for the Milford, Attleboro & Woonsocket Street railway, arrived Saturday from the manufacturers at Woburn. Another is expected by Monday. This will make six plows for the M. A. & W. and Woonsocket street railways, including one rotary. One plow is being rebuilt into a double trucker at Woonsocket road's shops.

Dr. Eugene E. Everett of 138 Huntington avenue, Boston, son of A. F. Everett of this town, has recently been appointed as instructor in the Harvard Medical school in the bacteriological department. The study of bacteria is in a stage of rapid development and opens up a large field for original research. The young doctor is now beginning to reap the fruits of his long and tedious years of study, and is to be congratulated upon an appointment of so high a degree.

On Thursday evening Gov. Winslow colony, No 84, U. O. P. F., elected the following officers: Governor, E. O. Simonds; lieut. gov., Wm. Dailey; secretary, Laura Lee Whitney; colonel, E. F. Harttmann; treasurer, Frank Jacobs; chaplain, A. G. Bassett; sergt. at arms, Rosa Harttmann; deputy, E. O. Millken; inside sentinel, H. Daniels; outside sentinel, J. D. Hatch; permanent member, Dr. Gallison. The installation will take place the second meeting in January.

Howard Malcom Ticknor, M. A., the well known educational instructor, reader and lecturer, has tendered his services to President Daniels, of the Y. M. C. A., in a very graceful letter, desiring to aid in the work for young men as far as lies in his power. He offers to take charge of classes in English composition, literature, the study of Shakespeare or other authors, and elocution. This is practical and valuable aid, and is fully appreciated by all who are interested in this new movement here.

The S. N. Fiske place was sold at mortgagee's sale on Wednesday afternoon, only a small number of purchasers appearing. Auctioneer Corson officiated, but three or four bids being put in. Judge Doe bid for the Co-operative bank, which held a mortgage for $2,300, and E. H. Rathbun, who held a second mortgage for $1,500, secured the place at $2,600. It is understood that the place cost originally over $6,000, and with some repairs will make a fine residence. What Mr. Rathbun will do with it is not stated.

At the meeting of Griffin court, M. C. O. F., Wednesday evening, the following officers were elected: Chief ranger, M. J. Kearns; vice chief, F. Lemier; rec. secretary, J. A. O'Sullivan; fin. secretary, Philip Doherty; treasurer, Wm. Buckley; senior conductor, Miss Jane Gansy; junior conductor, Eugene Sullivan; inside sentinel, John Lemier; outside sentinel, Frank Browne; trustees, R. Fiorani, Mrs. W. F. Cody, Mrs. Keough; representatives to high court, M. F. Conroy, J. H. Riordan, D. F. O'Sullivan.

George Champiguy was badly burned about the hands and face on Tuesday evening. He is employed as porter at the Hotel Windsor, and in attempting to to revive a low fire in the furnace he threw on some kerosene. Instantly a mass of flame poured out, enveloping him and setting his clothes on fire. The explosion was heard by a guest who hurried to his aid and put out the flames, but not until he had been seriously burned. Dr. Martin dressed his wounds and he was sent to a Woonsocket hospital for treatment. It was a narrow escape and illustrates the foolishness of using kerosene upon a live fire.

Stetson's "Uncle Tom's Cabin"

Is the title of a really big company, which, under, under the personal management of Leon Washburn, whose name is most favorably associated with up-to-date amusements, is to appear at the Opera house next Wednesday evening.

The company comprises fifty people, including a dozen specialty artists, two quartets, a superb orchestra and many colored comedians, who add to the big production not a little, by their spontaneous wit and clever singing and dancing. Watch for the big parade.

A finely printed program, with an original hymn by the pastor, has been arranged for Christmas Sunday at the Baptist church. The following music will be rendered in the forenoon: Anthem, "Glory to God in the Highest;" duet, "Mother's Bible;" solo, "Bethlehem." Rev. F. B. Sleeper's sermon will be on "Christ, the Wonderful." In the evening there will be a concert, for which special preparation has been made and that promises to be exceedingly interesting. The Christmas tree will be in the vestry next Tuesday evening, the exercises beginning at 6.30. A fine cantata, "The New Santa Claus," will be given.

John Kingsley, who was sent to Dedham for trial on charge of larceny of a dog about two months ago, was acquitted on Tuesday. He plead his own case, questioning his witnesses, etc. This was nothing new to him, as he has done so before. The court room derived no little amusement out of the case. The judge's charge was in the main favorable to the prisoner. Kingsley describes the food at the jail as "something fierce," especially to a man who has not been convicted, but is simply waiting trial. Any infraction of the rules will deprive a prisoner of his meals. Kingsley gained in flesh, however, and does not look as if his boarding at the expense of the state disagreed with him in the least.

Forefathers' Day.

There was a large attendance at the observance of Forefathers' day at the Horace Mann school Thursday from 12 to 1 o'clock, every seat being taken. There were fine exercises by the scholars, including the singing of Mrs. Heman's hymn. Rev. F. B. Sleeper gave the historic address. He clearly and graphically pictured the religious intolerances and persecution known in England 300 years ago. His description of the reign of Henry VIII, Queen Elizabeth and James I was comprehensive, true to facts and suggestive.

He showed the condition of the Puritans and Pilgrims, often thrown into prison dungeons and losing their lives for conscience sake. He traced the history of the Pilgrims in their twelve years' stay in Holland, then coming to America, and their wonderful devotion to the cause of religious liberty. The Puritans in Boston were intolerant. They believed in the union of church and state. They claimed the right to dictate a man's religious belief, and to punish him even unto death if he rebelled.

The Pilgrims maintained the opposite of this, that a person is responsible only to his God for his religious creed, and that heresy is not a crime to be punished by the law of the land. The spiritual liberality of the Pilgrims was illustrated in many ways in their dealings with Catholics, Baptists and infidels. They believed that "more light still is to break forth from the Word of God" and this shall settle all vexed religious questions.

The scholars gave close attention to the historic address. Both the superintendent of schools and the principal of the High school in Woonsocket were present.

The following is the program: Song, double quartet; reading, Arthur Stewart; recitation, Genevieve Allen; reading, "Robinson of Leyden," George Estey; reading, "Plymouth Rock," Linna Ferrer; address, Rev. Frank Sleeper; song, "The Pilgrim Fathers," school.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

A good address may be expected at the association rooms next Sunday at 4 p. m. Mrs. C. L. Stewart will sing a solo. All men are invited.

Plans are being made for a game of basket ball Saturday evening of this week between the Y. M. C. A. team of Hyde Park and the local association team.

Secretary W. D. Fellows of the Fall River association, who spoke here so acceptably on Y. M. C. A. Sunday, has been engaged to deliver the address at the midwinter meeting of the Norfolk Union of the Y. P. S. C. E., which will be held at Medfield Feb. 22. No doubt many from Franklin will attend.

Dwight L. Rogers, one of the secretaries of the executive committee of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, was in town yesterday to inspect the home of the local association. He expressed his surprise at finding such complete quarters in a town like Franklin, and said: "Many an association in towns twice as large as Franklin is not half as well equipped, and surely the citizens should appreciate it."

Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar.

Charles E. Hudson can accommodate three or four more pupils. Call for particulars at office of P. A. Woodward, Dana block, on Friday evenings, between 7 and 9.

A Waterman fountain pen makes a very useful Christmas present and one that would be appreciated by almost any one. A good assortment of these pens may be seen by applying to Charles L. Stewart, at Benj. Franklin Savings bank, or at Y. M. C. A. rooms.

Let us supply you with Christmas niceties from our bakery. Fairfield.

Is Christ Divided?

On last Sabbath morning Dr. Sneath addressed his people upon Paul's question "Is Christ Divided?" found in 1 Cor. 1: 13. The church in Corinth was divided into factions and Paul pleads for unity. That unity has not yet come in the Christian church. We are not to strive so much for unity or uniformity as for nearness to Christ. The mother of St. Chas. Reid drew a circle with Christ at the centre and the different sects at the ends of radiating lines drawn from the centre to the circumference. The nearer the denominations come to Christ, the nearer will they come to one another.

The Christ is divided today with reference to His personality. There are a minority of the church who hold to His humanity alone. Jesus is only a man. God filled His life with Himself, but after all He is simply a man. "Judas and Jesus are both new." The great majority of Christendom believe that Jesus Christ is God. The deity of Christ is the undeniable teaching of the scriptures, philosophical criticism to the contrary notwithstanding.

The Christ is furthermore divided as to his authority. It is claimed by certain teachers that Jesus is authoritative in the realm of morals but not in that of thought. His teachings upon character and conduct are correct, but His "thoughts and convictions in regard to God and the sons and the future life are mere fallacies and illusions." Such a division is untenable, against the testimony of scripture and the experience of men. Christ's words concerning God, the future and its conditions are as sure as those concerning the present life.

Pleasure and Profit.

The Christmas bazaar under the enterprise of the Ladies' Circle of the Universalist church, which opened in Central Square hall yesterday, is a very pleasant affair. The hall is attractive and the various tables add to the general aspect the invitingness of grace and color. One table, we observe, was under the direction of the Junior Y. P. C. U.; another the Y. P. C. U. itself looked after. One booth displayed some very fine samples of lace work and a very beautiful late scarf was drawn last evening. Beautiful handkerchiefs were also on sale at the table.

At the fancy table, besides other articles of merit, is a very handsome afghan, which is being sold by a coperative plan and will be awarded tonight. Home-made confectionery of a most superior quality is dispensed at reasonable prices. The doll table appears to draw the attention of all, young and old alike. The domestic table shows ingenuity in discerning the wants of the public, and had some goods of such novelty and value that they went last evening like hot cakes, without any dyspeptic consequences.

A fine musical programme was rendered last evening, Messrs. Sherman and Hartshorne and Misses Adams and Proctor taking part, and Dr Hodge read James Whitcomb Riley's "Home Agin'" and a selection from "Eben Holden." The supper tables were all occupied at 6 30 and a substantial meal was served. This evening light refreshments only will be served and a different programme will be rendered.

An Interesting Occasion.

A large number of people attended the confirmation services in Christ Episcopal church, Medway, Wednesday evening, by Bishop Lawrence of Boston, assisted by the pastor of the church, Rev. Guy Miner, and also by the boys' choir of St. Andrew's chapel of Woonsocket. The procession, including the bishop, clergymen and the boy choir, was formed in the vestry, and marched down the main aisle to the pulpit, where a hymn was sung, followed by "The Gospel," by Rev. Guy Miner, followed by a prayer by the congregation. Next was the presentation of the eight persons to be confirmed. Two were from Franklin, three from Medfield and three from Medway. Next was the Lord's prayer, followed by a blessing of those to be confirmed by the bishop. Bishop Lawrence then congratulated the people on having a new parish house, which will soon be finished, and he showed the advantages of a parish house. The services concluded with a hymn by the congregation.

A Fine Show Tonight.

Concerning Culhane, Chace & Weston's minstrels, which show here this evening, an exchange says: "A large and enthusiastic audience greeted Culhane, Chace & Weston's minstrels last night, caused, no doubt, by the great street parade and the excellence of the band. It was the company's first appearance here and they captured the large audience from the start. The program is an innovation in the minstrel line, bright and snappy. The first part is profuse in good things in the way of comedy, singing and dancing. A strong olio made up of some strong novelty acts, the three St. Felix sisters deserving especial mention. It is one of the very best companies that have visited here this summer.

For the Christmas Table.

Look into our show windows Saturday and Monday and see our live Belgian hares, the property of Frank Searle. They are just the thing now. We have secured a choice lot of birds for Christmas. Many who purchased of us Thanksgiving have also ordered again, but still there are others. Our selected turkeys and chicks range from 15 to 18 cents; we shall also have some fine geese. Our line of meats was selected especially for this occasion and includes the best of beef, lamb veal, pork, sausage, with vegetables, such as sweet potatoes, celery, lettuce, turnips, parsnips, parsley, table squash, etc., with canned soups of all flavors; creamery butter, fine cheese, etc., at Emerson's

Christmas Suggestions.

A Christmas gift should be a serviceable one. What can be given of more value than something dainty in the imported neckwear line? What about silk suspenders, initial silk handkerchiefs, an up to date collar, linen cuffs that will stand the laundry man?

Your husband would appreciate a nice smoking jacket, not too fine to wear about the house, and not too cheap looking, either. We have just the thing. Your son would find plenty of uses for a nice dress suit case, which are becoming absolute necessities. Our prices and styles are right. A mackintosh is always a useful thing to have, and is money well expended if you buy a good one. Those are just what we have.

Then the little boy. He may have sleds, skates, toys, candy, etc., but he's got to have clothing, and that's what we're here for. Our boys' line can't be beaten here or elsewhere, including reefers, overcoats and complete suits, at prices never before quoted here for the same quality of goods.

Why not surprise yourself by selecting a Christmas present for yourself from our stock. We were never so well prepared to give you your money's worth as this year. Good clothing bought right is an actual saving of money; cheap goods are the most expensive you can buy. We have solved the problem of giving you the best goods at about the price of cheap ones. Let us prove that.

Our store is filled from top to bottom with goods that will sell. You can look, even if you do not buy. Glance at our show windows and see if there is not something there you need. We shall be open every evening, and will give you every attention. Our store is the largest, carries the most complete stock, and for quality of goods we cannot be undersold by dealers here or in Providence.

Our Christmas Menu.

We have carefully selected our turkeys for the holidays and can shade them a trifle over the Thanksgiving price, only 18c.; geese 18c., fowls and chicks 15 to 18c. Then we have premium lamb, home-dressed pork, home made sausage, fine heavy beef, Jersey sweet potatoes, squash, turnips, white and yellow; parsley, spinach, lettuce, Boston market celery, plain and sage cheese, choice pickles, best butter in town, five pounds for $1.35 and $1.55. Try our line of soups with your Christmas dinner; just the thing for an appetizer. Richardson, the marketman.

Woonsocket Opera House.

"The Village Parson," which appears Christmas afternoon and night, is not only a well told story, but a succession of impressive situations, which succeed in arousing the audience to great excitement. The resources of the scenic artists have been drawn upon to a great extent, and with success. The cast is strong. The incidents are deeply affecting, the simple yet absorbing theme of a woman's love, rendered supremest in adversity, touches a tender chord in the human heart. All complications are cleared up in the end in the orthodox fashion, and the virtuous are restored and the vicious punished. Seats go on sale Friday, Dec. 20

Culhane, Chase & Weston's Minstrels.

The above famous organization of thirty (all white) performers will make their first annual appearance at the Opera house tonight, presenting one of the largest and most expensive minstrel companies on the road, including W. H. Chace, Daley & Osborne, the Imperial Four, the Tossing Austins, LaVardo, Monroe & Daley, Bobby DeRue and 25 others. As a special feature for this season the famous three St. Felix sisters have been re-engaged and will be seen in one of the best black face singing and dancing acts now before the public. The entire company appear in black face, including the grand orchestra of 14 soloists. One of the finest street parades ever seen in this town was given by the company this morning.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1900

Little has been said, and probably as little thought, of the beneficent work done by the railroads in [illegible] and promoting the measures set on foot for the relief of stricken Galveston. Thousands of refugees from that city received free transportation to any part of the country, and immense quantities of supplies were rushed forward without charge. This ready response to the cry of human needs characterized all the great railway systems of the country, the express, telegraph and telephone companies. The cash value of the services thus rendered is as impossible to estimate as the amount of human suffering and misery they helped to alleviate.

A facetious paragraph-writer suggests that it will soon be necessary for some one to start a daily geography in order to keep up with the changes going on in the world. He might with as much justification have said that we need a daily history, or a daily text-book in natural philosophy, for the same reason. Events now move so rapidly that any book of information gets out of date much more quickly than at any other period in the world's history. For the present, however, it will be the daily lesson in geography rather than the daily geography that will chiefly concern the rising generation.

In an article on the closing century a writer in World's Work truly says: "Although it has been the century of the widest conquest, it has been the century also of the greatest toleration, of the keenest human sympathy the most active helpfulness, in an era of action and of freedom, man has become a brother to man as be never became in eras of meditation and authority. It has been the century of heroic fact finding, the century of the emancipation of thought from mystery and dogma, and of the yielding of precedent to experience."

Ex-Queen Liliuokalani recently gave evidence of graceful submission to the inevitable. It was the occasion of her sixty-second birthday, and a large number of natives had gathered at her home to pay their respects. As the band struck up "The Star Spangled Banner," the queen arose from her seat and remained standing during the playing, but when the Hawaiian national anthem was given she kept her seat. It was her way of showing the people that the national hymn of the United States must now be the recognized one of Hawaii.

According to a local report Judge Ferris, of Cincinnati, is dissatisfied with the present summary methods of converting aliens into adopted citizens. He says: "I'm going to make this ceremony more impressive. The mere act of swearing in these people makes no impression on them. I shall procure an American flag, and every male candidate for citizenship will have to kneel and kiss its folds. I want to make it one of the most important acts of their lives. I want them to tingle down to their toes when they hear our national airs."

The aggregate investments of the United States life insurance companies exceed $1,200,000,000. This would suffice to pay the national debt, and the debts of several states besides; but it is more pleasing, somehow, to think of the private burdens which, distributed widely and in comparatively small amounts, this great fund will remove. Uncle Sam is neither a widow nor an orphan.

The growth of grass that comes in a long, mild, moderately rainy autumn is said to be far more nutritious for cattle than the spring grass. It is richer.

There's an old and reliable cure:

Ayer's Pills

Don't take a cathartic dose and then stop. Better take a laxative dose each night, just enough to cause one good free movement the day following.

You feel better the very next day. Your appetite returns, your dyspepsia is cured, your headaches pass away, your tongue clears up, your liver acts well, and your bowels no longer give you trouble.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

Present Your Friends with Some Token of Your Love, However Small It May Be.

Once more the happy season of the year is at hand, when we begin to prepare gifts of love for Christmas. It is indeed a pleasing indication of the rapid spread of feelings of kindness and good will throughout the world that the preparation of beautiful articles for Christmas gifts affects the industries of all civilized nations. The choice of articles for Christmas gifts is a perplexing pleasure. According to Emerson, articles of beauty rather than of use are appropriate for gifts. In giving we have to avoid, on the one hand, the imposing of a sense of obligation, and, on the other, of making the discharge of a just obligation the occasion for assuming to ourselves the role of benefactor. The donation party given at Christmas to the faithful pastor whose past due salary is unpaid is only an unfair method of making him appear the recipient of a favor, while his just claims are disregarded. Nor can we refrain from suggesting to the husband and father: Do not make a Christmas gift to your wife of a new carpet or a pair of shoes or a cooking stove, for she needs and has a right to these things anyway. Your little boy needs a new schoolbook for the next session of school, but he would probably experience a sense of wrong which it would be difficult for him to explain if he should find it in his stocking on Christmas morning. And we may suggest as an idea wholly foreign to Emerson that if the husband and father has from negligence or penuriousness failed to provide his wife with a good supply of dry, well-cut wood or fuel for the kitchen stove, or the needed quantity of winter flannels, it would be equally inappropriate for him to present her with a pair of big pink glass flower vases or some similar article, the price of which might have added vastly to her comfort had the money been placed for spending in her own hands.

Gifts for children depend but little on their value for the pleasure they shall give. A houseful of children can be made entirely happy by a quarter's worth of mixed candy placed in their stockings, each piece of candy being wrapped in a separate paper, thus multiplying the number of gifts. It is very important, however, that the gifts be put in their stockings. The sweet illusion adds a priceless value to the veriest trifles.

And so we feel like saying to ourselves and to our readers: Let us prepare for a merry happy Christmas; let us forget for a little while all the environments of our lives that are sad and depressing; let us think of the treasures we possess that "man did not make and cannot mar;" let us give tokens of love to our friends though it should be only a geranium leaf or a rosy cheeked apple. Let us celebrate Christmas. The yoke loosened and laid aside for a little will give rest and strength to the shoulders; the affection of the heart called into play and indulged will give strength to our soul; and both will fit us for a better performance of the duties and work appointed for us in the coming New Year.—Chicago Interior.

SOME CHRISTMAS GIFTS

By Elisa Armstrong

"WHEN you give a Christmas p[illegible] [illegible] there is everything in [illegible] [illegible] suitable," remarked Mrs. Wilder. You agree with me in that, don't you, Tom?"

"M'hm," replied Mr. Wilder, who had been married 20 years. He did not for an instant detach his mind from his paper, as he gave this positive assurance.

"Yes, indeed, when I go selecting Christmas presents I put my whole mind upon it. No haphazard, [illegible] promiscuous buying for me! I select something which is sure to please the recipient, because [illegible] something which she really wants. Now there is Laura, she is near-sighted, you know, and I bought her a lovely [illegible] opera glasses. She will be so pleased with them that she will send me something [illegible] expensive in return."

"M'hm," replied Mr. Wilder, without looking up from his paper.

"I thought you would agree with me [illegible] Suzanne. I have sent her a [illegible] kitchen aprons, with pockets [illegible] [illegible] the heart [illegible] house[illegible]. As for Effie, I have, after [illegible] thought, selected her a beautiful umbrella with a handle which will exactly suit her taste. I shall expect something very nice from both of them, if only in return for my thoughtfulness."

"M'hm," replied Mr. Wilder, as he turned a page.

"Yes, and then there is Helen. I thought a great deal over her present. As she is a settled old maid and lives alone, it was hard to find something sure to please her. Finally I thought of a cat and got her a lovely Angora; wasn't it thoughtful of me? Of course, she will never marry and a cat is almost as good as a man about the house. [illegible] them are difficult to please about [illegible] and so hard to keep in the house [illegible]!"

"M'hm," replied Mr. Wilder, as he ran his eye down a column.

"Yes, and I sent them all out by a messenger [illegible] hour [illegible]. Here he comes back w[illegible] great trade, I know, because [illegible] was suitable. Oh, Tom, listen!

"'Dear Maria: Thank you so much for the lovely opera glasses you so thoughtfully sent me. They will no doubt be exceedingly useful when we no longer live in a suburb which is inaccessible after ten p. m.

"'LAURA.'

"Well, that is merely an accident, and the rest of my presents are so suitable that—oh, Tom!"

"'Dear Aunt: It was lovely of you to send me those beautiful kitchen aprons. They are the admiration of every woman in the boarding house where I live.

"'SUZANNE.'

"Oh, dear, I quite forgot that she is boarding; but the rest—Tom!

"'Dear Maria: It was very kind of you to send me such a lovely umbrella. I shall no doubt find it extremely useful as a rainy day companion when I have sufficiently recovered from the rheumatism to venture out when there is a cloud in the sky.

"'EFFIE.'

"Oh, my goodness, but there is Helen left. Surely her present—listen:

"'My Dear Maria: I appreciate your kindness in sending me such a lovely cat, but as I am about to marry a widower with seven children I fear that I shall not very well know what to do with it. Yours, lovingly,

"'HELEN.'

"Oh, Tom, isn't it aw—look here, Tom Wilder, I don't believe you have heard a single word of what I have been saying!"

"M'hm," replied Mr. Wilder, without looking up from his paper.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

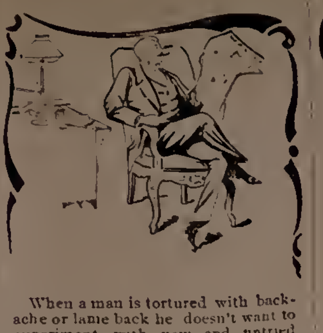
"He That Any Good Would Win"

Should have good health. Pure, rich blood is the first requisite. Hood's Sarsaparilla, by giving good blood and good health, has helped many a man to success, besides giving strength and courage to women who, before taking it, could not even see any good in life to win.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints



When a man is tortured with backache or lame back he doesn't want to experiment with new and untried remedies.

He realizes that the backache is kidney ache.

The lame back virtually means lame kidneys, and he knows that there's very serious trouble in store if he doesn't get his kidneys to do their duty. In his trouble he naturally turns to

Doan's Kidney Pills

Others all around him have been cured of kidney complaint by this wonderful little remedy. He has the testimony of others to guide him. He KNOWS that Doan's Kidney Pills WILL cure, no matter what form of kidney complaint he may have.

He learns this by reading emphatic evidence like the following:

Mr. H. J. Woodbury, carpenter, of 7 South Chestnut street, Augusta, Me., says:

"I was interviewed in the spring of 1896 by a gentleman who asked me for my experience with and opinions of Doan's Kidney Pills. I told him that I had been greatly annoyed by the action of my Kidneys, that the slightest cold always settled there and produced intense suffering, and that Doan's Kidney Pills had cured me. It is now two years and a half since I was first interviewed, and I can conscientiously say, the longer and more fully you know Doan's Kidney Pills the greater faith you have in them. Everyone, as far as I have heard, speaks in the highest terms of their great value."

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N.Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no substitute.

CHRISTMAS SONG.

Oh, bells that chime your sweetest!
  Oh, world of glistening white!
Oh, breezes blithely bringing
  A message of delight!
From leafless hill and valley
  But one refrain I hear:
"A merry, merry Christmas
  And a glad New Year!"

From humble home and palace
  The kindly voice is breathed,
From forest arch and pillar,
  And meadows snowy wreathed,
An echo from the angels,
  A pæan of good cheer,
Hark! "Merry, merry Christmas
  And a glad New Year!"

Oh, light of heavenly gladness
  That falls upon the earth!
Oh rapture of thanksgiving
  That tells the Saviour's birth!
The golden links of kindness
  Bring heart to heart more near,
With "a merry, merry Christmas
  And a glad New Year!"
—George Cooper, in Golden Days.

A Christmas Mamma

By M. B. Bell.

It was one of those dreary afternoons in November. The rain had fallen steadily all day, and Roland and Esther Grahm, two motherless little children, were curled up on the rug in front of the library fire, looking at the picture book.

Their nurse, who was a kind-hearted woman, had frequently explained the stories in the book to them. And now, with their little heads bent down over the page, they were looking at the picture of two little girls in bed, while a woman with a gentle, motherly face, was tucking them in. Nurse had told the children a long story about this picture, what dear little ones they were, and how loving and kind their mother was to them.

"I wish we had a mother to tuck us in and talk to us when the rainy days come, and we can't go out," said Roland, sitting up straight and pushing the book away from him wearily.

"I'm tired looking at picture mothers. Christmas is soon coming, and I'm going to pray and ask God to send us a real mother, what we can talk to. Then, oh! maybe papa will buy us a mother if we give him the money."

"I'se got no money," said little Esther. "I spent it all for Mary Jane, and now she's broke and you'll have all the new mamma and Essie'll be so lonesome," and the little girl began to cry.

"Oh, Essie, what you crying for? I haven't any more money than you have, but I thought God wouldn't care if this year we bought a mamma with our Christmas money, 'cause we's just as poor without a mamma as those poor children."

Mr. Grahm was a little later than usual that evening, and somehow forgot to send for the little ones; but sat before the fire thinking of Dora Lynhurst, a little girl he had known in his boyhood, and to whom he had once been engaged, but a misunderstanding had separated them, and he had afterward married a slight, delicate girl, who, dying the third year after their marriage, had left him with the care of their two children.

That morning an old friend had told him that Dora, who had never married, but had been abroad several years, had at last returned, and he felt an intense desire to see her again. It was with a strong feeling of self-reproach that he sprang from his chair when he heard the little ones at the door, and with more than his usual warmth he greeted them, for they were very dear to him.

Mr. Grahm saw at once that something was on their little minds. "What is it, Roland?" he asked, drawing the little fellow to him. "You and Esther look as though you had something to ask me."

"Yes, papa, we want you to please buy us a mamma for Christmas."

"Why, isn't your father enough, little chicks?"

"Oh! yes, papa, but Essie and I thought, if instead of putting our money in the envelopes this year we gave it to you, you might buy us a mother to tuck us in bed at night and talk to us when you are out."

"'Cause we're dreadful lonesome at times," chimed in Esther.

The tears came to the father's eyes in spite of himself at his children's strange request, and he thought if Dora had grown to be as sweet a woman as she bade fair to be she would be the very mother these little children so earnestly longed for.

"Here's the money," said Esther, pressing up closely against her father and putting the coins into his hand. "If you have any more you can just give them to the poor children."

Mr. Grahm could not repress the smile that came to his lips at the children's idea of the value of a few pennies they had saved. "Well, little ones, you run off to bed now, and after supper I will go out and try to find her."

Mr. Grahm must have found it rather difficult to find the mother. At any rate, it took him out very often, and finally he told the children that if they wanted a mother he would have to go away for a few days. The children consented reluctantly, "because it would be more lonesome than ever without papa, and mothers seemed dreadful hard things to buy," Roland confided to Esther.

"Papa will not be away so long, after all," Roland cried with delight when on arising the day before Christmas he found a telegram from papa announcing that he and mamma would be home that evening at seven o'clock. For Dora had refused to be away longer, saying that "if she was to be a Christmas present she must be home in time."

Seven o'clock came, but the train was delayed, and it was past ten before Mr. Grahm and his wife reached home. Opening the door quietly, so as not to arouse the servants, who had given up looking for their master until the morrow, Mr. Grahm stepped into the library, where the light had been left burning. Going over to the fire, in front of which stood a large chair, he stopped in surprise, and a look of tenderness came into his eyes.

"Dora, look, they have waited for their mamma," he said to his wife, who had followed him, and now stood looking down on the two little children in their night robes, curled up in the chair with their arms around one another, fast asleep. They had been put to bed, but, feeling that if papa said he would come he would surely be there, they had slipped out of bed and down into the library, where they had waited until exhausted. Then, settling themselves in the chair, they had told one another they would just shut their eyes to rest them, but they would be sure not to go to sleep.

"Poor little darlings!" Dora exclaimed, leaning down over them, while her eyes filled with tears. "You shall never be lonely again if I can prevent it." Gathering the little girl up in her arms, Dora followed her husband, who had taken the boy, upstairs, and placing the child on the bed tucked her carefully in, then kissing the little one good night she went over to the boy's bed. "What a splendid looking child," she said, "so like my husband. Good night, my little man," she whispered, kissing the childish lips. Then, turning to her husband, she said: "God grant that your choice of a mother for your little ones be not in vain." And had you seen the look of happiness on the children's faces as they took their places in church the next morning, between their parents, you would say it had not been in vain.—The Evangelist.

A Few Words about Pain-Killer

A prominent Montreal clergyman, the Rev. James H. Dixon, Rector St. Judes and Hon. Canon of Christ Church Cathedral, writes:—"Permit me to send you a few lines to strongly recommend Perry Davis' Pain-Killer. I have used it with satisfaction for thirty-five years. It is a preparation which deserves full public confidence."

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation," were the startling words heard by Mrs. I. B. Hunt of Lime Ridge, Wis., from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. Gall stones had formed and she constantly grew worse. Then she began to use Electric Bitters, which wholly cured her. It's a wonderful stomach, liver and kidney remedy. Cures dyspepsia, loss of appetite. Try it. Only 50 cts. Guaranteed. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

"Confidentially," said the undertaker's wife, "Mr. Smith hasn't paid the bill for his wife's funeral yet."

"Isn't that scandalous?" exclaimed Mrs. Gabble. "I should think he'd be ashamed to let people see how little he thought of his wife."

"Yes, and his brother John, when his wife was buried, paid the very next day."

"Huh! Looked as if he was glad to get rid of her, didn't it?"—N. Y. World.

Retort Courteous.

"Really—er—" stammered the gossip, who had been caught red-handed. "I'm afraid you overheard what I said about you. Perhaps—er—I was a bit too severe—"

"Oh, no," replied the other woman, "you weren't nearly as severe as you would have been if you knew what I think of you."—Philadelphia Press.

MISTLETOE MAGIC

By Frank B. Welch.

UNDER the mistletoe branch at play
  In years long gone, on a Christmas day,
  A lad and lassie, with stolen kiss,
Imbibed the sweets of ecstatic bliss.

Later in life when the years had flown
And youth and maiden had wiser grown
Again they met on a Christmas day
But not as children, in careless way.

Mistletoe hung in the chandelier,
Mischievous eyes were in hiding near,
Watching the lassies who danced about—
And kisses were captured with laugh and shout

Into the frolic a baby strayed,
Toddling about, not at all afraid,
And, as it happened,
  the tiny tot
Paused right upon the mistletoe spot.

Forth to the rescue a maiden came,
Seizing the wee one a kiss to claim,
And for a moment she lingered there
Holding the babe to her cheek so fair

Then to her side with a bound there came
A laughing youth, with his face aflame
On her lips an eager
  kiss he pressed,
And maid and babe with his arms caressed.

'Twas lad and lass of the bygone day
Who long had loved in a bashful way,
And there was renewed their childhood's truth
With looks that spoke from the hearts of both.

The Plumber's Portion.

Mr. Hardhit—Well, the worst has come at last—I've decided to mortgage our little home.

The Wife—Oh, John, you don't mean—

Mr. Hardhit—I only mean that the plumber sent me his bill this morning.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

A Great Saving.

Fair Customer—Are you sure this sticky paper will catch flies?

Dealer—Yes, indeed, mum. I sold half a dozen sheets to a boarding house keeper yesterday, and in two hours she caught enough for a huckleberry pie.—N. Y. Weekly.

The best that money can buy should be your aim in choosing a medicine, and this is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It cures when others fail.

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2.65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit. The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save. If your druggist can't supply you, it will be fowarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

The Worm Turned.

Mrs. Cobwigger—While it's true that women wear men's neckties, you surely couldn't expect me to appear in public in such a monstrosity as this. Where in the world did you ever get such a tie?

Cobwigger—My dear, that's the one you bought for me last Christmas.—Judge.

Consumption

is destruction of lung by a growing germ, precisely as mouldy cheese is destruction of cheese by a growing germ.

If you kill the germ, you stop the consumption. You can or can't, according to when you begin.

Take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil: take a little at first.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other.

It acts as a food; it is the easiest food. Seems not to be food; makes you hungry; eating is comfortable. You grow stronger. Take more; not too much; enough is as much as you like and agrees with you. Satisfy hunger with usual food; whatever you like and agrees with you.

When you are strong again, have recovered your strength—the germs are dead; you have killed them.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

OF CURRENT INTEREST.

Probably 10,[illegible] people lost kindred in the Texas calamity.

One of the new things in the jewelry line this season is the introduction of delicately-carved ivory into the bits of filigree work with which women delight to adorn their costumes.

The prevailing gray hat has come to be accepted as the invariable symbol of the autumn and has maintained its popularity for a surprisingly long time in New York, where fashions change so rapidly.

During the Galveston storm two women were carried out into the gulf where they spent Saturday night. Not till the next morning did the tide bring them back to where the rescuing parties could reach them.

The truant officer of West Newton, Mass., whose duty it is to apprehend children of school age who absent themselves from their class rooms without an excuse, is rejoicing because the golf season has opened at the well-known [illegible] Brae-Burn course. It seems that about 150 players congregate there daily, and almost as many schoolboys gather about the clubhouse in search of employment as caddies. Instead of going from house to house in pursuit of truants the truant officer is now enabled to swoop in nearly all the delinquents at one fell swoop by a daily visit to the golf links.

The fruit crop in Switzerland is the best that has been known for the last 30 years. For want of pickers most of the cherries were left to rot on the trees.

Pompons made of cock's feathers.

Sealskin purses and pocket books.

Umbrellas with handles of Dresden china splashed with gold.

Sash and belt clasps in finely cut steel and gilt; also in old [illegible].

Taffeta silks of very fine quality in Japanese designs which are very odd.

Buttons in gilt metal and imitation jewels made in star and diamond shapes.

Umbrellas in plain taffeta silks, with mother-of-pearl handles trimmed with silver.

Children's coats made of smooth-faced goods, with three small capes and Pingat sleeve.

Belt buckles of fine gilt metal, with raised figures of eagles on each side and the bust of Napoleon in the center.

Ladies' hosiery in fine lisle thread embroidered on the instep with bouquet of red carnations tied with blue love-knots.

Felt hats with a band of gold braid around the crown, braid of same width edging the flaring velvet bows placed in front.

Bric-a-brac of cameo ware on a surface of sage green, which gives a most pleasing effect, making the cameo stand out in bold relief.

Waists, in combination with bolero, of cotton flannel, trimmed with 1½ inch bands of taffeta silk in color to correspond with the dot, and stitched tailor fashion.

FRANKLIN NEWS IN BRIEF

Latest Local Events and Personal Items of Interest to Readers.

We publish a day earlier on account of the holiday.

Dr. Randall's family are at Pittsfield for Christmas.

O. S. Stetson, Jr., is home from Dartmouth for the holidays.

Fred V. Hussey is home from New York for the holidays.

James Hood and Dean Chilson are home from Tufts college.

Capt. E. E. Paine and family have gone to Wellfleet for Christmas.

Frank Moore of West street spent Sunday with relatives in Worcester.

Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Crowley will spend Christmas at Dartmouth, N. H.

Miss Grace Whiting is enjoying the holidays at her home in Worcester.

The mothers' section will meet Friday afternoon with Mrs. B. M. Rockwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Blake are home from South Framingham for Christmas.

E. C. Craig is spending his Christmas holidays at home freed from educational cares.

Miss Maggie J. Nevins of Union street went to her home in Lawrence Saturday to remain until Wednesday.

Mrs. Emma DeWar and daughter of Unionville are spending the holidays with her parents at Amherst.

Miss Mary Nelson of Arlington street, who teaches school at Mechanicsville, Conn., is home for the holidays.

Culhane, Chase & Weston's minstrels appeared to a fair house on Friday evening, giving a very meritorious show.

There will be "A Breezy Time" in Franklin January 4, when Fritz & Webster will appear at the Opera house.

The Belgian hares in Emerson's window have been attracting a good deal of attention, many never having seen the breed before.

The annual election of officers of Norfolk lodge No. 257, N. E. O. P., will take place Wednesday evening, Dec. 26. All members should be present.

A. M. Thayer of this place, William J. Whiting of New York and A. C. Messler of Pawtucket were last week elected directors of the Henson Creek lead mines.

F. E. Dudley and his men go to Medway next week to put the roof on the parish house of the Medway Episcopal society and perhaps complete the interior.

The Methodist church will hold its annual Christmas concert and tree at the church tomorrow evening at 7 o'clock, and the little ones are waiting with eager anticipation.

Those who desire to secure course tickets to the three remaining entertainments at the Congregational church can do so by applying at Mr. Nye's and paying 75 cents, thus effecting a saving of 30 cents.

Coal gas in the schoolrooms of the Thayer schoolhouse is an unsettled problem, and an effort will be made during the vacation to make temporary repairs to the furnaces so they can be used until spring.

Citizens of Massachusetts who desire pure politics will feel somewhat encouraged by the action of the courts in the illegal naturalization cases at Boston. As a result the seat of one member of the legislature is vacant.

Evangelistic services will be commenced at the Methodist church on Wednesday evening of this week by the pastor of the church, Rev Mr Cook, assisted by Rev. J. M. Newton of Louisville, Ky., and will be continued a number of weeks.

R. B. Stewart and J. D. Hatch have just turned out a fine four horse team for E. S. Cook. Mr. Cook, by the way, has purchased the wood upon the "Long hill," in the Baker pasture, in the rear of "Villa Gallison," and is going to cut it off this winter.

The hearing on the Stain and Cromwell petition for pardon from the Maine state prison is occupying large space in the newspapers this week, and as several of the witnesses are from this vicinity and Stain was arrested here, the case is exciting interest in town.

The Congregational Sunday school will enjoy its annual Christmas tree at the church on Tuesday evening. The younger members of the school will assemble for the presents and refreshments at 6 o'clock and the older ones at 7, when an entertainment will be enjoyed.

No special business was transacted at the meeting of the selectmen Friday evening. Road matters were discussed and several complaints heard. The chairman, Dr. J. C. Gallison, is not yet able to be out, and the business in hand was attended to by Messrs. Clark and McCarthy.

Joseph Bourbeau, overseer in the finishing room, and Fred Ahrens, overseer in the weave room, each received substantial gifts from the employees in these two departments at Hayward's mill on Saturday, Mr. Bourbeau being presented with a couch and picture of St. Cecelia, while Mr. Ahrens received a Morris chair and meerschaum pipe.

A number of the local lodge attended the commemoration of forefathers' day, under the auspices of the United Order of Pilgrim Fathers, held in Mechanics' building, Boston, last Thursday evening, with an address by Lieut. Gov. Bates and other men of prominence in the state. There was a large attendance and the exercises were very interesting.

The entire community was saddened with the afflicted parents when the announcement was made on Saturday morning that Eleanor Waite Nye, daughter of ~~Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Nye, had~~ passed away during the night. She was seven years five months and fifteen days old The funeral was held on Monday afternoon at the house, Rev. Dr. Hodge officiating.

At St. Mary's chapel Christmas day masses will be celebrated at 9 and 10.45 a. m., and in the evening musical vespers will be sung. At the high mass at 11.45 Battman's mass in F will be rendered by the choir, with a chorus of twenty voices. The soloists will be Miss Florence Cody, soprano; Miss Elizabeth Pendergast, alto; George LaPoint, bass. The music will be under the direction of Miss Louisa Fiorana, the organist.

Pupils in the ninth grade neither absent nor tardy during the term: Elliot Barrett, Alice Boyles, Myrtie Cook, Sadie Conroy, Nellie Fitzgerald, Horace Fuller, Frank Laycock, George Nixon, Una Pond, Eva Stocker, Ada Trask. Rank of pupils in same school: Nos. 1, Eva Stocker, Mildred Daniels; Nos. 2, Ada Trask, Sadie Conroy; No. 3, Frank Laycock, Nos. 4, Una Pond, E. Gertrude Rockwood; No. 5, Mamie Sheahan.

It is easy to laugh at the poets and transcendentalists, but who can analyse all this Christmas atmosphere and feeling, the divine and human elements of charity, and out of it all the most solid and practical benefits to the needy, and the heavenly consciousness that all are not hard hearted misers or Uriah Heeps, but that the majority, after all, have received something of unselfish life from that life which was truly good.—Ex.

Mrs. Sarah Connor, wife of Anthony Connor, passed away at her late home on School street Sunday afternoon at 1.30, following a prolonged illness. Mrs. Connor, who was 55 years of age, has resided here the greater part of her life, and was beloved by a large circle of friends. Her husband, one daughter, Alice, and two sons, Charles and Albert, survive her. The funeral will be held Wednesday afternoon from her late residence, Rev. Dr. Hodge officiating.

St. Mary's school closed Friday for the Christmas holidays. The Sisters had prepared special exercises and Santa Claus distributed candy and nuts to the little ones. The programme was as follows: Opening chorus, school; address, Miss S. Costello; "Willie's and Anna's Prayer," juniors; Christmas hymn, minors; "Holiday Gifts," grammar class; "Birdie's Bell," 24 little ones; "Hail, all Hail," seniors; "Silent Night," school; "Santa Claus' Visit," Master Leo Meehan.

Trial was had of the liquor cases against C. A. McGinnis & Co., proprietors of Hotel Gladstone, Medway, before a jury in the superior criminal court at Dedham last week. The jury was given the case at 11 o'clock, when they retired and remained out until 10 o'clock at night. They then reported a disagreement, the last ballot standing 6 to 6. Theodore Wehrle, who is a co licensee with C. A. McGinnis, he conducting the wholesale end of the business, was discharged. The jury was ordered dismissed by the court and the case will now go over to the April sessions.

Christmas Sunday was well observed at the Baptist church. There was fine singing by the quartet. Rev. F. B. Sleeper's sermon was on the wonderful boyhood, youth and manhood of Christ. Our Lord is the perfect ideal for the young or the old, as He Himself has passed through all the experiences of life. There was a very large attendance at the concert in the evening and the programme was carried out exceptionally well. The recitations were all on the new-born King, glorifying Christ to the highest. The music was peculiarly charming, full of Christmas joyousness. It was the finest collection of happy songs the school has had for many years and the scholars entered into the singing with great zest. The Christmas tree will be in the vestry tomorrow evening, the exercises beginning promptly at 6.30 o'clock. The cantata, "The New Santa Claus," will be rendered.

The Arlington street school, which is taught by Miss Margaret Sullivan, closed Friday for the regular Christmas vacation. The school rendered a pleasing programme, as follows: Welcome, school; song, "Old Santa," chorus; reading, "Old December," LeRoy Cahill; reading, "Xmas Bells," Ruth McVeigh; "The Merriest Time," Wallace Parson; "Children's Work," Amy Peden; song, "Hurrah for Xmas," school; "When Santa Claus Is President," George Hubert; "Story of Xmas," Herbert Keefe, Robert Doherty, Thomas Grange, Orina Hubert, Charles Cody; "Hang Up the Baby's Stocking," Margaret Garriepy; "Who Is It?" Anna LeClair; song, "Santa's Visit," Ida Campbell; "The Wise Men," Excelia Pariseau, Celia Bonshee, Lena Dumas; "Xmas Greeting," Susie Minne; "Xmas Puzzle," Ida Campbell; "The Two Pennies," Henry Graham; song, "Away in a Manger," school.

They All Do Well.

The auditorium of the Congregational church was well filled on Sunday evening to enjoy the Sunday school concert that Superintendent Richardson had arranged, with the co operation of the members of the school. The choir was present and assisted noticeably with a number of excellent suggestions. The following was the programe:

Choir; a greeting, Ernest Abbott; Scripture reading, C. B Johnson; song by the school, "'Twas a Peaceful Night;" recitation, "Children, Can You Truly Tell?" Celia Whiting; responsive reading; prayer, Rev. I. W. Sneath; choir; exercise, "Christmas Fruits;" recitation, "Shine Out, O Blessed Star," Roy Cleveland; singing by the school, "Stars for Jesus;" recitation, "In Drifts the Snow Is Lying," Pearl Judd; recitation, "Christmas," Edna Jewett; exercise, "At Christmas;" song by the school, "While Shepherds Watched;" recitation, "The Angelic Message," Ada Smith; recitation, "The Heart of Christmas," Clifton Daniels; recitation, "Christmas Carol," Addie Lynds; song by the school, "Song of the Ages;" recitation, Linna Ferrer; remarks, Rev. I. W. Sneath; collection; choir; benediction.

Lawbreaker Convicted.

The McParland case, for alleged violation of the express law, was tried at Dedham last week, the accused being found guilty on one count and fined $50, the other count being dismissed. This was the case which, when tried here, his friends were so confident would be dismissed by the higher court. Temperance people, on the other hand, felt that it was a triumph for their cause, and so it proved. The amount of the fine seems small, though he had a technical defense, but it would appear as if the higher court had followed the finding of Judge Doe and inflicted a fine of a like amount This ought not to follow, necessarily, as many times the judge of a lower court will impose a small sum so that the accused may not appeal and the town thus lose the amount of the fine. When the case reaches the higher court upon an appeal that smaller sum should not be taken into consideration. McParland will find, should he appear before the superior court again upon a similar charge, that slight consideration will be shown him.

One of the Finest.

Stetson's colossal dramatic and scenic production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" comes here Wednesday evening. The production far surpasses that of last season in every particular, and will, so it is said, be the best seen here. Special attention has been given to the staging of the piece, and several scenic effects are magnificent. The thrilling floating ice scene on the Ohio river, St. Claire's plantation, the cotton fields and the superb transformation at the end of the last act are among the greatest. You haven't really seen "Uncle Tom's Cabin" until you've seen this company.

The Trustworthiness of the Bible.

Sunday, Dec. 16, Rev. Dr. Hodge, in the series of sermons he is giving on the five principles of the Universalist statement of belief, spoke on "The Trustworthiness of the Bible as Containing a Revelation from God." Dr. Hodge took for his text St. Paul's declaration that the advantage of the Jew is that unto him were committed the oracles of God. He said in part: The word oracles is a strange word for St. Paul to use. If he meant the scriptures it would have been natural for him to use that common word. Instead he uses an uncommon one. It is a discriminative word. Not everything in the Scriptures is an oracle It contains wise words. But we are not to suppose that everything in the Bible is equally a revelation from God. The forty-fifth Psalm is a poem in praise of some king written on the occasion of his coronation and marriage. The author says in the beginning, "This is a work of art about a king." There is no revelation of God in it. It is a noble poem, but it is not religion. So we are in accord unquestionably with St. Paul in saying the Bible is trustworthy as containing a revelation from God.

Some people say for argument's sake: "If it is not all from God how do we know that any of it is? How are we to tell?" That does very well for argument, but there is not much in it. The fact is we all do discriminate. I know of one man who did not He was invited to read the Bible at the opening of a school. He had not made a selection, so he opened and read at random I will not tell you what he read, but he will never be invited to read in that school again. That is not the way in which the Bible is to be read. You are to read with discrimination. And notwithstanding this foolish argument we do read with more or less discrimination. There is no man who has any reputation for fairness and judgment to sustain who will say that the writers of the Bible are not perfectly sincere and truthful. No literary fraud lives for centuries. The Bible has lived through and lived down all imputation upon its perfect integrity. Even its most irreconcilable statements bear testimony to the sincerity of the writers.

The account of the childhood of Christ given in the first gospel cannot be made to harmonize, wriggle and twist and suppose and assume as much as you please, with the account given in the third gospel. What of it? The first three gospels were written, it may be, near the end of the first century, but by that time Palestine had been swept by the besom of war. Families had been blotted out; localities and cities had been desolated. Many stories of the childhood of Jesus were in circulation. The evangelists did not use all of them. They took such as seemed most likely, such as fitted most consistently with the character Jesus had come to bear. They did not agree in what they gave. They were not eye witnesses of the events of the childhood of Jesus. This is a case where disagreement bears the strongest testimony to integrity. They do not try to make the accounts agree. They write as they believe.

"How can we recognize a revelation from God? One man believes in a revelation because somebody tells him it is a revelation. The church tells him, or the creed tells him, or other men tell him. That will not do for the modern man. I want a surer test of revelation than that. Churches and creeds and men have made serious mistakes sometimes. How can God reveal Himself? How does He? He reveals Himself in human consciousness. "Man is conscious of the being of God," says Mulford in his "Republic of God." God reveals Himself in the moral sense of man. Very well; then I have my test of revelation. Does the revelation without correspond to the revelation within? If so it must be from God. The revelation within speaks to me of God. Does the revelation without speak of the same great reality? The revelation within says, "Thou shalt not kill." Does the revelation in the Bible say that? Then I recognize it. The revelation within tells me I ought to be pure in heart and find blessedness in being so. If the revelation without me says, "Blessed the pure in heart," it is the same voice. So for a plain man, who does not care for intricate reasonings, who judges by common sense, it ought to be enough that the Bible on nearly every page makes for righteousness. It pleads for it. It rebukes unrighteousness. It warns against it in deep and earnest truth. It utters the highest voices it is given to men to hear. That ought to settle it. "Bring me the book," said Sir Walter Scott, as he lay dying. "What book?" they asked him. "THE Book," he answered; "there is but one book." Because the Bible is one with the deep things in us, not because of anybody's doctrine about it, it is dear to us when all things earthly fade and our feet slip on the boundaries of this crumbling world. That is the imperishable foundation on which the Bible rests. Shortsighted and foolish and in the end against the Bible are all attempts to give it any better one.

"The word unto the prophet spoken
Was writ on tablets yet unbroken;
The word by seers and sibyls told
In groves of oak or fanes of gold
Still floats upon the morning wind,
Still whispers to the willing mind,
One accent of the Holy Ghost
The heedless world hath never lost."

At the Y. M. C. A. Service Yesterday.

"Christ in us the hope of glory" was the "five faced gem" which Charles A. McDonough of Boston took for the basic thought in his practical talk at the Y. M. C. A. service in their rooms on Sunday afternoon. The room was filled to overflowing with young men, who listened to the earnest remarks of the speaker as he told briefly of the need of an association of this kind, and the urgent necessity of consecration on the part of its members, that its vital object might not be lessened. Such a life of consecrated effort would be an earnest of the glory yet to come and which fadeth not away. A Gospel song service preceded the meeting, Mrs. Charles L. Stewart assisting with a solo, Rev Bros. Sleeper, Cook and Sneath also being present and taking part in the exercises. Next Sunday the meeting will be addressed by Rev. J. M. Newton of Louisville, Ky., and an invitation is extended to all men to be present.

Farmers' Club.

The club met Dec. 17, with Charles Atkinson, Town farm The question of the evening was: "Town Farm: Is it for the best interests of the town to own a farm on which to keep the poor" Mr. Atkinson said that Mr. Allen was to do the talking on the subject. Mr. Allen said he had no paper but would talk about it as it looked to him:

"I think that there is objection to too large a farm for the town to own and run for this reason: The change of men to care for the poor often changes the methods of farming. One man might lay out quite a sum of money to do certain work on the place that the next man may not want. But for a home for the poor and a place to raise the vegetables that are used on the table, the milk, etc., I think it better for the town and all concerned. Then, it will give the inmates something to do, those that are able to work a little, for I think a man with nothing to do is of all men the most miserable. Many of us do not realize how much it saves in a family to have our milk, fruit and vegetables off of a farm. This farm was bought for a town farm about sixty-three years ago, and when the house was burned there was talk of selling the place and buying a smaller one, but the town finally decided to keep this, and rebuilt the house. I think the town that abandons a farm and just has a house lot makes a mistake, and that is, I think, the trouble at Medway."

George W. Bacon said he came to hear from Mr. Stone, who kept the Medway town farm, hoping that he could give us some points which way he thought was best. For my part I am in sympathy with what has already been said, and think a farm on which to keep our poor is the best for the town and the inmates. Mr. Reed and Mr. Emerson both thought our present system was the best and cheapest. An improvement could be made by lighting the house with electricity, as many of the inmates could not be trusted with lamps.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

A fine company comes here Wednesday evening. This is one of the largest organizations of white and colored artists ever gathered together in one combination, every one of whom was engaged for his or her adaptability for the parts assigned to them. A clever lot of colored people add materially to the production by a number of high class specialties. Col. Sawyer's prize pack of genuine Siberian bloodhounds, a band of beautiful Shetland ponies, trick donkies, etc., are also with this great company. The street parade has two bands of music, a number of gorgeous chariots, tableaux wagons and little carriages built at a large outlay of money, making it the finest free street pageant ever given by any similar organization.

A minister has settled the much vexed question as to whether it's right to marry for money. He says he often does it.

Many people believe in doing good in their way. When they get hold of a man they "do" him good

The Dreyfus case comes to the front again with a whine from Esterhazy that he is the victim of those above him. He may be telling the truth, but he has lied so much that no one believes him and few pity him.

South Africa is again becoming an interesting place. Roberts is on his way home, Kitchener sends a "hurry up" order for more troops, and whole sections are rising up in revolt. England won't enjoy this Christmas much more than she did last year's.

Ex-President Cleveland is out with the remark that the "rank and file" should now be given a chance. They were given a chance and they speedily voted him out of office and themselves into better times. Still, Cleveland knows a thing or two that his party seems not to have learned.

It has just come to light that the vast Vanderbilt estate has been paying but a ridiculous portion of the tax due from it, concealment, evasion and downright dishonesty being the methods by which the city has been mulcted. When the rich man pays his proportion of tax with the poor man the millenium will have been reached, and not till then.

Massachusetts lost one of its noblest sons in the passing away of ex-Governor Wolcott. He was a manly man, of high principle, absolutely unfettered by political shackles, doing his duty as he saw it. Had he lived he would doubtless have represented the state at Washington, and he would have honored the office in a marked degree. Death truly loves a shining mark.

Cudahy did not stop to look into the ethics of the matter of compounding a felony and paying tribute to brigandage by giving up $25,000 for the return of his abducted son. It will surely open up a fertile field for that kind of work if these scoundrels go undetected and unpunished. His duty to the other fathers and mothers of this land is to spend a much larger sum to ferret out the criminals.

The mayoralty vote in Worcester, according to the returning board, is a tie. Evidently the voters thought that if a Democratic congressman at Washington was good enough, a Democratic mayor was equally good. Not bad logic, after all. This all shows that voters occasionally take the reins in the teeth and do as they please, despite the bosses. There is altogether too much "bull ring" politics in this day and generation, but it's going, it's going.

Nobody expects any results from the investigation by West Point officials into the hazing of young Booz. The cadets examined have convenient lapses of memory; few admit the hazing. Their defense of their comrades is somewhat like the criminal's, who was convicted on the testimony of one man, who swore he saw him commit the deed. The criminal offered to bring forward a hundred witnesses who would swear they did not see him commit it. The cadets prate of honor, etc, while they act like brutes and sneaks. A noble kind of honor, indeed.

Coincidence in Names.

The recent publication in several daily papers that Nellie Prettyhair a quarter-breed Indian girl had been left $1,000,000 by John Dillon, a rich ranchman, for having saved his life from drowning in the Grand river, near Claremore, I. T. four years ago, develops a remarkable coincidence, says the St. Louis Republic. In this city lives Mrs. John Marquette, aged 30, a half-breed Indian woman. Her husband is a half-breed Canadian, and they are very poor. Mrs. Marquette's maiden name was Annie Nadean, and she is descended from the Pottawatomie "Leanow" tribe of Pokagon. She was born at Bertrand, Mich. in May, 187[illegible]. She was called "Nellie Prettyhair," on account of the beauty of her hair. She was in the Indian territory about 1890. Standing one day on the bank of the South Canadian river, between Lexington and Purcell, she saw a man attempting to cross with a wagon and team. Team and wagon were sinking in a quicksand when she came to the man's assistance and helped him out. He thanked her and went away. She did not know his name, and never saw or heard of him since. The Nellie Prettyhair enjoying Dillon's fortune under the name of Annie Trueheath Dillon, as required by Dillon's will, tented with her Cherokee parents on the Grande river, near Claremore. Four years ago, when aged 16, she saw a man struggling helplessly in the swollen waters. Riding in on her pony she saved his life. He did not thank her, but died three months later and left $1,000,000 in gratitude. It is reported that she is engaged to Dillon's bitterest enemy in life—John Liger, a cowboy, who tried several times to kill Dillon. If Annie weds him, relatives threaten to break the will. Mrs. Marquette has employed attorneys to investigate the case and to learn if the man whose life she saved was Dillon.

A Child's Resourcefulness.

A Chicago school has lately furnished a very pretty instance of childish resourcefulness. Some people having complained of a dog which had no home and no visible means of support, a policeman was detailed to shoot the animal. When he appeared near the schoolhouse with his revolver, one of the little girls asked him what he was going to do. He told her, and she begged him not to shoot the animal. "But I must," he said, "for he hasn't any license." "We'll get him a license if you won't shoot him," said the little girl, and so the policeman granted a few days' respite. The little girl interested eight or ten of her friends, arranged for a "show," consisting of speeches, recitations and music, to be given by themselves, and persuaded their teacher to announce it, with its charitable object. They cleared enough money to raise the dog from a condition of vagrancy to a position of affluence and independence. They paid his license fee, bought him a new collar, and were even able to deposit a small sum with the butcher to provide their canine friend with juicy marrow-bones and choice cuts of chuck steak in days to come.

Illinois has an apparent right to claim to be the woman's paradise, so far as public recognition of her business capacity is concerned. On the board of trustees of the State university are two women, Mrs. Alice A. Abbott and Mrs. Lucy L. Fowler both of Chicago, and members of that city's Woman's club. Mrs. Abbott began her work for the public in the civil war and has continued it in many directions ever since. Mrs. Fowler is known for her interest in and efforts in behalf of youthful offenders against the law.

Firm Nerves by Using Smith's Green Mountain Renovator.

Clear Vision, Too.

Firm nerves and clear vision are products of perfect blood circulation. Strength of arm, of eye, and of nerve are necessary to-day as never before. The present day worker like the archer of old must have strength without alloy. Smith's Green Mountain Renovator is the happiest union of strength-giving elements known, and as a Body Builder nothing equals it. It is made of pure herbs and plants, and is redolent of the fragrant woods, green hills and bracing air of the Green Mountains!

"I have been troubled with nervous dyspepsia for years, which made me a physical wreck in more ways than one—weak, nervous, and unable to eat or sleep. I was induced to try Smith's Green Mountain Renovator. A few bottles completely cured me, and thanks to your Renovator I can now eat a square meal, sleep well, and feel strong and healthy." Dues for shooting licenses, required in Germany and under special restrictions for hunting and target practice, vary in the various states of the empire. In Prussia, a fair example, they are 15 marks a year and three marks for one day only. Last year the revenue derived from them in that kingdom amounted to 2,123,313 marks, or about $5[illegible]0,000.

Among the messages received by the sultan on the occasion of his recent jubilee, was the following from Ali Bey, the son of Midhat Pasha: "I congratulate your majesty. I recall the blood of your father innocently shed in the fortress of Taif. That tragic death, in the face of justice, of humanity, and of Europe itself, is never to be forgotten. I have nothing to say on the subject of the strangling of my father after the promises made to those same powers who have now come to celebrate your majesty's jubilee; but I leave the judgment of the matter to the peoples and to the future. I am prepared to endure the wrath of your majesty before the specter of Midhat."

WOMEN THE WORLD OVER.

Queen Victoria has received from the king of Italy a well-executed cast of the inscribed column which was discovered last winter in the Forum at Rome, and which excited great interest among antiquaries in all parts of Europe.

The queen of Siam has a remarkable thimble, which was given to her by her husband. It is made of gold, in the form of a lotus bud, and is thickly studded with diamonds, which are arranged to form her name and the date of her marriage. The form of the gift was particularly appropriate, since the lotus is the royal flower.

Miss Mabel Cook of New York, is a "book surgeon." That is she makes her living by repairing the worn-out books in the Astor library. She fitted herself for the position by taking a course in book binding, for she says it is impossible to repair books satisfactorily without an intimate knowledge of their mechanical construction.

The first lady in the sultan's dominion is his mother. She has her own palace and retinue, and if she has the ability she may exercise considerable influence in affairs of state. The fact that the mother is so regarded by the Mohammedan, accounts for the longing with which the woman of this race awaits the coming of a son. She is sure of independence and honor as long as her son lives. The wife is subject to the mother of her husband. When the father dies the mother becomes the head of her oldest son's household, unless he can afford to give her a house of her own.

Sheep-Guarding Birds.

The yakamik, a species of crane, is said to be one of the most intelligent birds known. The bird is used by the natives of Venezuela, South America, in the place of shepherd dogs for guarding and herding their flocks of sheep. It is said that however far the yakamik may wander with the flocks it never fails to find its way home at night, driving before it all the creatures intrusted to its care.—Detroit Free Press.

Making of Cellulith.

Cellulith is a substance produced by a long and continuous beating of wood pulp. It is transparent and elastic, hardening slowly until it attains the consistency of horn, its specific gravity being about 4.5. The cellulith may be worked as is horn or ebonite. Combined with sawdust and [illegible] per cent [illegible] black, the result is a kind of dark ebonite; this is dense and may be polished.—Science

The freshmen are required to further pay general respect to the "sophs." Loud-mouthed freshmen are to be dealt with summarily.

The expense of maintaining schools is very high in Porto Rico. The cost per capita per pupil enrolled last year was over $13, while in Missouri, with its large and expensive urban systems, its secondary schools and its university, the per capita expenditure was less than nine dollars. This is due to lack of school buildings and school plant in general, and to ignorance of the principles of economical school administration on the part of school authorities.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century, discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co. Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

A cube of red sandstone two feet square, suitably inscribed, has been erected in the old cemetery at Deerfield, Mass. It will mark for the first time in an appropriate way the grave where 48 men, women and children were buried after the massacre in 1704 by the French and Indians.

When turned out at pasture all horses except those which are crippled by disease or injury lie down at night with their legs folded beneath their bodies. Some of the short-limbed and thick-jointed animals, such as the elephant, hippopotamus and rhinoceros, find a difficulty in bending their legs under them after the manner of their more slender kindred. Hence they sleep upon their sides in a piglike attitude.

Some German brokers engaged in promoting an "industrial" company advertised that the enterprise promised to pay five per cent. the first year and more later on. The public invested, but failed to get any dividends. Then some of the investors sued to recover their money, claiming that it had been obtained by false promise. After winning a compromise verdict they appealed, and a decision has been rendered in a higher court ordering return of their money on surrender of the stock.

No one can reasonably hope for good health unless his bowels move once each day. When this is not attended to, disorders of the stomach arise, biliousness, headache, dyspepsia and piles soon follow. If you wish to avoid these ailments keep your bowels regular by taking Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets when required. They are so easy to take and mild and gentle in effect. A DECOROUS DEATH

By Emile Zola.

COUNT DE VERTEUIL is 50 years of age. Blue blood runs in the count's veins. His family is one of the most ancient in France. Yellow gold lies in the count's coffers. His fortune is one of the largest in France. Honors are heaped upon the count's head. He is a member of the Academy, a deputy, a patron of the arts.

Countess Mathilde de Verteuil is 36. Blond is Countess Mathilde—blond and beautiful. Age does not wither her. Her rounded shoulders, her satiny skin, her golden hair, her starry eyes—all these make the matronly beauty of the countess the envy of younger rivels.

The Verteuil household is a thoroughly respectable one. Dame Rumor's tongue never wags concerning it. Their marriage had been one of eminent good teste, said the world—both wealthy, both of good family. And then they had lived as husband and wife for nearly six yeers. And their two children—Ferdinand, in the army, end Blanche—had been so well brought up. And they had merried Blanche very well. It is true they no longer affect the sentimental husband and wife. But what of that? If eech hes a separate suite in the Verteuil ebode, do they not trent each other with the utmost courtesy? They are perfect models of deportment, and nothing can he said against either.

One night mademe the countess returns from a hell at two o'clock. She ie fatigued, is Mme. Methilde. As her maid disrobes her, she says:

"The count, madame, is somewhat unwell this evening."

The countess yawns. "Ah," she murmurs. Then, es she extends her form beneath the luxurious coverlet: "Wake me at ten to-morrow, Julie. The modiste is comnig."

At breakfest the next morning the count does not appeer. Madame ie concerned. She sends to inquire efter his health. The count is desoleted; he presents his excuses to madame, but he cennot quit his chamber. Madame is more concerned. She will herself see the count. She enters. She finds him in bed, extremely pale, but extremely trim. He is a perfectly respectable invalid. The room shows no vulgar signs of disorder—no vials scattered around, no furniture misplaced. Three physicians are whispering in a corner, and two well-trained domestics move noiselessly about the room. This is no common invalid—it is my lord the count of Verteuil who lies abed. This is not your low and plebeian "sickness"—it is illness, trim and proper, and ceremonious illness which is here.

"You are unwell, I see, my dear," says the countess. "I hope it is nothing dangerous?"

The count smiles feebly—a somewhat strained smile.

"Not at all," he answers, with an effort. "All I need is rest and quiet. I am sorry to have put you to so much trouble."

The days pass. The chamber remains, as ever, well arranged. The smug and shaven faces of the servants are expressionless. Nothing is changed nothing save the master. And he is much changed. For he lies at death's door, and he knows it. Physicians shall not dole out weak platitudes to Count de Verteuil. But sometimes, as he lies staring grimly at nothing, the count's face shows weariness.

In the world of fashion the countess tells her friends that her husband is "a little indisposed." She could not say that he was more, for Mme. Mathilde had not changed her life. Rides, drives, balls and perties make up the round. But nevertheless, morning and evening the countess dutifully visits her husband's chamber.

"Better, I hope, to-day, my dear?"

"A little better, I think, my dear Mathilde."

"If you wish it, my deer, I will stay with you."

"Thanks, but it is unnecessary. It would only fatigue you uselessly Thanks, very much, nevertheless."

They understand each other perfectly. They heve lived apart. The count would die apart. He enjoys a certain bitter egotism in thus quitting life alone, without the comedy of sorrow being played at his bedside. And he will die with dignity will the count, es should a man of the world.

The sick men is growing weeker, his breath more lahored. He knows he will not see the morning sun. So this evening, when the countess pays her habituel visit, he says, with a faint smile:

"It—would—he hetter—not—to go out this—evening, my—denr. I—em—not—very—well."

The count is considerate even in his weakness. He would spare her the gossip of the world, were she seen ehroad the night he died. The countess eppreciates his courteey. She stays at home.

The physiciens remein in the sick man's chamher. The countess sends for the children, Blanche and Ferdinand, and the three install themselves hy the count's hedside. Now the forms are complied with—the count can die.

But he struggles to repress himself. He would evoid a convulsive, vulger death-scene. He stifles his rattling breath. And, when he finds himself going, he turns to his wife and children and kisses them. The domestics ere much moved. And then he turns bis face to the wall. When h's wife would speak to him, he motions her from him with a feeble gesture.

The moments pass away. There is no movement in the silent form with its fece against the wall. One of the physiciane leane toward it.

"All is over," be says, as he eloses the deed men's eyes.

Count de Verteuil has died, es he wished, alone.

The morning of the funeral the Verteuil mansion is filled with sorrowing friends. The son and son-in-law of the count receive the guests with the mute politeness of effliction. And the mourners at the count's funeral are not common mourners. The nobility, the srmy, the magistracy, the senate, the academy—yes, come they all to Verteuil's funeral.

The procession sets out for the church. The hearse is magnificently somher; black-plumed, black-draped, its hangings edged with silver; and the pall-bearers, too, are magnificent in their way—a duke, a field-marshal, a prime minister and an academician. The black-gloved, black-crevated and black-coated line files slowly through the streets, while the busy passers-by stop and uncover.

And the countess? Well, she is completely broken down with grief, say the relatives. The countess is at home.

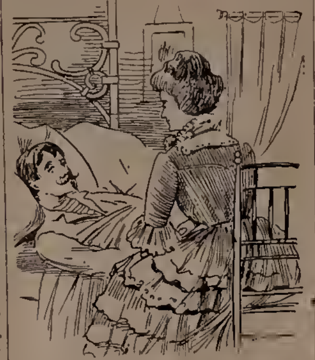
At the church the ceremony lasts for neurly two hours. The organ thunders forth its lamentations, the singers wail theirs, while from torches held by boys the green flames cast a sickly pallor over the gathering.

"Is not Faure, the celebrated tenor, going to sing to-day?" asks one mourner of another.

"Yes," says mourner No. 2, an elderly beau, who has just been staring through a single eyeglass at a pretty mourner; "yes, I believe he is. Ah, that is his voice now. What method! What range! Eh?"

"Yes, indeed," says mourner No. 1. "Never heard him sing better in my life. Ah, it's a pity poor Verteuil can't hear him, ain't it? He was very fond of him."

It is a beautiful June day. And as the carriages roll along the route for the cemetery, the windings of the road take the hearse out of sight from time to time, therefore it is not to be wondered at if the mourners sometimes forget it. The disjointed bits of conversation would seem to imply as much.



"BETTER, I HOPE TO-DAY, MY DEAR."

"Are you going to the seaside this month, my dear?"

"No, not until August. We start to-morrow for our country place, and—"

"Well, as I wes saying, the letter fell into his hands, and that was the cause of the duel. But it was only a scratch—the merest scratch in the world. I dined with him thet evening et the club, and he won twenty-five—"

"Yes, I believe the meeting of stockholders takes place to-morrow, and they want to make me a director. I don't know whether I'll accept or not, I'm very busy now, and—"

Scrunch, scrunch! The carriages have quitted the road and are on the graveled welks of the cemetery. The talking ceases. The tomb of the Verteuils is et the extreme left—a magnificent marble structure, where cerven angels in paroxysms of stony woe weep over the dead and gone Verteuils. The coffin is placed before it, and the funeral discourse begins.

The count is pictured as a man who, had he not heen cut off in his prime, would have regenerated the political condition of his country; a man renowned for his private virtues; a man who had encouraged agriculture and the erts; a man who had made e study of politicel economy end sociology; e man whose loss was irreparable.

Such is the crowd that it is difficult for those on the outskirts to catch ell the words. An elderly gentleman, with his hand to his eer, is listening, with pursed-up lips, to the eulogy. He catches these words:

"——the qualities of his great and generous heart, his bountiful——"

"Yes," he mutters, "I knew him. He wes a clever hypocrite."

The sound weves from this mingle with those of the priest's blessing. The mourners retire, and soon there ere none left hut the workmen, who are lowering the coffin into the vault. The cords creak, the oaken coffin gives forth e hollow sound es it strikes the stone floor.

My lord Count de Verteuil is at home.—Adapted for the San Francisco Argonaut from the French.

Pneumonia Prevented.

Among the tens of thousands who have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for colds and la grippe during the past few years, to our knowledge, not a single case has resulted in pneumonia Thos. Whitfield & Co., 240 Wabash ave., Chicago, one of the most prominent retail druggists in that city, in speaking of this, says: "We recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for la grippe in many cases, as it not only gives prompt and complete recovery, but also counteracts any tendency of la grippe to result in pneumonia." For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2 65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save If your druggist can't supply you, it will be fowarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

Relief from Pain

is the object of every dyspeptic's search. Few succeed, because they don't use the right remedy. They swallow hard, stony pills and tablets and expect the already weakened stomach to digest them. The poor, over-worked stomach takes from 10 to 14 hours to do it. Even then relief is doubtful, because the stomach is over-taxed.

Daniel Vaughn died at his residence in Plainville Tuesday, aged 84. The funeral was from his late residence Thursday at 2 o'clock.——The Holly club held its last meeting with Mrs Chas W. Pond. The subject was "The Madonna." Interesting papers were read by Miss A. L. Stone and Miss A. M. Brastow.——James A. Bartlett is home from Andover academy for the holidays.——Mrs. J. M. Philbrick of New York is spending a few days in town.——The death is announced of Mrs. Coleman, widow of the late Harvey B. Coleman, a former influential citizen, who died in Indianapolis, Ind., at the residence of her son.

Cuba's Excess of Widows.

The effect of the long Cuban war on the homes of the Cubans is shown in the returns of the census that was recently taken there under the supervision of the war department. The census showed that 34 per cent. of all the women who have been married in Cuba are to-day widows. Perhaps no country in the world can show a larger per cent. of widowhood. An apparent inconsistency of figures contained in the Cuban census is shown by the percentage of widows in that island being only a little more than eight per cent. of all the women on the island. This apparent discrepancy results from the fact that the marriage ceremony in Cuba was an expensive luxury during the years of Spanish rule. It then cost five dollars to get married at six o'clock in the morning, and this expense was increased as the hour of noon, the most fashionable time for the performance of such ceremonies, was approached. Many of the poor people were thus forced to do without the luxury of a marriage, although they proceeded to bring up a family in an orderly fashion. Had marriage been universal in Cuba it is quite likely that the percentage of those married who were made widows by the war for independence would have been quite as large as it is shown to be under present conditions. —Washington Star.

The Duke of York and the Caddie

Apropos of the pleasant custom recently mentioned in "M. A. P. in Paris" of President Loubet sharing his cigars with his gamekeeper, Driault, when out shooting at Rambouillet, a correspondent sends the following: "It is well known that the duke of York includes golf among his pet pastimes. When on the golf links at Anglesey, near Gossport, he usually employs one particular lad as caddie. This boy besides the honor of having tramped many a mile in the duke's company, can also lay claim to the distinction of having shared a unique lunch with his future king. The incident occurred on the above mentioned links, when duke and caddie paused for a little well-earned refreshment. The duke, after mopping his brow, pulled a flask from his pocket and offered the youngster a drink. The boy declined the offer with thanks, saying that he was a teetotaler. The duke warmly commended the lad for this, and thereupon offered him something more substantial—a ham sandwich. The caddie took it eagerly, the duke took another, and the simple meal was shared by the oddly-assorted pair with that healthy hunger which is the common heritage of prince and pauper alike."—Mainly About People.

Explanation of Gossamer Threads

The silken threads that cover the bushes in the autumn, cling to our clothes and faces and shimmer in the sun are spun by the running spiders. They crawl to the top of a bush or fence, place all their feet in a bunch, with the head held down and the hinder part of the body up, and then exude from the spinning apparatus at the tip of the abdomen a thread or brushlike cluster of threads which is caught by the breeze and floats out as it lengthens, until finally it has buoyancy enough to carry the spider away aloft out of sight or drift him across the country until he strikes some foothold and stops. Then he may simply rest and soon fly again, or cut loose and let his thread float wherever the wind will carry it. Other spiders draw out a thread behind them as they walk along, or let themselves down by a line from the branches of trees, and these cables are what we call gossamer.—Little Chronicle.

Carving.

"Wasn't that the dinner bell just rang?" inquired the man who was dining with the Carvers for the first time.

"Yes," replied the old friend of the family.

"Then where's the host going? I just saw him pass down the hall with his overcoat on."

"That wasn't an overcoat; it was a mackintosh. We're going to have roast duck."—Philadelphia Press.

According to tables made by sporting men, over £50,000,000 is lost on the turf every year. Of this, £10,000,000 is lost on English race courses and about £20,000,000 on Australian courses. The remainder is chiefly distributed between France, the United States and British colonies.

The typhoon of the orient is an own sister of the West India cyclone. It is generated in low latitudes, late in the summer or early autumn, at the western slope of the Pacific, not far from the Philippines. It begins its career by moving westward, but in time returns to the coast of China and Japan.

A curious case of gross superstition which led to the practice of barbarous cruelty to a little boy was revealed the other day in a local police court in British Guiana. A woman named Ashby, of Uitvlugt, a sugar estate, the defendant in the case, stated that she had dreamed of a way to cure her little son of certain faults. It consisted of boiling an egg and putting it while still hot into the boy's hands. Next morning she proceeded to put the suggestion of her dream into execution. When the egg was boiled she compelled the unfortunate child to clasp his hands tightly over it, the inevitable result being that the palms of his hands were badly burned.

Remember the rummage sale on Saturday afternoon and evening in the Opera house block. A special side feature will be a lunch counter. Coffee and cake and oyster stew will be served. Let everybody come and have a lunch.

A private social party was enjoyed in Red Men's hall last evening, twelve couples participating. Excellent music was furnished by Mrs. Tracey, Miss Razee and Mr. Farrington. Refreshments were served. The ladies arranged the affair and were highly successful.

A number of posts for guideboards have been put up at convenient points on the highway, and the boards will be placed as soon as possible. This part of the work has been delayed on account of the sickness of the chairman of the selectmen, who had that part in charge.

One of the members of the "Uncle Tom's Cabin" company fell into a trap which had been left open by mistake in the ladies' closet at the railroad station on Wednesday, bruising herself quite severely, so that a physician was called. She left town with the company the next day.

Insurance Agent Woodward remembers us with a number of his artistic calendars, some of which are dainty enough to hang in a parlor. Naturally they are in great demand. At the bottom of some of them is the Franklin fire alarm system, which will prove a very convenient feature.

The next regular meeting of the Alden club will take the form of a New Year's social greeting at the home of Mrs. Charles Whiting, Central street, next Tuesday evening, from 8 until 10. The members are urgently requested to be present and help each other and Mrs. Whiting to open the New Year with true friendship and cordiality.

John Maroney, of the firm of Maroney Bros., bakers, was united in marriage to Miss Alice Nevelle at Ellsworth, Me., the home of the bride, on Wednesday. The couple will reside in Boston, where Mr. Maroney conducts a branch of the Home bakery. The bride has resided here for several winters, holding a position at Bassett Bros.' straw manufactory.

The N. E. O. P. Wednesday evening elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Warden, E. T. Barr; vice warden, Hattie M. Barr; secretary, Bernard R. Rockwood; financial secretary, Dr. E. C. Abbott; treasurer, W. A. Estey; guide, Kathryn C. Shattuck; guardian, Eleanor O. Miliken; sentinel, L. P. Faxon; trustee for three years, J. R. Hosford.

Emerson, the meat man, having lost his horse, Uncle Silas, like Dickens' Silas Wegg, "drops into poetry," and embalms the faithful equine as follows: "The dapple grey has gone to rest, we ne'er shall see him more. He earned his price for Emerson full many a time and more. Faithful and well he did his task, was gentle, kind and clever; his reward, says Bert, will be to bask in pastures green forever."

Boys, be careful. As a a number of lads were skating on Wednesday at Mine brook, George Sneath broke in. Alden Abbott went to his assistance and fell in also. Ernest Abbott kept his wits about him and went for a pole, and finally Alfred Sharon succeeded with it in getting the boys out. The water was pretty deep, and the accident might easily have resulted differently had no assistance come until they were chilled through.

Last spring the town instructed the treasurer and selectmen to pay no bills after the appropriation and credits received for any department were used. That condition of affairs has arrived in the schools, the poor and the miscellaneous appropriations, so that no more bills can be paid from the treasury on those accounts until more funds come in or the fiscal year has closed. The town year ends Jan. 31, 1901.

On next Monday evening a watch-night service will be held in the Congregational church beginning at 9 o'clock. There will be a preaching service at 9 p. m. At 10 refreshments and social hour; at 10.30 a Bible study; at 11.15 a testimony and prayer service. The basket lunch method of refreshments will be followed, each one providing for himself. Hot coffee will be served. All are cordially invited to watch out the old century in this religious way.

The Christmas exercises at the Baptist church Tuesday evening were very interesting. The attendance was large, every seat being taken. The cantata, "The New Santa Claus," was one of the finest ever given in the vestry. Too much praise cannot be given to those taking part. Two large trees were well loaded with presents, and the people, both young and old, must have gone home happy. A spirit of good cheer was in all the atmosphere. The pastor and wife were well remembered with gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Turner of Plainville held a pleasant family gathering Christmas. Among the guests who partook of the Christmas dinner were: Mr. and Mrs. Albert Heath and daughter, Pauline, of Garfield street, Mrs. C. W. Mason and children of Union street, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Mason of Norfolk and Wesley Ham of Plainville. In the evening the guests gathered around a tastily trimmed and well-lighted Christmas tree loaded down with many pretty presents. After the distribution of presents the party was entertained with vocal and instrumental music. At a late hour the guests returned to their homes, having spent a happy and merry Christmas.

In "A Breezy Time," which appears here Friday evening, Jan. 4, the first scene is laid at a young student's apartments in Boston. The second act shifts to Vermont. It may not be necessary to say there is a young girl who is in love with a young student, and that the young student reciprocates the love. His creditors stand in the way of his marriage, and "A Breezy Time" is like other pieces in this at least, that it all ends happily in the last act. The play is brim full of melodious music, and a great many funny scenes have been introduced. The cast consists of the pick of some of the foremost artists now appearing on the farce comedy stage, who have the ability to depict in a fine and artistic manner the finely drawn characters in this, the funniest of all comedies.

The Sunday school concert given at the Universalist church Sunday afternoon was attended by a large audience and was a meritorious and pleasant affair. The choir rendered appropriate music, and after prayer by the pastor the members of the Sunday school were the main participants in the exercises. Where all did so well it would be invidious to particularize. We have heard many speak, however, of the closing scene, when the fair-haired little Emma Metcalf, kneeling on the platform with clasped hands, sang a little closing prayer in fitting words, written by the pastor, and remained kneeling while the pastor pronounced the benediction. Misses Mason and Tower, who have had charge of other similar concerts, deserve great credit for this additional success.

The Auto Bucked.

George Adams, engineer at the Hayward mill, was quite badly bruised in an accident at Medway last Sunday afternoon. He was driving the automobile belonging to his employer, Mr. Hayward, when suddenly the machine got the better of him and went over, just how the driver seems to be unable to determine. He was thrown out, as also was the other occupant of the vehicle, Mr. Neil of Medway. The latter was practically unhurt, but Mr. Adams was badly bruised about the body, he had a severe cut over the right eye and his cheek was also cut. He returned on the electric cars and his injuries were attended to. He is still unable to return to his duties, and the automobile remains in Medway. It was damaged to the extent of a number of hundred dollars. When it is run by Mr. Hayward he uses extreme caution and has thus far never met with an accident.

Fresh cut flowers at Slade's greenhouse

Rev. James M. Newton of Louisville, Ky., who is to speak at the men's meeting, at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, Sunday afternoon, is a bright and earnest speaker who will undoubtedly give a very strong address. Remember the hour, 4.15.

In Dean gymnasium the Universalist Sunday school had an ideal place for its Christmas eve festivities. Refreshments were served in the bowling alley, the main room above containing the Christmas tree and its accompanying gifts, while the galleries afforded friends and spectators a good opportunity for looking on, an opportunity of which many availed themselves. After refreshments had been served and all had been fed, there was music and song for an hour, when the ringing of sleighbells announced the arrival of Santa Claus, who was immediately surrounded by the eager and excited little ones. The witty speech and humorous sallies of Santa Claus were appreciated and applauded by all. He then proceeded to the distribution of presents, accompanying his presentations with lively remarks, until all had been gladdened by gifts. Then a social time was enjoyed by the young people till half-past ten. The children who were not made happy by the efforts made to please them on this occasion must, indeed, be hard to suit.

Eleanor Waite Nye.

IN MEMORIAM.

We made a brief announcement on Monday of the death of Eleanor, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Nye, and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Waite. We are permitted to make more suitable notice of this sad event today. Eleanor had been the child of many anxieties, and of hopes growing in days of apparent recovery only to be dashed again to the ground by some new and sudden attack of the disease, which has at last prevailed. The best medical counsel has been sought, every measure which seemed to promise relief has been employed, and the result has been an additional evidence of the powerlessness of human aid when the great destroyer has set his mark upon his chosen. Mr. and Mrs. Nye have the sympathy in their sad bereavement of many friends.

It is well known how indefatigable and sweet has been the fight for the life of the dear child that aside from her physical condition had so much of promise in her developing characteristics. Singularly truthful and trustworthy, of a personality forceful and earnest, it seems a pity that Eleanor could not have come in this world to the development of that strong womanly character which seemed to be potentially within her; that in her eighth year, just as this development was revealing itself in interesting and varied ways, she should be called to go and leave so deep a grief behind her. We do not know the mystery of these things. We know only the sympathies they touch, the deep affections they involve and consecrate. We can but trust that in some deep and hidden way the infinite Hand works,—not for ends that are ill. Pointing upward in her dying moments, seeming to see celestial forms about her, she has gone on to join the great company of the blessed.

A simple funeral service was conducted at the home Monday, at 2 p. m., by Rev. Dr. Hodge. Many friends sent floral remembrances and testified their sympathy by their presence. The service at the grave was appropriate and impressive. While it has been a sad Christmas in the home she left, we must believe that to her has come the gift that is better than all others in the home that is everlasting.

"The old, old fashion, death. Oh, thank God, all who see it, for that older fashion yet, of immortality! And look upon us, angels of young children, with regards not quite estranged, when the swift river hears us to the ocean!"

Rummage Sale.

In the last store in the Opera house block on Saturday afternoon and evening of this week the Methodist society will hold a rummage sale. A large assortment of second-hand clothing, furniture and various useful articles will be on sale at extra low prices. There will also be first class home-made canned fruit, preserves, etc. Everything will be sold regardless of price. Come early and get the first choice.

A Remarkable Offer.

Quite a number have taken advantage of our offer to furnish McClure's, Cosmopolitan, Review of Reviews, Success and the SENTINEL, all for one year, for just $5, which is a clear saving of $2.50, and a much larger saving when bought from month to month. For twenty-five cents more Public Opinion may be substituted for Cosmopolitan. This is an extraordinary offer, and should be accepted soon in order to receive the benefits. Subscriptions taken for any periodical at reduced rates.

Card of Thanks.

The undersigned desire to return sincere thanks to the friends and others who have remembered them in their hour of affliction.

Heart-to-Heart Talks.

Evangelistic services are now in progress at the Methodist church. Rev. Jas. M. Newton, evangelist, from Louisville, Ky., is giving very excellent and helpful addresses. On Wednesday evening, the opening night, he spoke on "The world and the Soul." The soul is of supreme worth, and is not to be trifled away, though it be in exhange for the whole world.

REV. JAMES M. NEWTON.

His address last evening was very unique. The central thought was based on the passage in Isaiah, xl, 15 and 16: "Behold, I have graven you on the palms of my hands; I will not forget thee."

The meeting tonight will be of special interest. All are cordially invited. On Monday night there will be a watch-night service from 8 to 12 p. m. Several features of special interest. All are welcome.

A Happy Time.

The Congregational Sunday school held its annual Christmas tree and holiday festivities at the church on Tuesday evening, refreshments being served the little ones at 6 o'clock, consisting of ice cream, fancy cakes, etc. After this all repaired to the Sunday school room, where two trees had been tastefully trimmed, and a large lighthouse set up, with a colored light in the top. From a hole in this lighthouse Santa Claus distributed his gifts, a large number of recipients being made happy. A program was enjoyed consisting of a piano duet by Misses Talcott and Smith, piano solo by Grace Daniels, vocal solo by Pearl Judd, recitation by Gertrude Whiting, Alice Abbott, Harry Farrington, Roy Cleveland and Allen Richardson. Two humorous recitations were also given by John Cosseboom. Supt. Richardson and Misses Fisher and Rockwood worked indefatigably to make the affair a success, and they surely succeeded.

"A Merry Christmas."

The happy faces of boys and girls, parents and friends, most pleasingly revealed this sentiment as they gathered in large numbers on Tuesday evening for the annual Christmas exercises at the Methodist church. At an early hour the vestry was filled with people. The church was appropriately decorated, the trees were loaded with presents and the atmosphere was charged with good cheer and Christmas greetings. The concert, given by the children of the Sunday school was in every way first class.

Special credit is due Mrs. A. M. Willard, whose skill and efficiency was apparent in the perfect training manifested by the participants in the program of the evening. Just at the close of the concert, approaching bells were heard, and Santa Claus appeared. His visit was a most delightful one, and the children all hope he will come again.

Hen thieves are making a good deal of trouble and expense for the farmers in South Franklin, and the raids on the poultry in that section have become a serious matter. The thieves are bold in their operations, and after making a raid they return after a night or two for another call. The fierce canines seem to be useless protectors, making more noise in the daytime than in the darkness.

In the Market.

Turkeys, fowls and chicks, lamb, home-dressed pork, home-made sausage, fine heavy beef, Jersey sweet potatoes, squash, turnips, white and yellow; parsley, spinach, lettuce, Boston market celery, plain and sage cheese, choice pickles; best butter in town, 5 lbs for $1.35 and $1.55. Try our line of soups with your Sunday dinner; just the thing for an appetizer. Richardson, the marketman.

Picture Frames.

The pictures you received as Xmas gifts should be framed to preserve them. Bring them in and let me show you my samples of mouldings. I can please you in up-to-date frames, or put them up in passe-partout if you prefer.

HEAVEN.

BY MRS. E. B. CHOATE.

O could I burst these prison bars
And soar away beyond the stars,
On angels' wings joyful to rise
To holy mansions in the skies.

To this old earth I bid adieu
And speed beyond the ethereal blue
Unto the city wondrous fair,
Where worldly joy cannot compare.

Give me the faith divine to rise
Into God's heavenly paradise,
To see the beauties never told,
The gates of pearl, the streets of gold.

To gaze with wonder and surprise
On glory rapt that feasts my eyes,
The jasper walls divinely bright,
The pure white throne before my sight.

The gates ajar I seem to see;
The angels surely beckon me.
I hear them call in accents sweet:
"Come, lay your crown at Jesus' feet"

Such heaven is joy enough for me,
Forever with my Christ to be,
And fondly waiting at the door
I meet the loved ones gone before

I thought my cup was full before,
But now I find it running o'er,
While God and angels welcome me
To bliss of all eternity

Fire Insurance.

Losses by fire carry with them a lesson everyone should heed. That is, the importance and duty of carrying an adequate amount of fire insurance. It is a plain, simple business proposition. For a very small sum each year a person can get $1,000 insurance against loss on house or contents by fire. Not to have this insurance may mean suffering and privation for years, or dependence on the sympathy or charity of friends. To be sure, none of us expect to be burned out; but anyone of us is liable to that misfortune at any hour. The part of prudence and common sense is to maintain, at all risks, an adequate fire insurance on the property we own that is liable to such loss. If you are not properly insured, be so at once, and you and those dependent on you will be vastly better off in case such loss comes upon you.—Exchange

Been Here Before.

The next attraction at the Opera house will be Fitz and Webster's rousing musical farce comedy "A Breezy Time," Friday evening, Jan 4. The company includes more than a dozen of the cleverest farceurs in the profession, each having been selected to exactly fit the roll he or she may be cast for.

The three acts have been happily impregnated with music, songs, dances and amusing specialty features, all of which are introduced in an easy and perfectly legitimate manner, and the presentation gives a bright and crisp entertainment.

The finale of the last act was arranged by Fitz and Webster, in which they introduce a number of "Rag Time" airs, closing the show with a grand cake walk by the entire company

Among vegetables Lima beans have the highest food value, containing [illegible] per cent. of nutrients, says the Saturday Evening Post. Sweet potatoes come next, with 29 per cent., green peas next with 22 per cent., white potatoes next with [illegible] per cent. and string beans next with 13 per cent. Green sweet corn has 19 per cent. of nutrients, beets 12 per cent., turnips 11 per cent., cabbage, cauliflower and spinach eight per cent., turnips, eggplant and lettuce seven per cent., tomatoes and asparagus six per cent., and cucumbers four per cent. Dry beans or rice are about the most economical foods one can buy, containing as they do 88 per cent of solid nutrient. Fish has very high food value, in fact, is very nearly as nutritious as chicken or turkey. A pound of eggs, on the other hand, yields only half as much nourishment as a pound of lean beef notwithstanding a well-known popular theory.

The woman of 45 who owns to her age and could therefore presume to give advice to others was talking seriously to the comparatively young woman of 30, says an exchange. "Don't ever allow yourself to reach that stage of affability," she was saying, "at which people will call you a good fellow. I know that many a girl likes to have that reputation and men are likely to be attentive to the sort of girl who is called a good fellow. She is generally sure of having a good time. Men will take her out, always be glad to have her in a party, be very attentive to her at dances and make her seem like a belle. All these rewards come to the girl who is a good fellow. But I have rarely heard of a man who wanted to marry her.

Taking in view the northern states, including all from Ohio to the Dakotas, together with Missouri and Kansas, the rate of increase of population has fallen from 28 per cent. in the decade 1880-1890 to 18 per cent. in the last decade. The rate at present is accordingly below the average rate of increase for the entire union instead of above it as formerly. The agricultural prizes of the west have been won and population no longer flows to virgin lands to any large extent, whereas the manufacturing cities of the east still attract population. The central west yields the pace to the older sections of the east.

The census enumerators in many cases failed to realize the importance of mortality statistics. In one of the eastern states an enumerator had only two deaths in a population of more than 1,300 for the entire year, which the supervisor thought was not sufficient, so he sent back the returns. The enumerator responded with the following explanation: "Dear Sir: There were four more people that died, but they was widows."

A Washington man complained bitterly to the district commissioners of the pasting of advertising labels on loaves of bread, and wanted them to stop the practice, but the commissioners assured him that the official chemist's opinion was that the use of these labels on bread is in no way detrimental to health.

CONSUMPTION

Do not think for a single moment that consumption will ever strike you a sudden blow. It does not come that way.

It creeps its way along.

First you think it is a little cold, nothing but a little hacking cough; then a little loss in weight; then a harder cough; then the fever and the night sweats.

Better stop the disease while it is yet creeping. Better cure your cough today.

You can do it with

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

The pressure on the chest is lifted, that feeling of suffocation is removed, and you are cured. You can stop that little cold with a 25 cent bottle; harder coughs will need a 50 cent size; if it's on the lungs the one dollar size will be most economical.

"I confidently recommend Ayer's Cherry Pectoral to all my patrons. I am using it now in my own family. Forty years ago I feel sure it saved my life." A. S. EIDSON, M. D., Jan. 4, 1898. Fort Madison, Iowa.

WHAT THE LAW DECIDES.

An agent who forwards collections to a sub-agent and directs him to make any other use of the funds than an application thereof for the benefit of the principal is held, in Milton vs. Johnson (Minn.) 47 L. R. A. 529, liable to the principal for such misuse of the funds by the sub-agent.

Discretion in the surrogate to withhold commissions from an executor who has not given proper attention to his duties is held, in Rutledge (N. Y.) 47 L. R. A. 721, not to be denied by the code provision that the surrogate "must allow to him" certain commissions for his services.

A statute making it unlawful to permit the escape of natural gas into the open air from a well longer than two days after it is constructed is held, in state vs. Ohio Oil company (Ind.), 47 L. R. A. 627, to be constitutional and a decision to the same effect is rendered by the United States supreme court in 177 U. S. 190, 44 L. ed.

Any privilege that may exist by virtue of the common interest of the parties when a creditor is writing to his debtor, complaining of delay in the payment of the debt by a third person through a bank, is held, in Sullivan vs. Strahorn-Hutton-Evans Commission company (Mo.) 47 L. R. A. 859, not to extend to the imputation of evil motives and dishonesty to such third person.

Garnishment against an executor to reach a debt of the decedent before decree for distribution of assets is denied in Hudson vs. Wilber (Mich.) 47 L. R. A. 348, in the absence of statutory permission, although the debt has been placed in judgment in a suit revived against the executor. The numerous authorities on the question of garnishment of executor or administrator are reviewed in a note to this case.

Setting of a back fire without negligence by one whose property is threatened with imminent destruction by fire is held, in Owen vs. Cook (N. D.), 47 L. R. A. 646, not to make the owner liable for the destruction of the property of another person in case his acts add or contribute to its destruction, but the fire from which he seeks protect himself will be considered as the direct and proximate cause of the loss.

Italy's Railway System.

For ten or fifteen years the Italian government has built no new locomotives or rolling stock. Recently no fewer than 12 trains stopped, broken down, in one day. The cause of the government neglect is the system by which it owns the rolling stock and lends the use of it to private companies.—N. Y. Sun.

Indian Girl to the Fore.

In her report as superintendent of Indian schools Miss Reel emphasizes the vital importance of teaching the homemaking duties to every Indian girl, claiming this to be even more essential than the teaching of trades to the boys. As almost the only way of reaching the homes of the camp Indians is through the girls' school, and as they are to be the future wives and mothers the fate of the generations to come is in a large measure in their keeping. Therefore the opportunity for training them in the [illegible] of their future state should not be neglected. Since her appointment [illegible] she has spent 17 months in the field in inspecting the schools and ascertaining by personal observation the needs of the Indians and the service. She reports increased enrolment, better accommodations, greater facilities for industrial training and gratifying improvements over previous years. A strong plea is made for compulsory education.—N. Nice Little Hint from the Barber

A [illegible] was [illegible] in a barber's shop, and while being shaved casually remarked:

"I suppose a good many of your customers forget to pay?"

"No, sir," the barber replied. "There was a time when I used to give credit, but I never do now. In fact nobody asks for it any more."

"How's that?"

"Well, you see," said the barber, trying the edge of his razor on his thumb nail, "whenever I shaved a gentleman who asked me to mark it up I put a nick in his nose with my razor and kept tally that way. They very soon didn't want to run up bills."

There was a tremor in the customer's voice as he asked beneath the lather:

"Do you object to being paid in advance?"—N. Y. World.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation," were the startling words heard by Mrs. I. B. Hunt of Lime Ridge, Wis., from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. Gall stones had formed and she constantly grew worse. Then she began to use Electric Bitters, which wholly cured her. It's a wonderful stomach, liver and kidney remedy. Cures dyspepsia, loss of appetite. Try it. Only 50 cts. Guaranteed. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

The wheat crop of Pawnee county, Kan., is said to be greater this year than the entire crop of Indiana. Hundreds of machines are threshing; but the job is not likely to be finished before the middle of December.

World's Champion.

"I tried many remedies to cure piles," writes W. R. Smith of Latham, Ill., "but found no relief till I used Bucklen's Arnica Salve. I have not been troubled with piles since." It's the only champion pile cure on earth and the best salve in the world. 25c per box, guaranteed by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

THE BLACK FLAG

A NEW YEAR'S STORY.

By Opie Read.

A PHYSICIAN ordered Crandall to go south. "What for?" the young fellow spoke up, rather testily. "You forget that I was the successful center rush of—"

"Yes, I know all about that," the doctor broke in. "And I also know that in your great strength—in the over development of your muscles, there lies a danger. Go south for the winter and rest. You can afford it." And, acting upon the physician's advice, Crandall went down to the gulf coast of Mississippi and took up his abode at Ocean Springs, a place settled by the Spaniards many years before there was a New Orleans. He rented a cottage built high upon the pine wooded bluff, hired a negro cook and was soon at home with his guns and fishing tackle upon the walls. Some one asked him if he had brought any books with him and he answered: "No, I left them in the black shadow of the university. What I'm looking for is sunshine. And, by the way, yonder it is now, out in that boat." That, in fact, was not the name of a girl sitting in a boat not far out from the end of the pier on which Crandall and a newly-formed acquaintance were standing. It was not the name by which she was known among the neighbors, but a name which any stranger might have applied to her. Her hair, as it streamed in the breeze, was a waving flame, so golden was its hue; and when she stood erect, which she did at the moment Crandall spoke of her, she was a picture of a grace so true as might never be effaced from the mind.

"Who is she?" he asked of the man who stood beside him; and thus was he enlightened: "She is the granddaughter of an old fellow who lives in that queer-looking house up yonder, the one with the round tower. About here it is known, and he himself boasts of the fact, that he is the grandson of a famous French pirate who once infested the coast along here, and whose offenses were condoned by the government on account of services which he rendered Andrew Jackson's army. I don't know what her name is."

"I believe I'll row over and have a talk with her," said Crandall.

"You may do as you like, but the old man is dead set against any attentions that strangers pay her."

By this time Crandall was in his boat. The girl did not take notice of his approach—she paid not the slightest heed to him until he spoke, and then, turning toward him, she said: "I'm not acquainted with you."

"A fact which I acknowledge with regret," he replied.

"Oh, you do!" she said, giving him a full view of her wondrous eyes.

"Yes, and your name is—let me see. Isn't your grandfather a grandson of the Le-Feete—or whatever his name was—who robbed on the sea and built a fort on Lake Ponchartrain?"

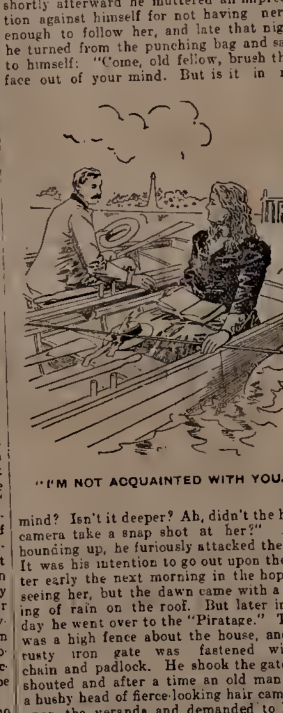
"You seem to have read history, at any rate."

"Yes, I have skimmed the most important events, and I can dip up a happening all right, but dates run through my skimmer. What are you trying to catch here?"

"Fish," she answered; and he replied: "I might have surmised as much;" and then she rejoined: "Oh, as to that, a man doesn't often take the trouble to surmise reasonably when his only object is to gain an opportunity to ask a question."

"By George, Miss Pirate, you are as sharp as your old ancestor," and when she had looked at him and laughed, for the remark did not displease her, he added: "It may be small concern to you, but we are neighbors. I live up yonder among the pines."

"Oh, you are the crazy man," she said, looking at him closer. He looked back at her in astonishment, and she explained: "That's what some of the folks believe. What else could they think of a man who hangs up a leather bag and hits it nearly all night?" He explained that he was merely taking exercise and she asked him why he didn't cut wood, and he replied that it would give him pleasure to make chips fly for her. She tried to frown at him, but laughed. They had been drifting along together. Now she took up the oars. He asked her what she was going to do, and she replied that she was going home, of course. He could not expect her to remain out there with a stranger. And, laughing, she rowed off from him; and shortly afterward he muttered an imprecation against himself for not having nerve enough to follow her, and late that night he turned from the punching bag and said to himself: "Come, old fellow, brush that face out of your mind. But is it in my mind? Isn't it deeper? Ah, didn't the heart camera take a snap shot at her?" And, bounding up, he furiously attacked the bag. It was his intention to go out upon the water early the next morning in the hope of seeing her, but the dawn came with a lashing of rain on the roof. But later in the day he went over to the "Piratage." There was a high fence about the house, and the rusty iron gate was fastened with a chain and padlock. He shook the gate and shouted and after a time an old man with a bushy head of fierce-looking hair came out upon the veranda and demanded to know the cause of such a disturbance at his gate. Crandall replied that no disturbance was intended, and then the old man asked him what he wanted. Crandall didn't know exactly what to say—he didn't care to blurt out that he wanted to see the girl, so he remarked: "Why, you see, we are neighbors, and—"



"I'M NOT ACQUAINTED WITH YOU."

"Oh, we are!" the old man broke in. "And if that's the case don't you think you ought to have waited for me to call first?"

"Well, yes," Crandall admitted, "that would have been more formal; but I am willing to dispense with formality."

"But I am not," said the old man, stepping inside and shutting the door; and as Crandall was about to turn away he thought he heard the music of a mischievous laugh. During all that day, and during nearly all the night he worried over the truth that the picture had been taken by his heart instead of his mind. The next morning he was on the pier when the sun arose and his eye swept the flashing water, but he did not see her; and after waiting until noontime he returned to the house to brood over her, to gaze inward at her picture, with hair streaming like a flame. Late in the afternoon he wandered by the wooded shore and suddenly he halted, with his heart beating hard, for there she sat beneath a pine tree, gazing out upon the quiet water. He halted, stood and looked at her, and she did not withdraw her eyes from the sleeping sea, for she had not heard him; but he stepped back, to retreat in the timidity that suddenly had come upon him; a twig snapped beneath his foot and she looked round.

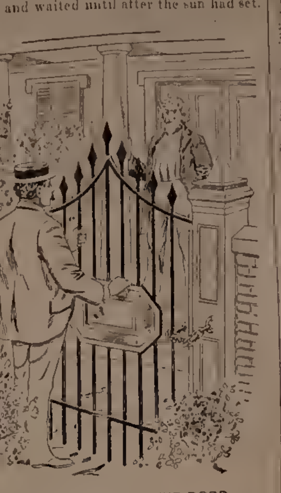
"I beg your pardon," said he; and she replied. "Oh, no, but I beg your pardon for laughing when you were driven away from our gate."

He sat down beside her and she made no objection. And they talked with a freedom that cut an hour short. At last a voice called her and she started up, declaring that she did not know it was so late. "He called you Marette," said Crandall. "It is a pretty name."

"Good-by," she said, running away from him.

"When may I see you again?" he called after her, and back came the words. "Oh, you mustn't think of that. Perhaps not at all."

He returned to the place the next afternoon and waited until after the sun had set.



THE OLD MAN AT THE DOOR.

She did not come. But the next day he found her reading in the woods. She was self-possessed, but this time she blushed when suddenly he appeared before her And now how soft were their accents, so different from the tone of raillery that had characterized their first meeting.

And thus they met, sometimes every day for a week, and then not at all for several days. She would never agree to an appointment, always leaving their meeting to chance. One day they sat gazing out upon the dreamy sea. "I had taken so severe a course in athletics that I had reason to believe that all emotion had been trained out of me," he said. "Violent exercise is sometimes an offset to strong mental—I might say heart emotion. But I find that with me this belief was all a fallacy." She looked at him as if she did not understand his meaning, and, though he knew she did, yet he pretended that he did not. "Have you been trying to feel strong emotion?" she asked. and he replied: "No, not trying to feel it." "I don't know what you mean," she said, and then he cried: "Oh, yes, you do," and he put his arms about her; and the hours flew and the sun sunk low and flamed upon the water, "like your hair spread out," he said. And then they heard the old man calling her. He was near at hand and he saw Crandall. "Here," said he, "I've got a word to say that may be of use to you. From this time on you will see the black flag of my ancestors flying from the tower on my house.' If you come on my land you will be shot, and if you attempt to influence any further the mind of this child I will hunt you and kill you."

"She is to be my wife," said Crandall.

"Then she is to be a bride and a widow at the same time," replied the old man. He led the girl away and Crandall went home and walked the floor all night; and when morning came he looked out and there was the black flag of the Ponchartrain pirates floating from the tower on the old man's house. He roamed about in the woods all day, but did not see the girl. And each morning there was the black flag, and there it was at night, a patch of deeper darkness against the dark sky; and one night, when lightning flashed, he saw it streaming, red, like a flame—like her hair. Once he ventured near the house, and a bullet nipped a bit of bark under a tree just above his head. Early one morning he stood on the pier waiting for the sun to rise, but, instead, a cloud and a wind arose, almost a hurricane. Suddenly he saw a sailboat near by, struggling hard, and then it was overturned and blown fast away, leaving a man struggling in the water—an old man, and Crandall thought that he recognized the girl's grandfather. He did not hesitate. He sprang into the sea, seized the old fellow and swam to shore with him; and, staggering upon the sand, he looked at Crandall and said: "You fool, why didn't you let me drown?"

Crandall went home and sat down to brood, with the black flag still in sight. It was the last day of the year. Early the next morning before it was light he went out and was standing near his door when a cloud lifted and the sun flashed: and then his heart leaped, for the black flag was gone. And just at that moment the old man, leading the girl by the hand, came round the corner of the house. "I have brought you a New Year's present," he said.

Little Tommy and his younger sister were going to bed without a light They had just reached the bottom of the stairs when Tommy, after vainly endeavoring to pierce the darkness turned round and asked:

"Ma, is it polite for a gentleman to precede a lady when they have to walk single file?"

"No, my son," replied the mother, "the lady should always take the lead."

"I thought so," said Tommy, delightedly; "go ahead, Sue."—Brooklyn Eagle.

MATTERS MILITARY.

In the British army 90,000 men have good-conduct badges.

This is the centenary year of the introduction of the rifle into the British service in South Africa.

An implement to be added to the soldier's kit, which can be used as spade, pick-ax or saw, and also as a shield for protection from bullets, has been invented by the earl of Wemyss. It is said that the contrivance is to be adopted by the British army.

The experience of the British in South Africa is said to have demonstrated the superiority of small horses to the larger as draft animals in the field of hostilities. They can go longer without food, it is said, can do just as much work and make a smaller target for the enemy.

RECORD OF THE PAST

No Stronger Evidence Can Be Had.

Look well to their record. What they have done many times in years gone by, is the best guarantee of future results. Anyone with a bad back; any reader suffering from urinary troubles, from any kidney ills, will find in the following evidence proof that relief and cure is near at hand:

Mr. Patrick O. Dwyer, mason, of 62 White street, New Haven, Conn, says: "In 1896 when Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of backache which always bothered me when I caught cold, which hurt me when I stooped, or straightened after stooping, which refused to disappear under treatment of different medicines, I was only too pleased to let the people of New Haven know the fact through our newspapers. Three years from that date, or in the month of May, 1899, I just as ardently recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as I did when they effected the cure mentioned above. My advice to anyone suffering from kidney complaint is, call at a drug store, procure Doan's Kidney Pills, take them as directed, and you will be surprised at the results."

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers, price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Cruel.

She was boasting of her latest conquest.

"The first thing I knew," she said, "he was at my feet."

"Who threw him over?" asked her dearest friend.

Of course it is well known that these little pleasantries are not unusual between feminine friends.—N. Y. World.

Impossible in His Case.

"Come, come, my boy, don't cry," urged the kindly old gentleman. "Doubtless your troubles are very real and serious to you, but you should be manly in adversity."

"I can't be," sobbed the boy.

"Why not?" asked the kindly old gentleman.

"Ma won't let me swear."—Chicago Post.

Rough on the Bay State.

A teacher in civil government had told his pupils that once in ten years the state of Massachusetts takes a census. Little James, who is an attentive scholar, upon being called up to recite, said:

"Once in every ten years Massachusetts comes to its senses."—N. Y. Tribune.

It Is Worth Remembering.

It's the man at the top of the ladder who can reach things," remarked the haughty representative of a noble family.

"True," remarked the sarcastic man in homespun, "but it is the man at the bottom who can upset the ladder." —Chicago Post.

"Never; you see we were members of the same choir before we married, and we got all over that by the time we were man and wife." — Yonkers Statesman.

Equestrian Item.

"Hawkins is very fond of his horse, isn't he?"

"Why, no; he hates him."

"That's queer. I saw him riding in the park the other day, and he had his arms about the animal's neck."—Tit-Bits.

You have read of the cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla and you should have perfect confidence in its merit. It will do you good.

Tortured a Witness.

Intense suffering was endured by Witness T. L. Martin of Dixie, Ky., before he gave this evidence: "I coughed every night until my throat was nearly raw; then tried Dr. King's New Discovery which gave instant relief. I have used it in my family for four years and recommend it as the greatest remedy for coughs, colds and all throat, chest and lung troubles. It will stop the worst cough, and not only prevents but absolutely cures consumption. Price 50c and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottles free at Albert C. Mason's drug store.

Broken Bric-A-Bracs.

Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, explains some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are to expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $3.75 a pound, and another cost $2.65 a gallon while a large share of the so called cements and liquid glue, upon the market are nothing more than 16 cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials. Major's cement retails at fifteen and twenty-five cents a bottle, and when a dealer tries to sell a substitute you can depend upon it that his only object is to make a larger profit The profit on Major's cement is as much as any dealer ought to make on any cement. And this is doubly true in view of the fact that each dealer gets his share of the benefit of Mr. Major's advertising which now amounts to $5000 a month, throughout the country. Established in 1876. Insist on having Major's. Don't accept any off hand advice from a druggist. If you are at all handy (and you will be likely to find that you are more so than you imagine) you can repair your rubber boots and family shoes, and other rubber and leather articles, with Major's rubber cement and Major's leather cement. And you will be surprised at how many dollars a year you will save. If your druggist can't supply you, it will be fowarded by mail; either kind. Free of postage.

IN THE WINTER.

(Benson's Plaster Is Pain's Master.)

For coughs and colds Benson's Porous Plasters are an incomparably better remedy than any other—external or internal. Their medicinal properties enter the skin and go straight to the seat of the disease.

They relieve and cure a "seated" cold without disturbing the system or upsetting the stomach. Cough mixtures often nauseate. Benson's Plasters are medicinal in the highest degree, and quickest to act.

Placed on the chest or back or on both at once in serious cases, the good effect is felt immediately. The congestion yields, the cough abates and the breathing improves.

Lung or bronchial affections or kidney disease, are cured with the least possible suffering and loss of time.

Benson's Plasters are immeasurably superior to Belladonna, Strengthening, Capsicum or any other combination in plaster form. They are also preferable to ointments, liniments and salves.

Benson's Plasters have received fifty-five highest awards over all competitors; and more than 5,000 physicians and druggists have declared them to be one of the few trustworthy household remedies. For sale by all druggists, or we will prepay postage on any number ordered in the United States on receipt of 25c. each.

Be sure you get the genuine. Accept no imitation or substitute.

Fossil Fish in New Jersey.

In the blue shales of a valley a few miles from Montclair, N. J., are found fossil fish of a kind which is almost extinct, only three specimens now surviving. They belong to the order of ganoids, which possessed no interior bony skeleton, but only an outside covering of bony or cartilaginous plates. They were the earliest known vertebrates. A number of excellent specimens show distinctly the shining, bony scales of this peculiar species of fish which, according to geologists, must have existed ages ago. The term ganoid was applied because of the form of the scales, which in most species are angular, square or rhomboidal, as seen in the common garpikes. They lived during the later part of the Jura-Trias period, which is placed at 4,000,000 years ago. At that time the entire state of New Jersey, except a strip of highlands in the northern part, was submerged under the Atlantic, and the southern Atlantic states were all under water.—Indianapolis News.

Freemasonry in the Middle Ages.

The freemasons were one of the innumerable trade guilds of the middle ages, each of which had its oaths, its passwords and its symbolic drama bearing on the theory and practice of the craft. The builders held the place of honor among these guilds because their work was the noblest. The nameless architects of those majestic cathedrals which shine out like jewels on the dark side of medieval anarchy and ignorance were master masons who had gone through precisely the same ordeal that every freemason goes through to-day.—Chicago Chronicle.
